IV. "CITIZEN" OBREGON.

I met Obregon two days before he fled from Mexico City, declaring himself in open rebellion against the authority of President Carranza.

At the time of my arrival in Mexico Obregon was campaigning for his election in distant States of the republic. Several friends of mine, who are enthusiastic followers of the General, were anxious to have me meet and hear their idol. "As soon as Obregon comes back," they said, "we'll arrange a luncheon or dinner so that you two men may meet and 'now each other."

As a matter of fact, Obregon did not return; he was forcibly brought back to the capital by Carranza, who decided to try him for complicity with the rebels who had been in arms for some time against the Government. This was an effective means of putting an end to the campaign of insults and threats that Obregon had been conducting in various States.

The forcible return of Obregon to Mexico City caused great excitement among the people of the capital and stirred their curiosity even more.

"What next?" they asked. "Will the old man have courage enough to send Obregon to jail and put him out of the running in that way? Will Obregon start a revolution to preserve his personal liberty?"

And when many were asking themselves these questions with a certain anxiety, fearing the consequences of a final break between the master Carranza and his old pupil Obregon, my Obregonista friends came to notify me that they had arranged my interview with their hero.

"The General expects you to take luncheon with him tomorrow," they told me.

Luncheon with the National Hero.

I had insisted that the luncheon take place in a public restaurant, in full view of everybody, to avoid the possibility of false interpretations. If the luncheon were given in a private house to many people it might seem that I had a certain predilection for Obregon. There was no reason whatever why I should figure as a Carranzista or an Obregonista. My wishes were more than amply fulfilled. The luncheon was held in the Bac, the most centrally located restaurant in the capital. To make it even less secret, it was decided to have it in the main dining room, near the orchestra platform, rather than in a private room.

Obregon was at that time a personage in disgrace. It was true that he might rise again at any moment, but it was equally possible that he might be down for the full count. He had enthusiastic friends, but he had also against him "old man" Carranza, an enemy of tenacious hatreds and indomitable energy. The mysterious hour when public opinion shakes off its inertia and swings unexpectedly to one side or the other had not yet struck. The timid were still holding aloof; the crafty were making their calculations, but had not yet succeeded in dispelling their own doubts.

Obregon was still an unknown quantity. If you sided with him you might climb to a position in the Cabinet, but you also might walk to a place in front of the firing squad. The shrewd ones were waiting for the atmosphere to clear a little, and Obregon could count only on his personal following, the friends who had been faithful to him through thick and thin. The men who watch the trend of events from a point of vantage and eagerly await the psychological moment to rush to the succor of the sure winner had not yet heard the call.

The Disconcerting Obregon.

When I entered the restaurant I saw Obregon sitting at a table with a friend to whom he was explaining the fine points of a cocktail which the General himself had invented. The reader

Report Brusiloff Now Supreme in Moscow in Place of Lenin

LONDON, Wednesday, May 19. — General Alexis Brusiloff, former Commander in Chief of the Russian Armies, has, for the time being, virtually assumed the supreme authority, formerly wielded in the Soviet Government by Lenin and other people's commissaries, according to a statement printed this morning by the Daily Telegraph.

This would seem to confirm a recent dispatch to The Associated Press that the military authorities in Russia were about to assume the powers formerly held by civilian officials of the Bolshevist régime in Moscow.

Rumors that a military coup had been sprung at the Russian capital have been current for several days.

PALMER LEADING IN PENNSYLVANIA

State Committee Asserts Entire Delegation Will Be for Attorney General.

OLD GUARD SLATE AHEAD

General Wood Leads in Vermont —Has 70 Per Cent. of Vote, Third of State Heard From.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, May 19.—At midnight returns from the State-wide primary election in Pennsylvania were coming in slowly because of the large number of candidates on the several party ballots. Returns from 294 out of the 7,118 districts in the State showed that the majority of the twelve slated by the regular Republican organization were leading for delegates at large. They were not instructed, but are understood to favor Governor Sproul as first choice for the nomination for President. Charles L. Biddle, who is supported by the Wood League of Pennsylvania, was running close up to the Republican slate.

Returns from 316 districts in the State show that Joseph F. Guffey, candidate for the Democratic National Committee, has 4,758 votes to 3,538 for Eugene C. Bonniwell. Guffey was supported by the friends of Attorney General Palmer. The Democratic State Headquarters at Harrisburg at midnight asserted that the entire delegation of 76 would be for Palmer for President and also asserted that the entire State ticket placed in the field by the Palmer wing would be nominated.

Returns from 477 districts out of 7,118 in the State gave Mayor Babcock of Pittsburgh 15,568; Mayor Moore, Philadelphia, 14,031; Senator Penrose, 13,514, and Governor Sproul 13,700 for Republican delegates at large. They are on the regular slate.

W. Freeland Kendrick in the same districts received 11,477 and Charles C. Biddle 10,901.

Rectors in Pennsylvania have the privilege of indicating their Presidential preference, but only one name, that of Edward Randolph Wood, a retired business man of Philadelphia, appears on the Republican ballot, and only that of Attorney General Palmer is on the Democratic Presidential preference ballot. The faction opposing Mr. Palmer in Pennsylvania has asked its supporters to write the name of William G. McAdoo on the ballot.

There are numerous fights for places in the Republican delegation, the contests being over personal than Presidential preferences. There are twelve delegates at large to be elected and fifteen candidates were nominated. The Republican State organization has slated twelve and attempts are being made by the Vare faction in Philadelphia to break the slate.

Delegates in Pennsylvania are not instructed, but it is understood that all fifteen are for Gov. Sproul for first choice for President and some of them are announced for Leonard Wood for second. A majority of the sixty-four district delegates are understood to be for Sproul first, with a number favoring Leonard Wood for second choice. The Democratic faction opposing Palmer is headed by Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell of Philadelphia. He is a candidate for member of the Democratic National Committee from Pennsylvania in opposition to Joseph F. Guffey of Pittsburgh, supported by Mr. Palmer.

TWO IRISH SENATES ARE NOW PROPOSED TO SPEED HOME RULE

One Body for Ulster and Another for South Suggested by Ministry.

AMERICAN ACTION RESENTED

ULSTER PROJECT DEFEATED

LONDON, May 18 (Associated Press)—The Home Rule debate in the House of Commons today had two important results: First, the Government's concession of two Senates, for Northern and Southern Ireland, respectively; and second, the decision of the Labor Party, announced by John Robert Clynes, to vote against the first clause of the bill and thereafter to take no part in the discussion, following the example of the Nationalists and, to a certain extent, of the Independent Liberals. Henceforth, therefore, the bill will meet with serious opposition only from the Government side of the House.

Mr. Clynes' motion to eliminate Clause 1, which is an essential part of the bill, was rejected by a vote of 218 to 61, the minority comprising Laborites, Independent Liberals and a few Unionists. Mr. Clynes explained that the Labor Party's resolve not to participate further in the debate did not have as its motive a desire to embarrass the Government, but was due to its conviction of the utter hopelessness of this bill's solving the Irish problem.

Many of the members had voiced their preference for one or two Senates instead of the proposed Central Council, and the discussion of the amendment proposing two Senates gave the Government the opportunity desired. Walter Hume Long, First Lord of the Admiralty and member of the Cabinet Committee on Ireland, explained that the Government was aiming at the creation of a Federal system for Great Britain and Ireland as the best security for the minorities, with the central Parliament in London, but had not yet decided whether the Senate would be nominative or elective. He therefore proposed that the amendment under discussion should be withdrawn and said that the Government would introduce its own plan later. This course was adopted.

It was in the course of this discussion that Major Gen. Seeley expressed the hope that Mr. Long's plan would not involve delay in the bill, which might be fatal to British relations, not only with America, but with the British dominions.

Another amendment, moved by Lord Robert Cecil, proposed the exclusion of Ulster altogether from the bill, so that it could remain part of the United Kingdom. The Government opposed the amendment, which was strongly supported by Sir Edward Carson, who, mentioning the possibility of "Sinn Fein Ireland" attacking Ulster, appealed to the Government to consider even at this late date whether the proper course would not be to allow Ulster to be governed from England, so that in the case of certain eventualities England would have "a jumping-off place."

This amendment was rejected, 204 to 80.

Important changes in the Government's policy in Ireland were decided upon as a result of the conferences between Viscount French, Major Gen. Macready and the Government officials in London last week and the experiences of Sir Hamar Greenwood, the Irish Secretary, in Dublin, according to an article which will appear in The London Times tomorrow. The Government, says the article, was so impressed with the gravity of the situation that it resolved to use every weapon in the armory of the State to crush the terror before it was too late.

"On the other hand," continues The Times, "the restrictions which irritate

Ask Wilson to Call League Next November in Brussels

ROME, May 18.—The Council of the League of Nations has sent a message to President Wilson requesting him to convoke the League of Nations next November at Brussels. It is pointed out that Geneva is not ready to receive the Assembly.

The Council has decided to address a note expressing its appreciation to all voluntary associations throughout the world, especially America, which favor supporting the league and influencing public opinion in favor of that organization.

The council appointed a permanent commission on armaments to formulate regulations.

FRENCH STRIKERS HAD SOVIETS READY

FINANCED BY RUSSIAN REDS

PARIS, May 18.—Soviet rule in France was to have been established if the revolutionary strikes started on May 1 had succeeded, according to the French police, who said today that they had obtained complete evidence of this from documents they had seized.

The bulk of this evidence, the police assert, was found among the papers seized at the residence of Boris Souvarine, a Socialist editor, who was arrested yesterday on the charge of having plotted against the safety of the State. Other evidence, it is stated, was found at the home of Etienne Lévêque, one of the secretaries of the Federation of Railroad Men, who was arrested yesterday morning.

The police say that seven Soviets had been established and were awaiting the success of the strikes to blossom forth as local governments in Orléans, Tours, Brest, Bordeaux, Marseilles, Strasbourg and Paris, ready to take up the leadership and control of affairs had the strikes proved effective.

Plotters Face Arrest.

The secretary to Police Inspector Charles Ducrocq declared this afternoon that he had sufficient evidence to cause the arrest of ten or twelve of the extremist leaders on charges of plotting against the internal security of France, under Article 58 of the Criminal Code, the article invoked in the prosecution of former Premier Caillaux.

Diamonds, rubies and sapphires from Moscow, and bank accounts showing huge deposits of rubales in Copenhagen banks for Souvarine and Charles Rappoport, one of the leaders of the extremist movement in France, are reported to have been unearthed by the police.

Rappoport, who was a candidate for the Chamber of Deputies in the November elections, said today that he expected to be arrested and declared that it was true that the aim of the May Day strikes was the overthrow of the existing rule in France.

"Why should we not use Bolshevist gold when British and French gold is used to fight us in Russia?" said Rappoport. "I accuse Jouhaux (President of the General Federation of Labor) of having sold us into the hands of the Government. Jouhaux is a reactionary bourgeois. We are revolutionary Socialists."

Jouhaux Accused of Treachery.

Rappoport charged that Jouhaux had called strikes which were doomed to failure in order to serve the Government.

"The movement was not ready," he continued. "The revolution which we are all seeking is not yet ripe. Jouhaux worked for Steeg (Jules Steeg, Minister of the Interior). We have avowedly espoused Bolshevik opinions. I do not seek to hide them, but rather wish to proclaim them. Revolution must come, but we picked out the wrong time. The Republic is not yet ready.

"I shall be arrested this afternoon and have already reserved my room at La Santé Prison, but the movement will go on."

While Rappoport was talking two special service men were hovering about keeping a close eye on him. According to the police the diamonds and other precious stones from Moscow were smuggled into France through Dieppe and Boulogne and placed on the French market through a precious stone exchange in the Rue Lafayette, which caused the police to take notice. Rappoport, however, declared that he had nothing to do with any gems. "I had an offer of 10,000,000 rubles for propaganda purposes when I was in Switzerland, but I refused it," he said. "I wish now I had accepted it."

Fifteen arrests of anarchists and Bolsheviki were made this morning. The break between the revolutionary strikers and the Federation of Labor is becoming greater. The federation, it is announced, will call off the strikes at its meeting tomorrow. It will refuse to continue to be identified with the extremists, but will make a stand against the Government's dissolution order for the purpose of showing that the accusation of the extremists that the federation itself requested the Government to dissolve it is unfounded.

In Government quarters it is expected the situation will become normal by Thursday.

The gas workers of Paris met this morning and voted to resume work Wednesday. They declared that they had answered the call of the General Federation of Labor and would now devote their energies to obtaining the reinstatement of the men dismissed. Gas workers of the provinces have been authorized by their federation to return to work tomorrow.

RUSH FREIGHT CARS TO EAST AND WEST TO END CONGESTION

EMBARGOES LIKELY TODAY

BIG DROP IN COAL OUTPUT

Union Leader Charges Roads with Diverting Cars to Collieries Where They Have Contracts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Solid trains of empty freight cars were being rushed eastward and westward across the continent today in an effort to relieve the traffic congestion, the Interstate Commerce Commission announced tonight. Empty box cars were hurried from New England and the Atlantic Coast to the grain sections, while empty coal cars were dispatched from the Middle West to the coal fields in the East.

This direct slash at the gordian knot was made by Commissioner Clyde Aitchison, who is in charge of the car service movement and who, sitting at his desk with all the powers of a general in the field, received reports today from the commission's hundred inspectors making a nation-wide survey of the situation.

Further important steps are expected tomorrow, among them an embargo on non-essential freight so that foodstuffs and fuel may be expedited. It is not believed that any general embargo upon certain classes of freight will be imposed upon the whole country, but that drastic action will be taken in centres where the congestion is greatest.

Officials of the American Railway Executives' Association held consultations today with the commission and were in constant touch with Mr. Aitchison and his assistants. At a meeting tomorrow detailed suggestions will be made to the commission by railroad men representing various sections.

That the commission intends to use its full powers under the transportation act was indicated in a statement issued late today by the commission, which said:

"Measures are under way for an intensive local study of the congested areas in important terminals and gateways, where, owing to the continuance of extremely unfavorable labor conditions and shortage of man power, or for other causes, the free movement of traffic is obstructed. This will permit the exercise of the emergency powers of the commission as to local situations in appropriate ways.

"There has been a general response by the State Railway and Public Service Commissions to the request of the Interstate Commerce Commission for information as to the conditions in each State. The State Commissions are tendering the services of their inspectors to co-operate with those of the Interstate Commission in the present emergency."

Tie-Up Worse a Month Ago.

It was learned today that while the present congestion is acute, it is not actually as bad as it was a month ago. The peak of the strain was reached April 15, when the number of cars moved daily was lowest and the number necessary to move higher than at any time since the congestion began. Since that time there has been a freer movement, but the railroads have not been able to "catch up."

Telegrams received today show that Pittsburgh, Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, St. Louis, Kansas City and Cincinnati are all in a critical condition. The railway yards are undermanned, thousands of cars are standing loaded and unloaded on the rails, and traffic can neither get in nor out of the yards. Grain, steel, coal, lumber, foods and all the great necessities of life and industry are cut off. The Lake district alone is said to be 1,000,000 tons of coal short on deliveries, which means suffering next Winter and the crippling of industry. Reports of manufacturing plants shutting down or running on half time are frequent.

There was some talk today of curtailing passenger traffic, although the Interstate Commerce Commission does not take to this idea very kindly. However, if the worst comes, the commission will not hesitate to cut down the passenger schedules, so officials asserted.

Farmers asked the commission through the Farmers' National Council today to pool all terminals and railway equipment in order to relieve the tension. A letter from the council to the commission, in part, reads:

"The car shortage has reached a dangerous state and threatens not only the farming interests but most of the other business interests of the country. Vast quantities of grain are held in country elevators, and the fact that cars cannot be secured to move this grain is not only causing the farmers serious immediate financial loss, but it is discouraging them from further production, although the threatened food shortage is the most serious in the world's history.

"In our judgment merely to issue priority orders on freight will not meet the situation. The car shortage is mainly due to the ending of unified operation by the return of the railroads to the owners. The pooling of equipment and the joint or common use of

Retail Clothing Chiefly Affected by Cuts in West; Freight Congestion and Tight Money Cited as Causes

CHICAGO, May 18.—A wave of price cutting in retail clothing costs reaching from the Mississippi Valley to the Pacific Coast was reported today. Dispatches from twenty-four cities in that territory told of promised reductions in these necessities ranging from 15 per cent. to minus profit.

Financial authorities here said that the indications were that the price decline would be limited to ready-to-wear clothing, principally women's garments and silks. Shoes were in the list affected.

Tight money and inadequate transportation facilities were cited among the prime reasons for the movement. Delays in the delivery of goods in which much money had been tied up, together with the inability of farmers to get grain and live stock to market, were said to have worked a hardship on merchants in many instances.

An officer of a leading department store of Chicago declared that the price reduction now being reported meant also that merchants were trying to satisfy what he called "a hysterical demand from the public for lower prices." These current reductions, he said, might be only temporary.

A financial authority here said that if the reports of price cutting were to be depended upon, they indicated a tendency toward a reduction in inventories. Though this might be temporary, he said that it was undoubtedly good in that it suggested that merchants were going ahead more cautiously.

CREDIT STRINGENCY HITS LIBERTY BONDS

Belief That Reserve Banks Will Advance Rediscount Rates Speeds Liquidation.

The unusual credit stringency prevailing all over the country was graphically reflected in the market for Liberty bonds and Victory notes yesterday when these securities were offered in greater volume than on any previous day of the year and prices fell rapidly, all but the first 3½ per cents. scoring new low records. Selling orders poured in from many places, coming in lots ranging from the $50 and $100 bonds to big blocks of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Reports from out of town said that merchants and manufacturers everywhere were experiencing difficulty in obtaining bank loans, and even extensions of old loans, and were selling their war bonds in an effort to provide funds for carrying on their business. A collateral reason for the wholesale liquidation was said to be the widespread belief that the several Federal Reserve Banks, which are now charging rediscount rates of 6½ per cent. for loans on war bonds and Treasury certificates, will this week or next advance these rates to 6 per cent. As any advance of this kind probably will be passed along to the borrowers from the member banks, a good part of yesterday's selling was thought to be in anticipation of this expected move by the Federal Reserve system.

Not only were prices depressed greatly yesterday, but the volume of the selling was greater than at any previous time this year. The total yesterday for all classes of Liberty and Victory issues was $27,958,500, which was larger than the total of business for any day since December 30, last, when the so-called "tax selling" brought out a total of $33,156,000. The largest sales in individual classes of Liberties were in the Second and Fourth 4¼ per cents., a total for the former amounting to $8,744,000, while of the latter there were $8,724,000 par value to change hands on the Stock Exchange.

Investment Returns Large.

The investment returns on war bonds at yesterday's closing prices were, naturally, greater than ever before. What bond men call the "yields" were above 5 per cent. in all cases except in the First 3½ per cents., which are long-term and fully tax exempt. These bonds showed a yield of 4.10 per cent. at the closing bid price of 90.90. But in the case of the Victory 4¾ per cent. notes the yield at the closing bid price was 6.48 per cent., while the Liberty Third 4¼s, which closed at 86.60, showed a yield of 6.30 per cent.

	Sales.	Closing.	Yield.
Liberty First 4½s	55,000	84.50	5.32
Liberty Second 4½s	6,744,000	85.20	5.57
Liberty Third 4½s	5,265,000	86.60	6.30
Liberty Fourth 4¼s	8,724,000	83.10	5.78
Victory 3½s	1,949,000	94.92	5.42
Victory 4¾s	2,896,000	95.20	6.48
Total	$27,958,500.

Wall Street bankers received many reports yesterday which illustrated the very marked stringency of credit accommodation in all parts of the country. These reports told in detail of the hardships which have been entailed by the railroad strike and the congestion of freight and commodity shipments in many sections, and of how these inter-

BANKERS TO HELP REDUCE PRICES

TO CHECK USE OF CREDIT

But Gov. Harding Says Board Will Deal with Profiteers "In Another Way."

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Bankers of the country, through representatives attending a conference today with the Federal Reserve Board, pledged themselves to help the board in a drive on high prices and to aid in efforts at deflation.

Specifically, the bankers agreed unreservedly to support the board's new policy in discouraging "habitual and unnecessary borrowings" and to seek curtailment of "long-standing, non-essential loans" as an initial step toward ending the era of high prices and speculation.

Governor Harding set forth the board's policy in a speech designed to clarify the general situation and to explain the Government's views. He warned of impending dangers in the cycle of continued borrowings and speculation, and appealed to bankers and public alike to be conservative in their demand for banking credit.

"It is evident," Mr. Harding said, "that the country cannot continue to advance prices and wages, to curtail production, to expand credits and attempt to enrich itself by non-productive operations and transactions without fostering discontent and radicalism, and that such a course, if persisted in, will eventually bring on a real crisis."

Mr. Harding said that "everything must be done" to expedite the release of money in "frozen loans" and in commodities held either for speculative purposes or because of lack of transportation, and urged bankers to use the utmost discrimination in granting new loans. Reports laid before the conference by the Federal Advisory Council, directors of the Federal Reserve Banks and by a committee representing the American Bankers Association were to the effect that inflation has continued to some extent since the flotation of the Victory Loan last May.

"Progress toward the restoration of normal relationship between the volume of goods and the volume of credit," said Mr. Harding, "may be made by reducing credit more rapidly than production is diminished or by increasing production at a greater rate than credit is expanded. If it should prove impracticable in the existing circumstances to increase essential production, then we must through economy in consumption and through moderation in the use of credit check the tendency toward a further widening of the margin between goods and credit.

"Our problem, therefore, is to check further expansion and to bring about a normal and healthy liquidation without curtailing essential production and without shock to industry, and, as far as possible, without disturbing legitimate commerce and business."

The Federal Reserve Banks, Mr. Harding declared, could do much in the direction of curtailing credits of member banks by informing them of the normal amounts they could borrow from the reserve institutions. He asserted that this would compel the individual banker to examine carefully all applications for loans.

Puts Expansion at $11,000,000,000.

This, Mr. Harding declared to be one of "the disquieting features" of the present situation. He asserted that the expansion of banking credit, "properly attributable to the war," was about

REDUCTIONS WIDESPREAD

EXTENDS TO AUTOMOBILES

VARIOUS REASONS GIVEN

A price-cutting wave of considerable proportions is developing throughout the country and in some cities is resulting in very sensible reductions of the cost of living.

Dispatches from as far east as Boston and as far west as San Francisco tell of decreases of prices by merchants in a wide range of goods.

Freight congestion and tight money are cited in some places as reasons for the movement, while in other instances it is stated that public buying has slackened and thus the merchants were led to act.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 18.—Bargain hunters are thronging the big stores here to take advantage of greatly reduced prices. Many of the department stores are announcing reductions of from 20 to 50 per cent.

All the local newspapers are printing huge display advertisements of special sales. One large firm in announcing their sale states that it is "something we have never done before and probably never will do again. "Each item selected for this sale must be marked down to a price at least 30 per cent. less than its original price," says the announcement, and, excepting certain items marked down 25 per cent., articles already marked down are further reduced at least 15 per cent. So the total markdown equals at least 30 per cent.

Shoe stores are also announcing reductions. Business done by the retail establishments is increasing, although the general attitude of the public appears to be that of "watchful waiting" for still further reductions.

Clothes Cheaper in Buffalo.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, May 18.—A tendency to lower prices has been apparent recently in many retail lines here. This is particularly true in men's clothing, many retailers offering goods at reductions of 20 to 40 per cent. from the quotations of a few weeks ago. One retail clothing store announces sweeping reductions, saying they are made necessary by popular agitation against high prices. The owners of this store are under indictment on charges of profiteering.

Fellow Wanamaker in Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 18.—The high cost of wearing clothes, shoes, hats and other sartorial necessities has received a severe jolt in Philadelphia in the last two weeks. The tumbling of prices began when John Wanamaker announced his cut in prices.

Wanamaker has been followed by other department stores, and some of his competitors have announced cuts as deep as 35 per cent. under market prices.

"Dollar Day" in Baltimore.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 18.—Within the last two weeks department stores here have been in keener competition than at any time since the war. One of the largest concerns made a 20 per cent. reduction on all sales, and other stores fell into line.

Department stores have established "dollar day," which occurs once a week. During certain hours all sorts of articles are sold for a dollar, which on other occasions would bring from $2 to $4.

No general relief, however, from high prices have been brought about by these inducements.

Starting Down in Pittsburgh.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, May 18.—For several days now advertisements of the large department stores have contained statements that all goods were being sold at 25 per cent. reduction from former prices, but these have not attracted special attention. This, it was stated tonight, was the beginning of a movement similar to the one adopted in Omaha, New York and Philadelphia.

"It must not be presumed that we in Pittsburgh can or will bring prices down at such a jump as has been the case in Omaha and New York," said a merchant today, "because we have not been so high. However, you may say that at least a 25 per cent. reduction in all lines of goods is being gradually

Gov. Smith Vetoes Firemen's Platoon Bill; Declares Cities Cannot Meet Added Cost

ALBANY, May 18.—Governor Smith today vetoed the two platoon measure applying to firemen in first, second and third class cities, chiefly because no legislative provision was made by any of the cities of the State to meet the cost of the initiation of such a system. The Governor pointed out that twenty-two cities had a two-platoon system, and that of the thirty-six which had adopted it twenty-five were limited in their taxing powers either by charters or special acts, and that sixteen were unable to raise another dollar by taxation.

"If this bill were to become a law," said the Governor, "twenty-two cities would either have to reduce their fire fighting forces, reduce the salaries, or curtail or probably abolish some other necessary municipal activity."

"I am informed by the Secretary of the Mayors' conference that, right up to the very last day of the session, assurance was given that this bill would not be passed, and for that reason no effort was made on behalf of the cities to secure the legislation necessary to put them in a position to carry it into effect," said the Governor. "I am further informed by the Mayors' conference that in several cities the firemen were offered their choice between an increase in salary and the adoption of a two-platoon system, and that the firemen preferred the increase in salary, and the increases were actually granted.

"From this it will be seen that, however desirable a two platoon system may be for the promotion of the health and efficiency of firemen, obstacles which cannot be overcome make it impossible, because of the manner in which the legislation was advanced. Had sufficient notice been given by the early passage of this bill—which was introduced on March 4, seven weeks before adjournment—the cities could, by charter amendment or special act, have increased their taxing capacity in order to meet the changes sought to be brought about by its provisions. As the matter now stands the State would be forcing upon the cities an obligation which, from the very nature of things, they cannot discharge."

John J. O'Reilly, Secretary of the Uniformed Firemen and Policemen's Protective Association for New York City, assailed the Governor for his action in a statement issued here tonight. He charged that the Governor, when a candidate, approved the two platoon system, and thereby gained many votes.

An official of the Pittsburgh Retail Merchant Dealers' Association intimated tonight that an announcement would be made by the end of the week that will go a long way toward starting prices down.

Drug Stores Cut in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, May 18.—Prices in general commodities here are coming down. Several department stores have already made drastic reductions in the cost of wearing apparel, especially in women's and men's clothing. Two chains of drug stores here, one a local and the other a national corporation, have slashed deeply into the cost of toilet articles and are selling below cost price goods that are nationally advertised at a set price.

One firm has cut the cost of wearing apparel 50 per cent. Cravats, silk shirts, hosiery and other articles that would be termed luxuries are now selling at prices that have been reduced at least 25 per cent. Clothing is being sold at one-third the price of the same quality a half year ago.

Hold Out in St. Louis.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, May 18.—Prominent clothing dealers today asserted that there would be no decrease in the price of clothing at this time and that goods bought for Fall would sell at an increase. Department store managers say there will be no general reduction in merchandise but that certain commodities are selling at reduced prices because popular demand for them has slumped.

Despite this, there has been an undeniable trend toward lower prices for wearing apparel in St. Louis. Some shops are selling silk shirts at half the prices asked a month ago, and shoes show reductions. Persons familiar with the situation say that St. Louis will be one of the last cities to see reductions.

Omaha Cuts Automobiles.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, May 18.—The price-cutting fever promises to continue for an indefinite period. A number of new stores entered the price-slashing contest today and still others are promised as entries for tomorrow.

One of the lines on which prices were cut today was automobiles. In tomorrow morning's advertisements the Franklin automobile has cut prices on touring cars $250 and on closed cars the slash is $400. Other automobile dealers are said to be getting ready to make reductions. One dealer is said to have $250,000 worth of cars in storage and no market. The refusal of banks to lend money for the purchase of automobiles, regardless of security offered, is said to have seriously affected the automobile market.

Another line which suffered heavy reductions was diamonds. Last week diamonds were selling around $600 per carat. Today they are quoted at $420 in one big store. All sorts of jewelry, watches, rings and precious stones dropped 30 per cent. in this store, the owners saying they will stand a loss in order to make the assertion that not a single article in the store is being withheld from the cut.

First Break in St. Paul.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, May 18.—The first break in high prices at St. Paul is promised for tomorrow, when Stronge & Warner, wholesale milliners, who do a wholesale trade throughout the United States and who operate 100 retail stores in the Northwest will put into effect a new schedule 30 per cent. below former figures. Mr. Joseph Stronge said:

"The reduction is being made because business is such that our firm will be unable to dispose of its stock unless some radical action is taken.

"No sane business man can continue to think that the people can keep on buying goods worth $3 when they have but $2 with which to buy them." The Retail Merchants' Association is discussing the problem of how to meet the growing demand for lower prices, but is standing pat on present figures, and no general cut such as that at Omaha is expected.

Buying Slump in Detroit.

DETROIT, May 18.—While many clothing merchants here have reduced men and women's clothing from 20 to 30 per cent. and five of the larger stores carried advertisements of discount sales Monday and Tuesday, the downtown sections bore the appearance of a regular sales day. Merchants admit that the volume of business transacted during the last thirty days has fallen off to an alarming degree.

Smaller dealers say they are cutting prices on an average of 25 per cent. Dealers in men's clothing appear to be the greatest sufferers in the buying slump. Approximately 25,000 men are out of work in Detroit.

Prices Stay Up in Cleveland.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, May 18. — Cleveland merchants could see no sweeping reductions in commodity prices for this city today. They said individual stores were offering many special sales.

"I believe goods are being sold as close today as ever in the history of retailing in Cleveland," said Mr. L. Prouty. "I do not think prices will be sharply reduced in Cleveland," M. Heilman said.

Salt Lake Feels the Urge.

SALT LAKE CITY, May 18.—Men's clothing, millinery and women's apparel are being sold here at slightly reduced prices, but there is no sign of a reduction in food prices or shoes. Many of the big department stores are advertising "twenty per cent. off" sale, but there is no startling rush to get in on the bargains. The cut price sales have not stirred up competition among the merchants and most of the stores report normal business.

20 Per Cent. Cuts on Pacific Coast.

CHICAGO, May 18.—In Topeka, Kan., a men's clothing firm announced a "no profit" sale today, declaring that it would bank its promise at the end of the sale by letting the Fair Price Commissioner or a committee named by him take possession of its books and accounts.

Twenty per cent. cuts were the most popular. On the Pacific Coast Tacoma dealers announced cuts from 20 per cent. flat to "profitless sales," declaring that on some women's garments prices were cut virtually in half.

Three Seattle retailers cut clothing 20 per cent. In San Francisco one retailer has announced 20 per cent. cut in all lines, another 20 to 50 per cent. in certain commodities. At Everett, Wash., two men's stores announced 20 per cent. clothing cuts.

In York, Neb., a 20 per cent. cut in women's silk and woolen garments was made. In Wichita, Kan., silk shirts were reduced. Coffeyville, Kan., reported many cut price sales.

In Minneapolis a ladies' department store announced a general cut of 20 per cent. At Knoxville, Tenn., one of the city's largest department stores today made a general discount of 20 per cent. on its entire stock except a few contract price articles. Shoe reductions also were announced.

At San Antonio, Texas, two department stores announced sales with reductions of 20 per cent., another a 25 per cent. reduction sale. At Waco another department store announced it had knocked a fifth off its prices. An El Paso store cut shoes and clothing.

Movement Reaches Lexington.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 18.—Several large retail clothing firms have begun to advertise cuts in prices of men's wear equivalent to about a 10 per cent. reduction. Some women's wear stores are also preparing cuts up to 25 per cent. under the prices that have prevailed for the last three years. The tone of the advertisements indicates that further reductions are likely in the near future. The cuts are in staple, up-to-date stuffs.

Lexington merchants have been hampered by not receiving goods ordered through freight tieups and congestion, and there are no relatively large stocks of goods held, as compared with the usual supplies. Business is brisk with all stores well filled.

Denver Maintains Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, May 18.—According to local merchants no reduction in prices is contemplated here. If anything an advance is pending, according to notices received by Denver merchants from manufacturers. Denver merchants contend that they are selling on an average basis lower than Eastern merchants and cannot adopt such reductions as are being carried out in San Francisco, Omaha and other cities without loss.

"There is now a reduction in women's garments and silks because of overloading by manufacturers, coupled with a backward season which has left large stocks that are being sacrificed in readiness for the Fall business. But in every other line advance notices show increasing costs," said one merchant. "Every merchant in town is sacrificing profit on women's garments and silks."

Sharp Breaks in Louisville.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 18.—Sharp breaks in many lines of merchandise and in some of the actual necessities of life have followed breaks in the prices of cotton goods, woolens and silks, first noted last week. The most substantial drop is in women's wear, including nearly all garments and shoes and men's tailored clothing.

E. E. Durand, a dealer in women's goods, said lower prices in that line are inevitable because manufacturers are at a standstill, with hundreds of garments unsold.

One of Louisville's best-dressed men walked into a tailor shop where he has been buying his clothing for years and asked the price of a suit shown in the window. It was $50. "I believe I'll take that because it looks almost exactly like one you had in the window last week marked $60," the customer said. "Same suit—woolens are coming down," the tailor replied.

Clothing Cut in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Two large Washington stores, one dealing in men's furnishings and the other in women's clothing, announced flat reductions today of 20 per cent. in prices. One of the largest men's clothing stores in the city put into effect a 25 per cent. reduction several days ago.

Knoxville Follows Suit.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 18.—One of Knoxville's largest department stores today announced a 20 per cent. discount on its entire stock, except a few contract priced articles. A shoe store here has announced a similar reduction on its entire stock.

TO STOP FOOD HOARDING.

Governor Signs Act Giving State Control of Cold Storage Warehouses

ALBANY, May 18.—Prevention of hoarding of foodstuffs to force up prices is expected to be accomplished by the action of Governor Smith today in signing the Witter bill givin the State Council of Farms and Markets complete control over all cold storage warehouses in the State.

During Commissioner George Gordon Battle's investigation of the council, it was charged that the latter had done nothing to curb food profiteers. Dr. Eugene H. Porter, head of the Foods and Markets Division, replied that the council had no power over private cold storage warehouses, the law at that time only extending to public warehouses.

The Witter bill provides that after Oct. 1 next "No person, firm or corporation shall maintain or operate within this State any cold storage warehouse, except when such warehouse is used exclusively for the storage of nuts, fruits, cheese or vegetables, without a license to be issued by the State Department of Farms and Markets."

The license fee is fixed at $25. Monthly reports must be made and each article of food must be marked with the time it enters and leaves the warehouse, as well as branded with the words "cold storage." No article can remain in cold storage more than a year, and food once released cannot be returned to a warehouse.

Power is given to the Commissioner to seize and condemn any food deemed unfit for consumption. A new violation is made for every day food is kept in storage over the prescribed time.

GIMBEL BROS. ACCUSED.

PHILADELPHIA, May 18.—United States Commissioner Manley today issued warrants for members of the firm of Gimbel Brothers, the large department store operators here, charging them with violation of the Lever act.

The warrants call for the arrest of Jacob Gimbel, President; Ellis Gimbel, Vice President; Egbert Lough, Secretary; Maurice Gugenheim, Treasurer, and B. L. Symser, manager of the food department. The defendants will not be arrested, but will appear for a hearing tomorrow at the Federal Building.

Denial of profiteering was made by Ellis Gimbel, who said:

"Our food department has been run at a loss for the last ten years. Many of the foodstuffs are sold at cost, although I imagine we make a legitimate profit on a few luxuries. Unlike the average corner grocery, we have a delivery system for our food department, which also cuts into the profits. The average profit is so low as to be almost negligible."

Prices considered unreasonable, the affidavit of an agent of the Department of Justice states, were charged by the firm for sausage, tea and cocoa.

MOVES TO EMBARGO ALL SUGAR EXPORTS

WOMAN BROKER INDICTED

Mrs. Franzie De Silva Is Charged with Making Profit of Three Cents Per Pound.

An immediate embargo on exportation of sugar and the stopping of sales to non-essential industries in the United States is the only remedy for the present sugar shortage, according to Armin W. Riley, chief investigator of the Flying Squadron of the Department of Justice. Mr. Riley sent a telegram to the office of Attorney General Palmer in Washington yesterday embodying the suggestion for an embargo on exports and for control of supplies in this country.

Mr. Riley said that in the past four months 175,000 tons of sugar have been exported to Europe and vast amounts have been received here by confectioners and ice cream manufacturers. For several weeks agents of the Department have been investigating the sugar situation in this city, as well as at other points throughout the country. Mr. Riley said he based his conclusion on evidence obtained by men operating under his direction. Besides the embargo on exports, he suggested that the Department of Justice at Washington be vested with power to stop sales to non-essential industries.

A number of Mr. Riley's men have been calling on the refineries and warehouses in and around New York for statements of the actual amount of sugar in their possession. Similar work is being performed by Federal agents throughout the United States. Mr. Riley said yesterday that it is hoped soon to have a fairly accurate record of all the sugar in the United States.

Three indictments charging profiteering in violation of the Lever act were returned by the Federal Grand Jury before Judge Augustus N. Hand in the Federal District Court yesterday. Two indictments involve sugar sales and one charges profiteering in potatoes.

Mrs. Franzie De Silva, a broker of 25 Beaver Street, trading as the Belgium and France Export Company, is charged with having sold 3,540 pounds of sugar on May 3, to a broker, at a margin of profit of 3 cents a pound, when it is contended under the law she is entitled to only ¾ cent a pound. It is charged she bought the sugar at 24 cents a pound and sold it to the Paragon Sales Company at 27 cents.

Max Muller, released by a grocer at 15 West 100th Street, is charged with having sold on April 25 last 675 pounds of sugar, which he purchased at 17 cents a pound, to Samuel Hahn, a retail grocer of 366 West 117th Street, for 24 cents a pound. It is contended by the Government that Muller's profit should have been only 1 cent a pound.

There are two counts in an indictment brought against John McElroy, a produce dealer, in business at 330 Eleventh Avenue as John McElroy & Co. One count alleges that on April 10 last he sold 13,956 pounds of potatoes in sacks weighing 180 pounds, which he bought for $8.31 a sack, to James Butler, Inc., groceries, for $14 a sack. The second count charges that he sold to Semensky Brothers a small lot of potatoes, which he bought at $5.38 a sack, for $15 a sack.

MEAT LOWER, PACKERS SAY.

CHICAGO, May 18.—The wholesale price of meat has declined 16 per cent. during the last year, while the prices of nearly all other necessities have increased, according to the monthly bulletin of the Institute of American Meat Packers.

The decline in the price of beef between March, 1919, and March of this year averaged four cents a pound, the bulletin says. It further states that the following increases were recorded by other articles, while meat decreased:

Cloths and clothing, 64 per cent.; fuel and lighting, 14 per cent.; lumber and building material, 97 per cent.; house furnishing goods, 51 per cent. farm products, 5 per cent.; food, including meats, 21 per cent.; all commodities, combined, 28 per cent.

WALSH AND OWEN ASSAIL PROFITEERS

MOVES FOR SENATE INQUIRY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Profiteering was denounced in the Senate today by Senators Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts, and Owen, Democrat, of Oklahoma. The former asserted that the extortions of profiteers were the chief cause of widespread unrest and that Congress had been "culpably inactive" in attempting to relieve the situation, while Senator Owen assailed the Federal Reserve Board, charging that it had adopted a dangerous policy as to rates of interest.

Government competition in the sale of necessities as a remedy to bring down prices also was advocated by Senator Walsh. He said that although the people were resigned to high prices during the war, they now demand relief from "scandalous profit making."

"Conditions have grown worse," he said, "and it seems that a band of robbers infest the land. Combines and trusts, by tacit if not actual agreement, hold up their product for constantly increasing gain and ruthlessly exploit the buyers. The Government, outside of a few weak and insignificant threats, has not even attempted a solution."

He declared that Republican leadership and majorities in Congress were responsible for failure to enact anti-profiteering legislation. Continuing, he said:

Urges Income Tax Inquiry.

"Inaugurate a thorough examination of income tax returns by a committee of this Senate, so that the real extent of profiteering may be disclosed and chief offenders pointed out. Such an inquiry will give indisputable proof that the Government does not intend to keep secret any facts relating to profiteering."

Carrying out this suggestion, Senator Walsh introduced a resolution directing the appointment of a Senate committee of five, to learn the relation between high prices and the concentration of wealth, and requesting the President to allow the committee to look into the income tax returns of corporations and partnerships. He will call the resolution up for action tomorrow.

Senator Walsh urged immediate Congressional action on bills aimed at profiteering, among them the "Blue Sky" bills, the Kenyon-Kendrick and Gronna Packer bills, and the McNary bill making compulsory the stamping on shoes and other articles the prices paid to the manufacturer.

"Let Congress prove to the country that it stands ready and willing, and that it is determined promptly to inaugurate public trading unless profiteering ceases," continued the Senator. "There still remains to the people the right to set up Government competitors, and I believe if the Government would only demonstrate, as in the armor plate case, that it is willing to deal in necessaries, whenever profits become extortionate, we would discover a willingness on dealers' part to be satisfied with fair profits."

Red Revolt Not the Remedy.

No Red revolution is necessary to bring about better conditions, Senator Walsh said. He declared that those who insist that the American form of government does not present the facilities for dealing promptly and effectively with problems like the present one are wrong. He summarized the causes of the high cost of living, as follows:

"Our Government's policy during the war in throwing open our markets to the enormous demands by belligerents for munitions, foods and accessories in unheard of volume.

"Government competition with the people themselves, the Government becoming the greatest customer of all, and by its peremptory requirements causing further increases in prices."

In discussing the policy of the Federal Reserve Board, to which he said he was strongly opposed, Senator Owen said:

"Two ways are open for lowering prices. The best way is to increase commodities by stimulating both production and saving. The worst way is to raise interest rates, to deny credits, break up business, cause a panic and have bankrupt sales and cheap goods temporarily. The latter course may result if the banks all combine to raise rates and deny credits for productive and distributive purposes.

"The Federal Reserve Board in raising rates broadly are striking manufacturers, wholesalers, merchants, retailers, stockmen and farmers, who are not speculating and do not deserve punishment. The Reserve Board is justified in encouraging a denial of credit for purely speculative purposes and in urging the gradual liquidation of bank resources engaged in speculative enterprises or for mere investment purposes. I regard it as very hazardous, however, to deny credit to the so-called nonessentials, among which Senator McCormick classes phonographs and silk stockings. Both of these are essentials. I am told that automobiles are to be classed as nonessentials where they are used for pleasure. In war the pleasures of the people may be interfered with, but not in time of peace.

Cites North Dakota as Warning.

"I warn the Federal Reserve Board and the bankers of this country that if a panic results from their policy they are liable to have a North Dakota reaction, where a State bank was established to furnish money at fair and stable rates. If the Reserve Board leads the procession of banks in fixing high rates on the people, and a great industrial depression follows, why should they wonder if the people demand the reserve banks be made banks of deposit and discount?

"I warn the Federal Reserve Board that this country is not going to submit to any depression created by the banks due to the policy or advice of financiers, either in Chicago or New York. A violent depression by such means would serve the rich and ruin the poor. This is the history of all panics; the country understands it and will not submit to an artificial panic, no matter how respectable the advice that brings it about."

Senator Walsh, in an attack on profiteering in the Senate, today, cited a recent public statement of former Secretary McAdoo concerning coal mine profiteering.

"Mr. McAdoo heralded around the United States an assertion that coal mining profits were particularly exorbitant," Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, replied, "and that one corporation in 1917 made 2,000 per cent. profit on its capital. The public is entitled to the facts about this.

"I have here the official report, which does not give me the name of the company, but does show it is under code number 1. Its capital stock was $10,000, and in 1917 it made 2,204 per cent. profit on that sum. But it had invested in addition to its capital stock, according to the Treasury, $473,000, so that its net profits on investment were 37 per cent.

"There is another one, not about the same capital, so listed, that made 5,183 per cent. on its stock, and I wonder Mr. McAdoo didn't mention that. It had invested capital of $1,274,000, and the Treasury reports its net profits at 34 per cent."

"If some new political party develops an adequate means of dealing with profiteering," interjected Senator Owen, Democrat, Oklahoma, "it can get more votes next election than both of the old ones put together."

REPUBLICANS CONFER ON CHICAGO PLANKS

HOLD 'DRY' ISSUE SETTLED

McAdoo Gaining Democratic Strength, with Cox Also Looming.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Prominent Republicans from all sections of the country were in session in Washington today discussing party policies with the object of determining upon principles to be incorporated in the national platform to be adopted at the Chicago Convention. The occasion was a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican National Committee's Advisory Committee on policies and platforms with Chairman of various sub-committees of the Advisory Committee and the Senators and Representatives who are members of the committee.

Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, attended the Advisory Committee's sessions. Ogden L. Mills, of New York, Chairman, and John Callan O'Laughlin, Secretary of the Advisory Committee, were in charge of the arrangements for the meeting, the purpose of which was to enable the sub-committees to present reports as to popular sentiment on important public questions and to give suggestions to the Resolutions Committee of the Republican National Convention that would prove valuable in the preparation of the platform. The meeting of the Advisory Committee was held in Senator Lodge's committee room at the Capitol.

Up to this time the interest of the Republican leadership had been in candidates more than platform declarations. The impression prevails throughout Republican circles that the party's nominee for President of the United States is certain to win in the November election.

Congressional Leaders Attend.

Those who attended the meeting of the Advisory Committee were Senators Lodge, Kellogg, Lenroot, Watson, Capper, Smoot, Gronna and Speaker Gillett, Congressman Longworth, Good, Mondell, Esch, Fess, Kelley of Michigan, Anderson, Miller, and Towner, James R. Garfield, ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge, Everett Colby, Herbert E. Parsons, Colonel Charles B. Warren, Mrs. Ogden Reid, George Wharton Pepper, Samuel Uhlman, William N. Heyburn, Jacob H. Hollander, Dr. Albert Shaw, John M. Switzer, J. J. Caldwell, George Lockwood and Samuel M. Lindsey.

There was a discussion of the reports of sub-committees and about half of the work before the committee was finished. The session will be resumed tomorrow.

After the meeting it was indicated, in answer to inquiries, that the prohibition question was not considered in the committee's business, but that a mass of information was available for the committee's guidance should the subject be taken up. The impression was obtained that the Republican leaders were inclined to look upon prohibition as a settled thing that does not require platform mention.

Prior to the meeting of the Advisory Committee, Chairman Hays, Mr. Mills and Mr. O'Laughlin met newspaper men at the office of the Republican National Committee and explained the object of the meeting at the Capitol. Mr. Mills reviewed the purposes of the Advisory Committee and gave some information intended to clear away misconceptions as to its functions and objects.

Want to Learn General View.

Mr. Mills said that some Democratic critics, referring to the fact that there were 170 members of the Advisory Committee, had said facetiously that if it were assembled it would be necessary to call out the militia. He explained that the purpose of having such a large committee was to obtain the most widespread thought in the Republican Party as to the questions before the country, "to get a cross-section of American opinion," as Chairman Hays had expressed it in introducing Mr. Mills to the newspaper men.

The purpose of the Advisory Committee, it was pointed out by Mr. Mills, was not to draft a platform, but to present the facts concerning important public questions so that the Resolutions Committee of the Chicago Convention would be able to draft a platform with reliable data before it.

In this connection Mr. Mills explained that the Advisory Committee had sent to the various sub-committees a questionnaire on economic and political views. About 100,000 copies of the questionnaire had been printed, and these had been widely distributed. A number of colleges had asked for them for use in classes, and he mentioned Harvard and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as having made application for copies. Great interest had been shown in the topics covered in the questionnaire, said Mr. Mills, and as an instance of the results obtained he said that the American Federation of Labor had submitted a thirty-page brief answering the questions contained.

Full Data on Shipping.

Mr. Mills went on to say that the benefit of the Advisory Committee's work had been shown in many instances and he took the matter of the merchant marine as an illustration. He said that heretofore political platforms had referred in general terms to the necessity of building up a merchant marine owned by American citizens and manned by American seamen, but there had been no serious presentation of the subject.

The questionnaire on the merchant marine, he said, had given an outline and asked a number of important questions. It had been sought through the questionnaire to bring out, with about 12,000,000 tons of Government-owned shipping in sight, whether there was private capital available that could absorb these vessels, whether the men could be found to man them, whether there would be fuel for them, and what would be the ability of an American merchant marine to compete with the merchant marines of other nations. All these matters had been dealt with, he said, in the report of the sub-committee on merchant marine, and this report would be laid before the Platform Committee of the Chicago Convention.

Twenty sub-committees of the Advisory Committee had been appointed, Mr. Mills said, and there was practical agreement by every sub-committee in its report. An exception was a minority report presented by three members of the committee on labor who desired to advocate Government ownership of railroads.

The questionnaire did not cover the questions of the Peace Treaty or international relations, except where they related to trade conditions, commerce and industry. This omission, it was explained, was due to the fact that these questions should primarily be dealt with by Republican members of the Senate.

Democrats Say McAdoo Gains.

There seems to be a rather general agreement in Democratic circles that William G. McAdoo has the best chance for the Presidential nomination, as is conceded by most political observers to be in the lead. Attorney General Palmer, who was a strong entry in the Democratic race, is believed to have lost much ground, and many Democrats regard him as out of the running.

It is taken for granted that the Democratic Party will not nominate a man who is obnoxious to labor organizations and Mr. Palmer is in labor's black book, while Mr. McAdoo is strong with organized labor, mainly on account of the increases in pay which he gave to railroad employes when he was Director General of Railroads.

Next to McAdoo, Governor Cox of Ohio appears to be strong in the Democratic ranks. There is no real Cox boom out, however, although it is evident that his chances are improving. The declaration for Cox by William F. McCombs, former Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, coupled with the report that the Cox candidacy was discussed recently at a French Lick luncheon, at which Charles F. Murphy, Thomas Taggart and other Democratic leaders attracted attention here today, where much significance is attached to these incidents.

There was good reason to believe that Murphy, Taggart and the late Roger Sullivan, Democratic boss of Chicago, had agreed to support the candidacy of Attorney General Palmer. In connection with the slump in the Palmer boom, is supposed to mean that the old-line Democratic machine leaders have transferred their support to Cox.

Marshall Backed in Washington.

With McAdoo foremost in the Democratic race and Cox being discussed as a strong contender, little is heard of other Presidential aspirants in the Democratic Party. At the same time significance is attached to the fact that, in Washington at least, there is an undercurrent of sentiment favoring Vice President Marshall. Mr. Marshall has come to be regarded as what is called "an old-fashioned Democrat," an advocate of a revival of fundamental party principles and a believer in the doctrine that parties should legislate for the people as a whole and not for special classes.

The Vice President is to deliver an address to the Indiana Democratic State Convention on Thursday, in which, it is understood, he will call for what is termed sanity in public affairs. The speech, it is said, will be full of "common sense doctrines" that will appeal to conservatives and moderates throughout the country.

Many Democrats, while realising that the party must take a stand for the League of Nations in the San Francisco platform, do not care to have the issue emphasized, as they feel it will be the case if anybody stamped as the President's candidate is to head the party.

Watch for Third Party Move.

Part of the Democratic hope of winning is based on the reports that a third party is in the forming which will injure Republican chances of success at the polls. It is freely predicted that if Senator Hiram Johnson of California is defeated in the Republican National Convention William R. Hearst, who is supporting Johnson's candidacy in his chain of newspapers, will nominate a candidate of a third party which he is now organizing.

The Non-Partisan League, which has great strength as a political organization in the Northwestern States, has indorsed Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin for President, and politicians from the sections where that League is strong look for trouble.

In this connection significance was attached to an announcement today by Senator A. J. Gronna of North Dakota, Republican, that he would be a candidate to succeed himself. The announcement was due to the Non-Partisan League's indorsement of Dr. Edwin F. Ladd, President of the North Dakota Agricultural College, to succeed Gronna as Senator.

Mr. Gronna said in his announcement that he had intended to retire from politics and had taken no steps to obtain a renomination. He repudiated Towney and Lemke, the leaders of the Non-Partisan League, saying that he would not follow their leadership.

"After advising with friends," continued Senator Gronna, "I feel it my duty to do my bit to help restore a just and safe Government for North Dakota and also help in the reconstruction work of our national Government. My associates in Congress, regardless of party, request me to do so. Having conferred with the Republican leaders I have no hesitancy in saying that I believe the national platform will be acceptable to every Republican."

The significance of Senator Gronna's statement is found in his notice of intention to fight the Non-Partisan League and his indorsement of the respective Republican platform. Mr. Gronna is looked upon as Senator La Follette's right-hand man in the Senate, and his statement is taken to mean that La Follette will stand by the Republican Party and will not encourage any effort to leave himself put forward as a candidate of a third party composed of radicals.

Glass Treaty Plank Awaited.

President Wilson's idea concerning the treaty plank to be adopted at the San Francisco convention is expected to be disclosed to the convention tomorrow of the Democrats of Virginia.

Senator Carter Glass, former Secretary of the Treasury, who departed last night for Roanoke to attend the convention, took with him, it is understood, a draft of a treaty plank in entire accord with the President's views on the subject.

Democratic politicians here were keenly interested to learn how the plank treated of reservations, if at all, in view of the President's firm stand against nullifying reservations, and his specific statement that he found the Lodge reservations of that character.

Democratic Senators who voted for the Lodge reservations, many of whom are seeking re-election, were particularly eager to learn whether the Presidential plank would rebuke them for their vote.

HIGHER WAGE URGED TO MOVE FREIGHT

Spokesman for Rail Managers Submits Comparison of Advances Under McAdoo and Hines.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 18.—Testimony today before the United States Railroad Labor Board in session here seemed to indicate that the brotherhoods' demands for increased wages are to be granted, either in whole or part, and that the public would pay the bill in the shape of increased freight rates. More witnesses examined today admitted that the rail workers "must be paid higher wages if the present freight tieup is to be broken." Strike talk was conspicuous by its absence.

It appeared likely that wage increases ranging from 30 to 45 per cent. will be granted to the 2,000,000 workers. This would boost the annual payroll of the country's railroads approximately 1,000,000,000 a year. If the increase is granted, it was said, the next move around the "endless chain" will be before the Interstate Commerce Commission, where the roads will appear in the rôle of petitioners, prepared to ask for rate increases ranging from 40 to 50 per cent.

Rail managers placed tabulations before the board today, indicating that the billion dollar increase in wages asked by the 2,000,000 railway employes means an increase of from 72 per cent. to 124 per cent. over the schedules of 1918. Brotherhood officials pointed out that in 1918 a large part of railway labor, particularly in the lower grades, was underpaid even according to pre-war standards.

"It is simply a case of putting wages on a plane where railroad work will be as attractive employment," said one Brotherhood leader. "Can you blame a baggageman, going home with $4.84 in his pocket for his day's work, for getting sore when he sees a hod carrier carrying home $8 for the same hours of work? It was the prevailing grouch over this sort of injustice that made the yardmen's strike spread as it did despite the efforts of the brotherhoods to combat it."

As spokesman for the rail managers, E. T. Whitney put in tables covering conductors, baggagemen, collectors and brakemen. One of them showed the wage in 1913, the increased wage under McAdoo, the present Hines schedule and the new wage asked.

The wage status of the yardmen, of interest by virtue of the switchmen's strike, will be taken up tomorrow or later.

Mr. Whitaker protested against punitive stipulations "for time and a half for overtime and holiday work, next ten days and that an award from the board will be forthcoming some time in June. Among the spectators at the hearing was John Grunau, leading spirit in the switchmen's strike.

$11,000,000,000, while money in actual circulation had increased $1,900,000,000. Credit expansion, even to that extent, was not believed by Mr. Harding to be alarming or excessive "when viewed from the standpoint of war necessity," and when it was recalled that the government placed $26,000,000,000 in Liberty Bonds in the same period.

Mr. Harding deplored the falling off in production in practically all important lines. He said it constituted a "very unsatisfactory element" in the national problem because it indicated a slowing down of "industrial effort."

"Every effort should be made to stimulate necessary production, especially of food products, and to avoid waste," Mr. Harding continued. "Planting operations in many sections have been delayed because of adverse weather conditions, and should there be an inadequate yield of crops this year, the necessity for conservation and conservatism will be accentuated."

No small measure of the difficulties in the present situation was attributed by Mr. Harding to the nation-wide freight congestion. He added pointedly however, that the freight tie-up was not responsible for profiteering. The board expects to deal with profiteering "in another way," he said, without indicating what methods were under consideration.

The freight jam was discussed at length and resolutions with respect to means of bringing it to an end were adopted. Their contents were not made public but they will be presented both to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and to the Shipping Board tomorrow by a committee named at the conference.

RUSH FREIGHT CARS TO END CONGESTION

Says Strike Interfered Materially.

The American Railroad Association's car service section says that there is a shortage of box cars in the Central West and Northwest, but that empties are being moved from the South and Southeast to Ohio, Indiana and the Northwest. Strike conditions have interfered materially, the bulletin states.

Automobiles are said to be in heavy demand, and there was a suggestion today at the Interstate Comerce Commission that these cars carrying automobiles may be delayed in favor of cars containing necessaries. Stock cars are being withdrawn from the East and Alleghany regions and sent to the Southwest, where they are greatly needed. A shortage of refrigerator cars is expected in California and the Southeast. Orders have been given that flat cars are to be used only for commodities which can not be loaded in other types of cars. Every effort is being made to move freight gondolas to the coal and steel centres.

The National Coal Association announced tonight that there was a shortage of open top cars in the soft coal fields of from 50 to 60 per cent. and that coal operators had for weeks been begging the railways and the Interstate Commerce Commission to give the mines sufficient cars. It was added that instead of becoming better the situation has grown worse. Mine owners east of the Mississippi, the statement declared, have been forced to cut operation of their mines to one or two days a week.

Coal Production Drops.

"The immediate effect of the car shortage on the output of coal to the market is strikingly shown in official figures given out by the Geological Survey," said the Coal Association's statement. "The average weekly output of coal requisite to meet the country's demand at this time would run to a little over 11,000,000 tons. As against this the Government figures show that for the first week in this month the actual production was not 8,898,000 tons. For the week ending April 3 the production was 9,715,000 tons; April 10, 9,044,000; April 17, 7,563,000, and April 24, 8,459,000.

"Insufficiency of car supply, while seriously affecting the flow of coal to the public, also means greatly advanced cost of production to the mine owner. This was forcibly brought out in evidence submitted by former experts of the United States Fuel Administration recently before the Bituminous Coal Commission. A car shortage of from 50 to 65 per cent. below normal actually involves an increase in production cost of from $1 to $2 a ton."

John Moore of the United Mine Workers of America charged today that railroads are assigning a full supply of coal cars to those mines with which they have contracts for coal and refusing to supply cars to other mines.

"Railroads consume approximately one-third of the total soft coal output," Moore said, "and the public consumes the other two-thirds. But at present the railroads, especially in Ohio, are taking practically all of the coal that is being produced and leaving none for the public. This is wholly unfair and we believe it is a violation of the Esch-Cummins Railroad law. Tens of thousands of coal miners are out of employment because the railroads refuse to supply cars to the mines on an equitable distributive basis."

He declared that by manipulating the car supply the railroads could hammer down the price they pay for coal to a low figure, while the public would have to pay much more.

WASHINGTON, May 18 (Associated Press.)—During the day consideration of the Cummins amendment to the transportation act designed to help the car shortage situation, began before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. A favorable conclusion was understood to have been reached on the proposal to extend from five to fifteen years the period for repayment of loans made by the Government for improvements, but final action on other provisions in the amendment was postponed.

A subcommittee composed of Senators Kellogg, Minnesota; Townsend, Michigan, and Underwood, Alabama, was appointed to confer with House members as to need of an additional appropriation for the relief of the carriers.

Should the provision to extend the repayment period be enacted, Walker D. Hines, former Railroad Administrator, told the committee in a letter to Senator Kellogg, an additional appropriation of about $350,000,000 would be needed to enable the Railroad Administration to liquidate pending claims.

ST. LOUIS DISTRICT HARD HIT.

Railroads Entering the City Accept Freight to Only a Few Centres

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 18.—Serious obstructions to freight traffic from the "outlaw" railroad strike are shown in the latest embargo notice issued here today by the Chamber of Commerce Traffic Bureau. Express service, it says, has been badly congested for the last few days, and the regular pick-up service has been interrupted.

The St. Louis freight station of the Pennsylvania is still closed, and the East St. Louis station does not make shipments to Cincinnati, Cleveland or Buffalo. The Wabash is again refusing freight destined to points up to but not including New York, and is refusing business for connecting lines via Cincinnati.

The Illinois Central is handling freight for Chicago, but none for connecting lines, and refuses to take any shipments east of the Indiana-Illinois State line.

FREIGHT TIEUP HITS FARMERS.

Inability to Get Seeds and Implements May Cut Crop to a Third.

Farm production has been seriously affected by the freight congestion, according to dealers in farm implements, seeds and commercial fertilizers in this city. The head of one of the largest agricultural implement firms in the country declared yesterday, in a letter to the Merchants' Association, that in many sections there would be only one-third of the normal crops this year because of the farmers' inability to get seed and implements.

In his letter the dealer says that the interruption of transportation facilities is proving a much more serious factor than the daylight saving law in the reduction of farm produce. "The railroad strike has certainly paralyzed local commerce," says the letter. "In our particular line dealers and farmers are crying for their goods, more especially because of the late season, and yet it is impossible for us to help them out because of the present situation."

Seed men here say that practically none of the railroads is accepting seed for shipment. Many of the firms are shipping all their seeds by express, even in carload lots. The Vaughan Seed Company of 43 Barclay Street said yesterday that traffic conditions were worse than they had been within the last ten years.

The lack of seed potatoes and seed onions is particularly serious, the seed men say. The inability of the farmers to get fertilizer is another serious angle of their present difficulties, and lack of spraying materials for fruit trees is threatening the fruit crops, according to reports from up-State.

Oscar H. Fogg, Acting Secretary of the National Committee on Gas and Electric Service, announced yesterday that as a result of the nation-wide freight jam public utilities serving 45,000,000 persons would have to shut down unless priority was given to the shipment of coal. Nothing else, he said, can av

CLAIM THE VOTES TO DEFEAT M'ADOO

Combination Against Him Said to Control 356 Delegates to San Francisco.

COUNT ON SEVEN STATES

MOVE FOR COX OR PALMER

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 18.—The Presidential aspirations of William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury and son-in-law of President Wilson, have apparently run up against a stone wall in Illinois. The prediction is made that he cannot hope to get half a dozen of the Illinois delegates under the most favorable conditions, and that the others composing the delegation of fifty-eight will be split on the first ballot at San Francisco—between Governor Cox and Attorney General Palmer. It appears at this moment that Cox will be the favorite of Illinois soon after the first ballot.

This situation has stirred up no little interest in political circles here, especially as it also is reported on what seems to be high authority that a combination of leaders has been formed, including George E. Brennan of Illinois, successor of Roger C. Sullivan; Tom Taggart of Indiana; Charles F. Murphy, big chief of Tammany Hall; the Cox faction in Ohio, the Edwards faction in New Jersey, John N. Camden of Kentucky, and the dominant Democratic leaders of Pennsylvania, to kill the McAdoo boom for the Presidency, run Cox or Palmer as a liberal, so far as the wine and beer question is concerned, and make an open fight on Bryan.

The States represented by the groups listed have 356 of the 1,092 delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Admitting that McAdoo may be able to tear some of them away from control of the leaders, observers here declare it is probable that if the combination goes through at least 300 of the delegates in the groups could be held in line for Cox or Palmer, and with support which could be obtained from other States the combination would have enough strength to prevent McAdoo obtaining the two-thirds vote necessary for nomination.

The delegations which have been thus listed are Illinois, 58; Indiana, 30; Kentucky, 28; New Jersey, 28; New York, 90; Ohio, 48, and Pennsylvania 76; total 356.

Anti-McAdoo Combination Reported.

It is reported here today that Murphy, Brennan, Taggart and Camden have conferred at French Lick Springs and have come to the conclusion that the best thing for all interests concerned is to head off McAdoo if possible, raise the light wines and beer issue, and inform Mr. Bryan that he may do as he pleases, and that for him to bolt the party would be considered a favor, rather than otherwise.

None of the leaders here is discussing in detail the happenings at the powwow at Taggart's French Lick Springs, but it is asserted that reports that former National Chairman McCombs had a prominent part in the developments are without foundation. It is declared that the combination isn't paying any attention to Mr. McCombs and hasn't entered into any working agreement with him.

Political observers here say that with the régime now in power in the Democratic Party of Illinois Mr. McAdoo has not much chance of sympathy. They assert his connections with the White House have been too close and his conduct in the past unsatisfactory. At the same time it is admitted that developments prior to the San Francisco convention on June 28 may alter the situation.

It is reported in political circles here also that McAdoo has made little or no progress in his alleged efforts to obtain support from the New York delegates to San Francisco. Murphy, it is stated, would support either Cox or Palmer rather than accept McAdoo, and would never permit the New York delegation tovote for the former Secretary of the Treasury unless it was evident that no effort on Murphy's part could prevent his nomination.

Prefer Cox or Palmer.

It appears that Cox really is the favorite of the Illinois delegation at this time, although Palmer would be acceptable. The latter is not looked upon here as a "dry" candidate. He is regarded as a "liberal" who would not refuse to accept the nomination if there was a plank in the platform indorsing a return to light wines and beer.

Cox supporters say his nomination would eliminate one embarrassing feature of the platform framing. It is pointed out that Cox himself supports a light wines and beer plank and that it would not make any difference, in the event of his nomination, whether the issue was put into the platform or not.

While the leaders and delegates in Illinois are not talking openly about how they feel, the Illinois Democracy is admitted "wet" so far as the beer and wine issue is concerned. It is said that not less than forty of the fifty district delegates from Illinois would work for such a plank in the platform. The delegates at large are reported on the same side of the fence.

It is further reported here that the efforts to reach an agreement to nominate Cox or Palmer were started at this time because McAdoo apparently was gaining great strength through what seemed to be a general opinion in most parts of the country that he was almost certain of the nomination.

Speculating on McAdoo's Chances.

The situation now developed has served to add great interest to the fight within the Democratic Party. Politicians in Chicago are speculating as to how far the movement to end McAdoo's chances will get.

The Illinois Democracy, or the greater part of it, apparently is in favor of paying no attention to threats Mr. Bryan may make and to serve notice on him that he cannot hope to control the convention. To try to compromise or deal with Bryan, it is held here, is a hopeless task for any wing of the party which will not agree to accept his leadership.

Developments of the last few days, therefore, seem to have given the ratings of Governor Cox and Attorney General Palmer a boost and started an undercurrent of doubt as to the ability of McAdoo to romp away with the nomination.

Calais, Me., Elects Democrat Mayor.

CALAIS, Me., May 18.—Fred V. Pickard, Democrat, was elected Mayor at a special election today, defeating Percy L. Lord, Republican, by a vote of 508 to 479. At the regular election on April 5, Lord, who was Mayor last year, claimed that he had obtained a majority of one vote. Pickard carried a contest to the Supreme Court, which held that the vote had been a tie.

JOHNSON RALLY SET FOR CONVENTION EVE

DENIED USE OF COLISEUM

Managers Declare It Would Be Unfair to Other Candidates—Forty Hoover Meetings.

Hiram W. Johnson, Presidential candidate, will address a mass meeting in Chicago the night before the Republican National Convention meets. This announcement was made last night by Angus McSween, the Senator's campaign manager, on his return from a conference with the candidate in Washington.

An effort to hold the meeting, scheduled for June 7, in the Coliseum, where the convention will be held, was vetoed by the convention managers, Mr. McSween said. They declared it would be unfair to other candidates. So it probably will take place in the Auditorium.

The announced purpose of the meeting is to give Chicago business men an opportunity to size up the candidate who has been branded a dangerous radical by some of his opponents. It will, however, be more in the nature of a demonstration to impress delegates than an appeal to business interests. If present plans are carried out, the meeting will be preceded by a torchlight parade of 40,000 persons that will pass the hotels where delegates are housed, where the various candidates have their headquarters and where convention activities will be centred. All the delegates will have arrived by the time the meeting is held.

Bids for Delegates Here.

Senator Johnson will make a special bid for the support of delegates from this city at a meeting in the auditorium of the Morris High School, in the Bronx, next Monday evening. This meeting will be held under the auspices of the Bronx County Republican Committee. It will be open to the public. A special invitation has been sent and seats reserved for the delegates and alternates.

It was rumored that William M. Calder, Senator Johnson's colleague in the United States Senate, had been instrumental in arranging the meeting.

Four other meetings are being arranged for Senator Johnson for the days immediately preceding the convention. Two will be in Pennsylvania, where the primaries were held yesterday—one in Philadelphia on the evening of May 31, the other in Pittsburgh June 4. On June 2 Senator Johnson will address Cleveland business men at noon and a large meeting in the evening.

Hoover Meetings Planned.

Announcement was made last night that forty Hoover meetings would be held in Manhattan in the next few days. The first will be on Friday—an East Side mass meeting at which Raymond B. Fosdick will speak on the League of Nations, and Florence Nash and Lewis Strauss will discuss Mr. Hoover as a candidate. Another Manhattan meeting will be held at the Broadway Tabernacle at a date to be announced later. Mrs. Vincent Astor, it was announced, would arrange a Hoover meeting at her home.

Hoover rallies will be held today or tonight in about twenty Long Island towns. James F. Curtis of Roslyn, Chairman of the Long Island Committee for Hoover, has arranged the gatherings.

PALMER LEADING IN PENNSYLVANIA

dential preference primary early today showed that Major General Leonard Wood had, polled about 70 per cent. of an extremely light Republican vote, which was scattered among a half dozen men who have been mentioned as Presidential possibilities.

General Wood ran even better in the country towns than in the cities. Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California and Herbert C. Hoover were running a close race for second place, and Governor Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts was third.

The Democratic vote was negligible. Only two names were printed on the ballots, that of General Wood and William Grant Webster of New York, both Republican. Webster trailed a number of Republican possibilities whose names were written in.

The Republican vote in Burlington was: Wood, 121; Johnson, 22; Hoover, 21; Coolidge, 14; Webster, 7.

No Democratic votes were cast in St. Albans. The Republican vote was: Wood, 13; Hoover, 7; Coolidge, 3; Johnson, 1; Lowden, 1.

The vote in Montpelier was: Republican—Wood, 59; Webster, 3; Johnson, 12; Hoover, 9; Coolidge, 5; Debs, 1. Democrat—McAdoo, 4; Hoover, 3; Palmer, 1; Wood, 1.

Rutland gave Wood 144, Webster 16, Johnson 45, Coolidge 12, Hoover 9, on the Republican ballot, and Wilson 5, William G. McAdoo 15, Governor Edwards 15, on the Democratic ballot.

IGNORE JOHNSON CANDIDACY.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 18.—Repudiation of the covenant of the League of Nations "as brought back from Europe by the self-appointed American delegate," and indorsement of the Knox resolution providing for an immediate peace, was incorporated in the platform of the Republican State Convention here today. Acceptance of the compromise alternative of the league covenant as safeguarded by the Lodge reservations as a last resort in the interests of early peace was recommended.

No mention was made of the candidacy of Senator Hiram Johnson, who received the Nebraska Presidential preference majority vote. The expected contest over instruction of all Nebraska delegates in Johnson's favor failed to materialize.

"We congratulate the Republican congress upon its efforts to bring order out of the chaos and confusion caused through the Democratic mismanagement of affairs during the world war," read the platform. "We urgently recommend our Senators and Congressmen from Nebraska to exercise their efforts to the fullest extent to bring about the adoption of a budget system which will reduce the cost of Government and lighten the burden of taxation."

The convention went on record as favoring strict enforcement of all State and National laws for the purpose of placing in operation the State and National prohibition constitutional amendments.

INDORSE TREATY AND LEAGUE.

SPOKANE, Wash., May 18.—The Democratic State Convention today elected A. R. Titlow of Tacoma National Committeeman over William Piggott of Seattle; named eight uninstructed delegates at large to the National Convention, each with half a vote, and adopted a platform which urged prompt ratification of the Peace Treaty, with its League of Nations Covenant.

The resolutions called on Democratic Senators to "oppose attachment of any nullifying reservations and finally ratify the instrument." The Administration of President Wilson and his work in the treaty-making councils in Paris were commended. Woman suffrage, prohibition and the payment of adequate salaries to school teachers were indorsed.

The platform indorsed adequate cash compensation by the State and nation for service men in the World War and recommended the use by the Government of excess and war profits taxes for payment of the compensation.

TWO MORE STATES REVOLT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, May 16.—When your correspondent, delayed by a train wreck, arrived yesterday on the scene of the fighting between the Carranza forces and the Revolutionary Army, the battle was over.

Carranza had fled to the mountains and the fields for many kilometres were covered with the dead bodies of soldiers, while the victorious rebel forces were busy collecting arms, equipment and whatever loot was left behind.

The Carranza trains were under military guard, while officers made an inventory of all material. The famous yellow Presidential train was badly damaged, as it was the centre of the fighting, and many bullet holes mark the beautifully decorated cars.

Refugees returning to Mexico City tell stories of great hardships. After the second day food was scarce and the water was entirely gone. The revolutionists had blown up the water tanks where the trains were expected to find a supply, and troops and civilians were forced to drink from stagnant pools.

Carranza's valet says that a few women traveling on the train were wounded by stray shots. Despite the rain of machine-gun bullets during three days, however, no one on the trains was killed.

The valet adds that Carranza was in the front of the fighting, cheering his men. A shell explosion killed his horse under him, without injury to the President.

On the morning of the third day, when an attack on the trains was being made by 12,000 men, Carranza seized a moment when the enemy was forced to retreat, and, followed by Manuel Berlanga, his personal staff, and about one hundred and fifty cavalry under General Murguia, made a dash for the hills in the direction of the State of Puebla. Carranza had more than an hour's start before the rebels discovered his escape and began pursuit.

The forces concerned in this revolution create a new record, as the soldiers have been paid constantly and in turn have refrained from looting. Every order for merchandise has been accompanied by money.

"We Are Lost," Says Carranza.

MEXICO CITY, May 18 (Associated Press).—"We are lost good-bye, gentlemen." These were Carranza's final words before his flight from the besieged trains in the early afternoon of May 14, while pausing momentarily before a crowd of terrified civilian refugees a few miles east of San Marcos, accompanied by a few intimates and guarded by what the special dispatches term "a very small cavalry force."

Judging from the list of captured officials and Generals received Sunday at the headquarters in Mexico City of the Liberal Revolutionary Government, few are accompanying Carranza. Among them are believed to be Luis Cabrera, Secretary of the Treasury; General Juan Barragan, Chief of Staff; General Francisco Murguia, commander of the train guards; General Francisco Urquizo, sub-Secretary of War and Ygnacio Bonillas, former Ambassador to the United States.

Labor Leader in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 18. — Luis Marones, labor leader of Mexico and known there as "the Gompers of Mexico," came here today as special Commissioner of the de facto Government.

Recent reports to the State Department, announcing plans for his visit, suggested the possibility of his appointment later as the chief diplomatic representative to the United States. Marones and his associates declined, however, to discuss this, nor would the Commissioner express an opinion on Mexican conditions. He left during the day for New York and will return here later.

The State Governments of Yucatan and Campeche have announced their support of the new Government, and Villa, it was announced, was proceeding to the capital "without military escort." The Yucatan Governor and Commander have taken refuge on the American steamer Lake Yorkville, at Progreso.

Obregon has been appointed Commander of the forces in Northern Mexico, and Gonzales of the forces in the south.

MEXICO CITY, May 17.—General Soto Pavon, successor to Zapata, who after fighting the Carranza Government during the last six years, has now joined Obregon and has returned to Mexico City. Pavon was a companion of Cordova, who figured in the Jenkins case, and he states that Jenkins lied and that there was no abduction.

Jenkins made an agreement with Cordova in order to provoke intervention, Pavon asserts. The rebels were willing, he says, as they had no hopes of overthrowing the government. Now that a new government has been formed they have no reason for not telling the truth, Pavon said, adding that the Jenkins farm, where large lumber, horses and cattle stocks were kept, was not molested by the rebels, as Jenkins was supplying them with money and ammunition.

General José M. Sanchez, who is also a Congressman and a force near Puebla, also assured me that the story told by Pavon was true. Cordova, who was a friend of Sanchez, had told him the same story, he said. Sanches asserted that Cordova did not think much of Jenkins, but the rebels were willing to use any methods for the overthrow of the Carranza Government.

NO CLEARANCES GIVEN FOR SHIPS TO MEXICO

Consuls Withhold Papers and Some Vessels Sail Without Them Pelaeze Promises Protection.

Manuel de la Pena, representing the new Government of Mexico here, who will open offices in the Park Row Building today on the seventh floor, announced last night that acting commercial agents of the new Government of Mexico will attend to all commercial matters with the public.

Senor de la Pena stated that he wanted to warn the public in general that any act of the Carranza Consulate will not be recognized in Mexico and that all payments made to the Carranza Consulate will have to be made again to the Consulate of the new Government.

Consular representatives here of the Carranza Government of Mexico are declining to issue or certify Consular documents for ships clearing to Mexico, except on waiver of all responsibility, it was said here yesterday at the office of the Consul General of Mexico. This action is in accordance with instructions from the Mexican Embassy at Washington, it was said.

A number of oil companies operating ships out of New York to and from Tampico and other Mexican ports are understood to be sending their ships to sea without the Consular indorsements.

General Manuel Pelaez, now reported in control of the entire oil field district of the Mexican east coast, in a message received in New York yesterday guaranteed to protect the lives and property of Americans as well as Mexicans in his territory.

W. F. Buckley, an American resident of Vera Cruz and Mexico City for the last twelve years and a close personal friend of Pelaez, received the General's cablegram here which, dated at Tampico Sunday, read as follows:

"I authorise you to publish over my signature a statement covering the following three points:

"First, I am united with and form part of the movement represented by Generals Obregon and Gonsalez.

"Second, there is perfect order and commercial and industrial activities are continuing uninterruptedly in Tampico, Lobos and Tuxpam as well as in the entire oil region.

"Third, in the oil zone all territory is controlled by the troops under my command, the lives and property of Mexicans and foreigners have had and will continue to have full guarantees and I shall endeavor to facilitate the development of all legitimate enterprises, this being the attitude assumed by the entire movement."

Sinn Fein Sets Up a Court.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 18.—The first public court in Ireland under the aegis of the Sinn Fein was held in Ballinrode today for the purpose of settling land questions. The litigants signed agreements to abide by the decision of the Court, and not to submit to "an enemy tribunal" any of the matters at issue. The Chairman of the Court, A. O'Connor, said the Court was constituted by the highest authority in the land; that its decisions were just, and that an adequate force would be provided to put them into effect.

Carson on American Interference.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 18.—Sir Edward Carson, in the course of the Irish Home Rule debate in the House of Commons today, appealed to members not to allow considerations of America to influence their attitude.

"I think," he said, "it is high time that America, or those who pretend to speak for America—because they are not Americans—should understand that we are still a great power, and that we are not subordinate to America or any other power. We don't force on America our opinions on American politics," he added, and the remark carried the House with him.

The debate took, from the point of view of domestic policies, a somewhat dramatic turn when the Government accepted the principle of an amendment in favor of a second Chamber for each of the two Irish Parliaments. There was a remarkable demonstration of sympathy with the Ulster Unionists in their dilemma at having to choose between the acceptance of a Parliament which they did not want and the wrecking of the Home Rule bill of a Unionist Government.

The Independent Liberals and Labor members, of course, advanced the view that these developments conclusively proved that the present Government of Ireland bill was really a Unionist measure and that Premier Lloyd George and his fellow Liberals were as clay in the hands of the Unionist potters.

The Unionist rank and file cheered Sir Edward warmly when he advanced the proposal that Ulster be left alone, but voted against him on the motion made by Lord Robert Cecil that Ulster should remain under the Imperial Parliament. The Independent Liberals were very bitter at this contradiction between the professions and practice of the Coalition, but the inherent contradictions of the present Home Rule bill are so many that the anomaly of amendments being supported by the speeches and defeated by the votes of the Coalition is becoming a familiar feature of the measure.

"The view taken by influential members of the Government," The Daily Chronicle's political correspondent will say tomorrow, "is that in Ireland the time has come to diminish, if not to cease, the practice of arrests and imprisonment without a trial. The Irish Government, by their latest dispositions of police and military and cordons they have drawn, will seek to catch the perpetrators of murder or outrage redhanded, in which case they can be dealt with by the ordinary processes of law."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, May 18.—Speaking at the General Synod of the Church of Ireland today, Dr. Darcy, Protestant Archbishop of Dublin, said that as far as the conditions of the country were concerned, there never was a time when the issues were so confused and the outlook so obscure, and when it was so difficult to see a way out. Irishmen, he said, had been horrified at the deeds of bloodshed which had in the past few months stained the records of their country. They could not fail to realise that they were threatened with complete anarchy.

There had been too little realisation, he said, of the exceeding difficulty of the task of those who were endeavoring to grapple with the situation without exercising the terrible severities which had marked the policy of other times and of other lands in similar circumstances. In Ireland, he said, it was the custom to blame the Government whenever anything went wrong, but the fault was much more that of the people themselves. The feeling of the great number of moderate men who formed the bulk of the population in Ireland never became fully articulate. There were always threatening influences which tempted them to silence.

When, he asked, would Irishmen come to realise that unless they became true democrats, using the power of public opinion to check excesses, there would be no political stability?

NEBRASKA DEMOCRATS DON'T MENTION BRYAN

His Name Not Heard in Convention Which Indorses Hitchcock and Praises Wilson.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., May 18.—The Nebraska Democratic State Convention was in session twelve hours today and the name of William J. Bryan was not mentioned one single time. On the other hand, the convention passed a resolution indorsing Senator Hitchcock's candidacy for the Presidential nomination and approving his fight for the League of Nations.

The convention was a Hitchcock meeting from the time it convened until it adjourned. Senator Hitchcock was present in person. Bryan's interests were looked after by Charles W. Bryan, his brother. Mr. Bryan was a member of the Resolutions Committee, but his brother's name was not mentioned in the resolutions reported to the convention and which were unanimously approved.

The Hitchcock forces organized the convention, elected the chairman and the committees on resolutions and credentials. For two hours Mr. Bryan defended his seat as a delegate before the Credentials Committee, where it was attacked, but in the end he and his delegation from Lincoln were seated.

The resolutions recognized personal liberty, gloried in the triumphs of the party under President Wilson, indorsed the League of Nations unqualifiedly and without reservations, commended President Wilson for his efforts towards the League of Nations, and upheld the Democratic Senators for standing out against the Lodge reservations.

OBREGON, UP FROM PEAS AND POVERTY

By V. BLASCO IBANEZ.

must not jump at conclusions and infer that Obregon is a drunkard because I found him so engaged. I believe he drinks very little. During the luncheon he took beer in preference to wine, and on several occasions he called for water. But as a warrior who has lived in the open air, suffering the rigor of inclement weather and spending whole nights without sleep, he likes to take a casual drink from time to time to tune up his nervous system.

It would be equally erroneous to imagine him as a Mexican chieftain of the type which we so frequently see in the movies and vaudevilles—a copper-colored personage with slanting eyes and thick, stiff hair, sharp as an awl; in short, an Indian dressed up like a comic-opera General. Obregon is nothing of the sort; he is white, so positively white that it is difficult to conceive his having a single drop of Indian blood in his veins. He is so distinctively Spanish that he could walk in the streets of Madrid without any one guessing that he hailed from the American hemisphere.

"My grandparents came from Spain," he told me. "I don't know from which province. Other people bother their heads a great deal about their ancestors. They imagine they come from noble stock and claim descent from Spanish Dukes and Marquises. I know only that my people came from Spain. They must have been poor folk driven to emigrate by sheer hunger."

The personage began to reveal himself. Obregon is a man who is always trying to amaze his hearer, now with explosions of pride, now with strokes of unexpected humility. The important thing for him is to be disconcerting, to say something that his listeners are not expecting to hear.

Close-Up of the Idol.

He is still young—not quite 40. He has a strong and exuberant constitution. You can see at once that the man is brimming over with vitality. A slight varicosis has colored his cheeks with a number of slender, red veins, which give a reddish tint to his complexion. His enemy Don Venustiano suffers also from varicosis of the face, but his nose is the only feature that shows it prominently. It is furrowed by a series of red, blue and green veins that remind you of the wavy lines on a hydrographic map. All aggressive men have a more or less close resemblance to birds and animals of prey. Some are thin and sharp beaked, like hawks. Others have the mane and the arrogance of the lion. A few are lithe and mysterious, like the tiger. Obregon, with his short, thick neck, broad shoulders and small, sharp eyes, which on occasion emit fierce glints, reminds you of a wild boar.

Obregon is single and lives the life of a soldier, attended by one aid, an ex-ranchman who is even rougher than he. As Obregon has only one arm, and, consequently, cannot devote more than one hand to the care of his person, the "hero of Celaya"—as he is frequently called—is rather slovenly in appearance. In his military uniform he may look better. The man I met wore a dirty and much-worn Panama hat, baggy trousers and a shabby coat, one of whose sleeves hung empty, showing that the arm had been amputated near the shoulder.

Obregon's apparent contempt for all personal adornment is characteristic of the man. Another reason for his carelessness in matters of dress is his desire to flatter the Mexican populace, who consider that his slovenly garb brings him closer to them.

The missing arm enables the people to recognize Obregon at a distance. They greet him enthusiastically whenever they see him. Obregon is the conqueror of Pancho Villa; he is the man who broke up the military power that came near placing that old cattle rustler in the Presidential chair of the republic.

Villa, Defeated, Almost Forgotten.

Villa is almost forgotten in Mexico. He is talked about more in the United States than in his own country. A few years ago he was "The General" among all Generals, and many even spoke enthusiastically of his military talent, seeing in him the man who would take it upon himself to exterminate any foreigner daring to invade the soil of the nation. Now he is nothing but a bandit and people avoid all reference to him. He will continue to make trouble, but his star has surely set. Obregon defeated him in ten bloody skirmishes, misnamed battles, and this was sufficient to make Obregon the hero of the hour. Moreover, Pancho Villa has escaped bodily injury; he has all his limbs. With insolent good luck he has kept out of the way of bullets. Obregon, on the contrary, has only one arm, thus adding to his heroic record the sympathy that the martyr arouses.

I sat down and the luncheon began, a luncheon that started at noon and lasted until 4.

Don Venustiano, always suspicious, as is natural in the head of a nation where every one is likely to "darse la vuelta"—to betray—and no one knows with certainty who is his friend and who is his enemy, spoke to me a few days later about this luncheon. I was the one to broach the subject. I told him frankly that I had lunched with one of his enemies.

"I know," he replied. "But what the devil did you have to talk about that it took you four whole hours?"

And he scrutinized my eyes as though he were trying to read my thoughts.

Obregon's Debut in Chick-peas.

In reality Obregon had nothing interesting to tell me. But he is such a character! It is so agreeable to sit and listen hours and hours to his animated, lively and picturesque conversation, which is more Spanish than Mexican.

He had selected the table near the orchestra so that he could give orders to the musicians. He was anxious to show me that he was not an ignorant soldier and that he loved music—Mexican music, of course, for other kinds of music mean little to him. And while the orchestra played the "Jarabe," the "Cielito" and the "Mañanitas"—Mexican national airs—Obregon talked and talked, swallowing meanwhile the pieces of food that he had an attendant cut for him, as he can use only one hand. The General is invincible in conversation. I can talk a great deal myself, but I was forced to withdraw before his onslaught, as thoroughly defeated as Pancho Villa himself. I listened.

He told me the story of his youth. He is sure that he was born to be the first everywhere. He does not say so himself, but he helps you to suspect it with modest insinuations. In Sonora he was a trader in garbanzos—chick-peas—and although he made rather small profits, he is sure that he would have become eventually the first merchant in Mexico—a great millionaire.

"You see, the revolution spoiled all that for me. I then became a soldier and I rose to be a General."

What he neglected to add was that, in spite of his General's commission, he remained in business just the same, and his enemies affirm that he has realized his ambition to become a millionaire. He has a monopoly at present of all the chick-pea trade in Mexico. The peas are exported to Spain, where "garbanzos," as they are called, are an article of common consumption. The same enemies assert that all the farmers in Mexico are obliged to sell their "garbanzos" to Obregon, at a price which he himself fixes. That is the advantage of being a hero and of losing an arm in defense of the Constitution.

"All of Us Thieves, More or Less."

However, I shall not dwell on what Obregon's enemies say about him. The General went on talking about himself. He has a line of risqué stories which he tells with a brutal frankness smacking of the camp and the bivouac. They helped me to understand the popularity of the man. He talks that way with everybody, with the women of the street, with the workingmen he meets, with the peasants in the country, and those simple people swell with pride at being treated with such familiarity and at hearing such amusing stories from a national hero, the conqueror of Celaya, a former Minister of War, and a man who has only one arm!

"They have probably told you that I am a bit of a thief."

Taken somewhat aback, I looked around in surprise to make sure it was really Obregon who had said that, and that he had said it to me. I hesitated, not knowing really what answer to make.

"Yes," he insisted. "You have heard that story without a doubt. All of us are thieves, more or less, down here."

"Why, General," I said, with a gesture of protest, "I never pay any attention to gossip! All lies, I am sure."

But Obregon ignored what I was saying, and continued:

"The point is, however, I have only one hand, while the others have two. That's why people prefer me. I can't steal so much or so fast."

A burst of laughter! Obregon saluted his own witticism with the reserved hilarity of a cynical boy, while his two friends who were with us paid tribute to the hero's jest with endless boisterousness.

Joke of the Itching Palm.

This oratorical success made the General still more talkative. He insisted on treating me to more stories, perhaps to show me that he held the gossip about him in contempt, perhaps to enjoy the pleasure of surprising and embarrassing me by the spectacle of a man depreciating himself.

"You probably don't know how they found the hand I lost!"

In reality, I did know, just as, for that matter, I had already heard the joke about his being more honest than the others because he had only one hand. But in order not to spoil the General's delight in his own brilliancy I assured him I did not know the story.

"You know I lost my arm in battle. It was carried off by a shell which exploded near me while I was talking with my staff. After giving me the first treatments, my men set out to find my arm on the ground. They looked about in all directions, but couldn't find it anywhere. Where could the hand and its fr...nt of arm have gone to?

"'I'll find it for you,' said one of my aids, an old friend of mine. 'It will come back by itself. Watch me!'

"He took out of his purse a ten-dollar gold piece, an aztec, as we call it, and raised it above his head. At once a sort of bird, with five wings, rose from the ground. It was r../ missing hand, which had not been able to resist the temptation to fly from its hiding place and seize a gold coin."

A second ovation from the guests! And the man with the one arm exploded with laughter at the naughty prank of his missing hand, and, not to be discourteous to its former owner, I laughed as well.

The Ambassador's Missing Watch.

I could see what Obregon was driving at. This story was to be not at his own expense, but against "that other fellow," his enemy and persecutor. However, I pretended to be quite innocent, so that the General could have the pleasure of telling the story.

"A new Minister from Spain had just presented his credentials, and President Carranza was anxious to welcome him with a great official banquet. The thing had to be done well. Spain had been the first European nation to recognize Don Venustiano's Government after the revolution."

As I listened to the hero I thought of the grand dining hall of the palace at Chapultepec, which recalls the tragic days of Maximilian, the Austrian Emperor of Mexico. I could see Don Venustiano in evening dress, with his white beard and red-white-and-green nose, seated opposite the Spanish Ambassador, and beside the latter Obregon, Minister of War; Candido Aguilar, Minister of Foreign Relations; the elegant Barragan, in a new uniform bought for the occasion, and all the other dignitaries created by the First Chief.

"Suddenly," continued Obregon, "the Spanish diplomat raised his hand to his vest, and grew pale. 'Caramba!' he exclaimed. 'My watch is gone!' It was an antique timepiece, gold and inset with diamonds, an heirloom in the Ambassador's family.

"Complete silence! First he looks at me, for I am sitting next to him. But I have an arm missing, and, as it happens, on the side nearest the Ambassador. I cannot have taken his watch! Then he looks at Candido Aguilar, Don Venustiano's son-in-law, who is sitting on the other side. Aguilar still has both his arms, but one of his hands, and, by chance the one next to the Ambassador, is almost paralyzed. Neither can he be the pickpocket! Convinced that he must say good-bye forever to his lost jewelry, the Spanish Minister sat out the rest of the meal cursing desperately under his breath.

"When they got up from the table Don Venustiano, with his usual dignified and venerable bearing, stepped up to the Ambassador and whispered, 'Here you are, but say nothing more about it.'

"The diplomat could not contain his astonishment and admiration! 'It was not the man on my right! It was not the man on my left! It was the man across the table in front of me! Oh, my dear Mr. President, quite rightly do they call you the First Chief.'"

If the laughter at a joke on Obregon had been noisy, that for a joke on Carranza resembled a cannonade.

BAN ON RACE NEWS SHARPLY ASSAILED

Bill a Blow at Liberty and Breeding of Fine Horses, Stockmen Tell the Committee.

WOULD CENSOR THE PRESS

Sponsors Are Denounced as Leading Americans by a String—Crafts Supports Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Opposition to the Sims-Sterling bill, which would prevent the transmission by mails or telegraphs engaged in interstate commerce of betting odds and their publication in newspapers, was voiced today before the House Interstate Commerce Commission by advocates of racing and breeding. This measure, advocated by the International Reform Bureau, has met with determined opposition from not only racing men, but those who object to the restriction of personal liberty.

A. J. Carroll of Louisville, Ky., counsel for the Kentucky Breeders' and Kentucky Jockey Club, made the chief argument for the opposition, while the Rev. Wilbur J. Crafts, President of the International Reform Bureau; W. W. Davis, representing the Maryland Anti-Lottery Association, and Howard C. Barber, Superintendent of the Society of the Prevention of Crime, New York, appeared for the proponents.

Mr. Carroll said that the breeding industry is vital to Kentucky. He pointed out that the first order Daniel Boone issued was for the importation of thoroughbred horses and since his time Kentucky has made this its chief industry and racing the chief pleasure. He said that the only way to develop breeding was through the races and that interest in racing and breeding would lag if there was no opportunity to lay a wager.

Sees Attempt to Bar Racing.

"This bill is only the entering wedge to stop racing altogether, he said. The people who advocate it are opposing racing in any form, and this bill, which aims to prevent the sending of news concerning racing, is intended to be the first fight to destroy racing altogether in the United States. They are willing to destroy breeding in order to destroy racing.

"If any State objects to racing let it be abolished. There is no reason why Congress should interfere with it. This bill would forbid Kentucky from sending out news of racing, which is legalized in our State. It would censor the news of the turf correspondents. It would prevent the newspapers printing the odds upon which a race was won.

"Turf writers could not express an opinion as to the merits of a horse or report what horse won the race. Where $100 is bet on a horse, $100,000 is spent on the Stock Exchanges. Would you close the Stock Exchanges? This bill is a rigid censorship of the American press, aimed to destroy breeding, and is an infringement on personal liberty."

Henry T. Oxnard of Virginia and California appeared as a breeder of horses and love of racing. He said that his business was that of making beet sugar; that his pleasure and recreation were breeding horses and racing. He declared that he was opposed to reforms prompted by professionals. He denounced the International Reform Association.

"Racing is the greatest outdoor sport," he added. "It was the sport of George Washington, who was a breeder and racer. All the Kings loved the sport and it has become a pleasure of a large number of people. I am opposed to uncontrolled racing. But this bill would prevent newspapers from telling which horse won and at what odds.

"Should we allow these 'kill joys'—that is what I call these reformers—to prevent me doing what I like, since it is innocent? They would have you pass this bill to stop racing.

Is a Question of Personal Liberty.

"It is a question of personal liberty," he concluded. "I think that the reform idea is at the peak, whether it applies to racing or anything else. The fundamental principle of the American people is that they do not want to be told and led around by a string, and they are not going to stand it any longer. I like to lay a little wager to verify by judgment. When you play poker you want to play for real money. You might just as well play for counterfeit money as not lay a little wager on a race."

A. B. Hancock of Paris, Ky., and Maurice Gallivan of Covington, Ky., also spoke against the bill. Desha Breckinridge of Lexington, editor of The Lexington Herald, sent a letter in which he said that "there is no more justification for the passage of this bill prohibiting the news of racing than there is for one to prevent the transmission of transactions of the Stock Exchange and the Board of Trade in Chicago."

The Rev. Mr. Crafts said that the bill did not interfere with racing, but merely prevented the sending of racing news into the forty-five States where racing and betting on races is prohibited by law. Howard C. Baker declared that the bill aimed to make it a little more easy to prevent commercializing human weakness.

W. W. Davis, President of the Anti-Lottery Society of Maryland, said the great evil in racing was the gambling that it incited and that 60 per cent. of the betting was done away from the tracks. In 1917, he said, $30,000,000 was bet on the tracks in Maryland.

Nothing will be done with the bill this session, leaders in the House say. There is great opposition to it, although those favoring it have started a nationwide campaign and will make a drive to force a passage in the next session of Congress.

GEORGIA DEMOCRATS ELECT 2 DELEGATIONS

ATLANTA, Ga., Wednesday, May 19.—Two delegations to the San Francisco convention were elected at the Democratic State Convention which closed its sessions here early this morning after going on record as refusing to indorse President Wilson's Administration, the Versailles treaty and the League of Nations covenant.

The majority, composed of Senator Hoke Smith and Thomas E. Watson, elected delegates uninstructed as to candidates, but ordered to vote only for a candidate favorable to the principles indorsed by the convention.

The Palmer supporters, after the convention had adjourned, elected a delegation instructed to vote for Palmer for President, as the winner of the Georgia preferential primary in the State.

Just before action in convention W. A. Cozarth, a Smith supporter, stated that the majority was willing to give approximately one-third of the State delegation to each of the three candidates in the primary, but W. H. Fleming of Augusta, a Palmer supporter, refused this.

The majority pushed through a resolution expressing "unalterable opposition" to the League of Nations covenant as brought back from Paris by President Wilson, advocating free speech, free press and local self-government, and asking repeal of all espionage, sedition and conscription laws passed during the war.

The resolutions as adopted recorded opposition to the third term idea, reaffirmed the faith of the convention in the "ancient creed" of the Democratic Party, instructed its delegates at San Francisco to vote as a unit. The vote on accepting the committee majority report was 206 to 175.

Delegates representing Attorney General Palmer and Senator Hoke Smith sat silent. The resolutions themselves were then adopted 196½ to 182½.

Former Justice Agent Asserts That Mexicans Threatened Senator.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Charles E. Jones, former Department of Justice agent, today charged Mexican agents in the United States with having threatened disgrace and death to Senator Fall, of New Mexico, chairman of the Senate committee investigating Mexican affairs, and to W. M. Hanson, one of Chairman Fall's assistants.

Mr. Jones, who made his charges before the Mexican Committee, said Raymond P. de Negri, former Mexican Consul General in New York, had told him last Fall that "they (Fall and Hanson) will be shot very soon." De Negri added, Jones said, that he had "a man in New York now to fix them."

The former Mexican Consul General, according to Jones, also asserted that "Americans having tremendous political influence with the United States Administration are assisting" in efforts to disgrace the Fall committee.

Jones said he also was told to watch "Washington for something to drop" in the matter. Most of the conversations reported were alleged to have taken place in New York during November, 1919.

Affidavits supporting his denial of the charge made by Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield that he had accepted a bribe of $5,000 to suppress prosecution against Louis Soviner, charged with maintaining a disorderly house, were made public yesterday by Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith. The affidavits, signed by Louis Soviner and his brother, Max Soviner, who was also named by Bernard Freedman, a bartender, in testimony before Commissioner Hirshfield, denied making any payment.

Earlier in the day, Mr. Smith declared that the "biggest sensation" in his investigation of alleged official corruption was imminent. "This was only done to discredit me," he said, referring to the charges put out by Commissioner Hirshfield. "The Police Department is dominated by men who figured in the Becker case, and it is only a question of time when it will be made public who they are."

Max Soviner in his affidavit corroborated Mr. Smith's assertion that the charge was a "frame-up" by saying that he had been approached by Freedman, who told him, he said, "that there was money in it," if he would say he had paid Mr. Smith to get his brother off with a light sentence. Both the Soviners denied that Mr. Smith had anything to do with getting Louis Soviner a nominal sentence of thirty days in the workhouse, after he had jumped his bail. Each declared that the member of the District Attorney's staff consulted by their lawyer was Frederick J. Groehl, then an Assistant District Attorney.

Groehl Defends Smith.

Mr. Groehl said later that Mr. Smith had nothing to do with getting for Louis Soviner a light sentence and that Mr. Smith's only connection with the case was when Soviner was first arraigned in Special Sessions in 1915. Mr. Groehl explained that his recollection was that clemency for Louis Soviner was requested by Jacob Luban, then employed by the District Attorney to get evidence in the Becker case, and that Soviner had also furnished to the District Attorney important information in that case. Mr. Groehl said that in the circumstances he believed that the District Attorney might properly extend lenient treatment to Louis Soviner and he had consulted Mr. Smith as a courtesy because he originally had the case. Mr. Groehl said that Charles A. Perkins, who had succeeded Charles S. Whitman as District Attorney, insisted that Soviner's sentence must be imprisonment and not a fine.

"Jim is as clean as a baby in this thing," said Mr. Groehl. "He never had a thing to do with it. We thought so highly of the veracity of Goldman and Freedman at the time of the Becker case that we would not use the affidavits have made for us."

Quotes Goldman Testimony.

Commissioner Hirshfield made public part of the testimony before him of Jacob L. Goldman, who corroborated Freedman's story of the payment of $5,000 to Mr. Smith. Goldman, who also figured in the Becker case as one of the District Attorney's sources of information, stated that Mr. Smith had employed him to get information about disorderly houses. During this period, Goldman said, he was arrested on a charge of pocket picking, but was released after he had telephoned Mr. Smith.

"I was introduced to Smith by a fellow named Joe Silverman," Goldman stated in his testimony before Hirshfield. "Silverman worked for Smith, and Silverman used to find out disorderly houses that had money. They used to make a raid, and Smith used to get the money out of it and quash the case."

Mr. Smith said that he never had known Goldman, much less had him in his employ. He declared that the charges made by Goldman were absolutely false.

The Soviner brothers appeared at Mr. Smith's office voluntarily. They first told their stories to reporters and then, at Mr. Smith's request, put them in affidavit form. Louis Soviner declared that he had not seen Freedman in eight or ten years; that he never had given him $5,000 or any amount of money to give to Mr. Smith or any one else. He declared that the statements by Freedman and Goldman were "malicious lies."

Max Soviner said that Freedman came to him six or seven weeks ago and told him that there was money to be made by making an affidavit that he had given money to Mr. Smith. He said he told Freedman that he was not looking to make that kind of money and to go away.

"He wanted me to make an affidavit for him because Mr. Smith convicted my brother and broke us," Max Soviner continued. "He said there was money in it for us. I didn't ask him why he wanted to frame Mr. Smith. I was sore at him and didn't want to talk to him at all."

In his testimony before Commissioner Hirshfield, Goldman stated that he "worked" for Mr. Smith until the second Becker trial. He stated that he used to get money from Mr. Smith in small amounts, whenever he told him he was "broke," and had received $126 at the time of the alleged $5,000 payment by Soviner. Goldman admitted that he was sentenced to Sing Sing Prison for forgery shortly afterward.

District Attorney Swann said that Commissioner Hirshfield was depending upon two ex-convicts for his charges against Mr. Smith. Mr. Swann recalled a charge he previously made of a "perjury school" conducted by Luban, and said anybody who would permit the man to run stuss games could get Luban's assistance.

Mr. Swann's Comment.

"I would like to know what Commissioner Hirshfield's purpose is in bringing these charges at this particular time, just as Mr. Smith, whom I have assigned to the police investigation, is bringing the prosecution," said Mr. Swann. "Is it possible that Commissioner Hirshfield may become frightened and quit, or does he think that he is performing some public service?

"The charge, if true, is outlawed, as it is eight years old by the Commissioner's own admission. In any event, why did he not permit Mr. Smith to testify in his own defense and call the Soviner brothers who are charged with making the payment?"

Commissioner Hirshfield replied to Mr. Smith's threat of an indictment by saying that nothing would please him more than to be able to appear in court in a case in which Mr. Smith was a complaining witness, as he would like to question him. "If Mr. Smith wishes to seek the indictment of Freedman, Goldman or any one else," said Hirshfield, "why does he not ask the District Attorney to assign another Assistant and present it to the new Grand Jury instead of to the Grand Jury of which Mr. Smith is the adviser?"

FOUR MORE BISHOPS NAMED BY METHODISTS

Anton Bast, Edgar Blake, G. H. Bickley and C. W. Burns Elected by General Conference.

DES MOINES, Iowa, May 18.—Three additional bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church were elected on the seventh ballot taken by the General Conference at noon today. They are Anton Bast, Copenhagen; Edgar Blake, Chicago, and George H. Bickley, Philadelphia.

Eight hundred and twenty-two ballots were cast, with 548 necessary to elect. The vote was: Anton Bast, 595; Edgar Blake, 581; George H. Bickley, 576. The next three high candidates were: F. T. Keeney, Syracuse, N. Y., 516; H. L. Smith, Detroit, 503; C. L. Mead, Denver, 453.

C. W. Burns, of Minneapolis, was elected on the ballot taken late yesterday, the result of which was announced today. His vote was 552.

Nine white bishops have now been elected, and three more are to be chosen.

The conference went on record as recommending to the Federal Government and the several State Governments vigorous and strict enforcement of the present laws against and enactment of more stringent laws to prevent lynchings.

The report of the Committee on Episcopacy as to the limitation of the power of the Bishops in assigning preachers to charges came up today. It was proposed to change the law of the Church so that the Bishop could make no appointment without the consent of a majority of the district superintendents of the conference. The committee recommended non-concurrence, and the conference adopted the report.

The conference also sustained the committee's recommendation of non-concurrence in the matter of limiting the term of office of the Bishops to eight years. Bishops will be elected for life, as heretofore.

Adoption of the plan of unification with the Methodist Church South by the General Conference is a remote possibility, according to sentiment expressed by many delegates today.

STUDENTS STRIKE AGAIN.

Walk Out of Albany Law School When Expelled Pupil Returns.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 18.—The entire student body of the Albany Law School—280 in all—went on "strike" today, for the second time within a week, in protest against the attendance of Jacob M. Goldenkoff, who had been expelled for alleged radical utterances.

Goldenkoff returned to the school last Wednesday under the protection of an injunction granted by County Judge McMullen of Schenectady restraining the officers of the school from denying him instruction. The injuncytion was vacated on technical grounds the next day by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Third Department.

Goldenkoff's attorney, Daniel H. Prior, obtained yesterday another injunction from Supreme Court Justice Hasbrouck of Kingston. Goldenkoff accompanied the Deputy Sheriff when the latter served the injunction on the school officials today. In addition to naming the officers of the school, the injunction was also directed at President McAffer of the senior class.

Dean J. Newton Fiero and Registrar John C. Watson conferred with the attorneys for the law school, and pending the outcome of their deliberations no statement was available as to their future course of action.

WOMAN ON TRIAL ADMITS SLAYING DR. ZIMMERMAN

Pleads Self-Defense, Saying She Feared He Would Kill Her for Reproaches.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 18.—Under cross-examination Miss Jennie Zimmerman, on trial, charged with the murder of her cousin, Dr. Henry Zimmerman, this afternoon testified she feared the doctor was about to kill her during their conversation in Ferry Street, just before she shot him. She said she shot in self-protection, fearing that when Dr. Zimmerman placed his hand in his pocket he was going to shoot her.

Miss Zimmerman answered all questions without faltering and retained her composure even better than during the direct examination of her relations with Dr. Zimmerman. Her testimony earlier in the day dealt with Dr. Zimmerman's relations with her on his return home on a furlough. She implored him to marry her, but he flatly refused. He had threatened to kill her, she said, before the day of the shooting, in his efforts to prevent her from bothering him further. One night in January, 1919, she attempted suicide with illuminating gas but was prevented by her sister from accomplishing her object.

She read letters showing that the doctor had repaid her only $100 of the money, between $600 and $700, which she testified yesterday she had loaned him.

On the day of the shooting, she testified, she started to visit her mother and a younger brother who was ill. Passing through Ferry Street, she saw an automobile occupied by two Manchester (N. H.) young women and Dr. Zimmerman. She saw Dr. Zimmerman talking with Miss Sadie Feldman. She asked Dr. Zimmerman for a word. He consented, left the machine and said "Let's walk over this way." When they stopped a little apart from the automobile she asked him: "Are you going to do anything for me?" He replied: "No; don't talk about it."

Miss Zimmerman testified she said: "If you don't marry me I'll tell those girls what kind of a man you are." He grew angry, she said, and replied: "Don't you dare tell that girl or I'll blow your brains out." He put his hand toward his hip pocket, at the same time repeating his threat to kill her.

SUFFRAGISTS JEER AT CHAIRMAN HAYS

Taunt Him with Failure to Induce Delaware Republicans to Ratify Amendment.

HE SPEAKS IN AN UPROAR

Hecklers Hissed as Party Leader Addresses Women of the District of Columbia.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—A party of woman suffrage workers, fresh from their unavailing labors to obtain ratification of the suffrage amendment by the Delaware Legislature, persistently heckled Will H. Hays, Republican National Chairman, when he made a speech today at a meeting of Republican women of the District of Columbia.

"As soon as you have had more experience in practical politics," Mr. Hays told the first questioner, "you will understand that party officials do not carry Legislatures around in their pockets. The Republican organization has done everything it honorably could to induce the Delaware Legislature to act. The only thing left would be for us to go down and try to buy some votes, and that isn't done any more in the Republican party."

A little later, when Mr. Hayes made a plea for Republican support because Republican officials could be counted on to insure good government, another woman rose and shouted:

"How can you make such a promise when you can't count on the Republican Legislature you already have in power in Delaware?"

Mr. Hays recounted that of the thirty-five States which already had ratified twenty-nine were Republican, and asked his questioners why they didn't call on some of the Democratic States. He predicted that if Delaware didn't ratify some other State would in time to make the amendment effective for the November election.

"Why do you say that," interrupted one of the women, "when you admit you have no influence with even Republican Legislatures?"

"I say I feel certain of it," replied the speaker, "because I believe that some one of the remaining States is going to be intelligent enough to act between now and election time."

Hisses and catcalls drowned out some of the interrogators, and as the heckling continued women in the hall greeted new interruptions with yells of "Sit down!" and "Throw him out!" but the suffrage workers persisted.

After declaring that "this kind of conduct on the part of women makes it hard to get Republican Legislatures to ratify the amendment," Mr. Hays ended his speech while two women were on their feet yelling questions at him and many others were joining in with hisses and cries of disapproval of the disturbers.

Headquarters of the National Woman's Party issued a statement tonight saying the Woman's Party had been responsible for the interruptions and that seventeen of its members had taken part in the demonstrations by questioning Mr. Hays during his speech.

"The Republican Party," the statement continued, "is in overwhelming control in the Delaware Legislature, which has been in session since March 22 but has so far failed to give the vote which will complete ratification of the suffrage amendment.

"In addition, the Republican Governors of Connecticut and Vermont have steadily refused to call special sessions of their Legislatures, which are believed to hold a majority for the amendment."

BATON ROUGE, La., May 18.—Governor Parker received a message from President Wilson today urging his interest and influence in support of Federal woman suffrage.

"May I not very respectfully urge your favorable interest and influence in the matter of the suffrage amendment," said the President. "It seems to me of the deepest national significance and importance."

Meubeuge Chief Is Acquitted.

PARIS, May 18.—Brigadier Gen. Fournier, Commander of the French fortress of Maubeuge at the beginning of the war, and six of his subordinates, court-martialed for surrendering the fortress to the Germans in September, 1914, were all acquitted today.

PARIS SMALL CHANGE FAMINE IS RELIEVED

Paper Franc and 50-Centime Notes Issued—Silver Has Entirely Disappeared.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 17.—A minor hardship of life in Paris was removed today. After months of shortage in silver change in which packets of postage stamps became most common currency banknotes for 1 franc and 50 centimes have been issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the city, which are exchangeable against bank of France notes. In the provinces this solution of the small-change difficulty was adopted early in the war, but Paris vigorously fought against it. The total disappearance of silver from circulation has, however, at last compelled the city to yield.

In a few months more discs of base metal are to be substituted for the notes, which will inevitably become in a very short time torn and dirty; but after the stamp régime anything is welcomed which gives relief.

The franc notes are about two-thirds the size of a dollar bill and the 50-centime notes about half that size. Both are well designed and carry the picture of Minerva in a hat like an inverted flowerpot, which would not disgrace the Rue de la Paix. On the back of the franc note appear reproductions of the designs of the two sides of the silver franc which it replaces.

What has become of these silver francs and half francs is one of the greatest mysteries of the war. Before the war there were millions in circulation, and fresh issues have been made as recently as three months ago. But as fast as they came from the bank they disappeared into the hoards of the peasants or over the frontiers into Switzerland and other countries, where they were melted down into ingots, of which the value at the present price of silver was much greater than the face value of the francs. In the last weeks the disappearance has been complete. But where all these millions of silver coins with the graceful figure of the sower have gone remains, in spite of these explanations, largely a mystery.

Of copper coins there still remain enough, but their purchasing power is very much reduced. Once upon a time, laments a writer in Le Matin this morning, one could buy something for a sou in Paris.

"In that happy epoch, while we had still not won the war, children could get a sou's worth of bonbons at a candy store; buns at the baker's cost a sou; the milkman would sell a sou's worth of milk; one could buy a pencil, an eraser, a bottle of ink, for a sou, or enough vegetables for a bowl of soup. One could travel a certain distance on a trolley for a sou. Even Le Matin could be bought for a sou.

"Alas! How times have changed! Today with a sou in my pocket I scoured the city to find something to buy with it. The baker shrugged his shoulders, the grocer regarded me as a curious phenomenon; the milkman showed me the door with a grimace; the bookseller laughed aloud. For four hours I wandered from shop to shop in vain. There is nothing in Paris that can be bought for a sou. With a sense of guilt, as if I were committing a theft, I threw my sou into the outstretched hat of a blind beggar and, lest he should find me out, I took to my heels and ran."

COAL DISPUTE NEAR END.

Settlement of Wage Demands Expected Today by the Government.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Settlement of the controversy over increased wage demands of anthracite coal miners which has extended over several weeks is expected by Department of Labor officials today or tomorrow.

Concessions obtained by Secretary of Labor Wilson from both miners and operators during daily conferences, officials said, have made possible a peaceful settlement.

Anthracite miners demanded wage increases on a scale with those recently granted bituminous miners. These have been modified, it was said, as a result of Secretary Wilson's insistence that an increase in coal prices would inevitably result.

Operators who opposed the increase until yesterday, it was said, have signified their willingness to accept the modifications worked out but officials refused to state the amount of the increases under consideration.

BOSS BARBERS PLAN TO SHUT ALL SHOPS

Barber-shop owners have under serious consideration a lockout of journeymen barbers and the closing of every shop in the city as a means of dealing with the situation created by the strike Monday of several thousand men, according to J. P. Carey, owner of the Grand Central Terminal Barber Shop and spokesman for the Master Barbers' Institute, composed of shops in hotels and large office buildings. Mr. Carey predicted that such action would be taken at the first sign of a spread of the strike to the hotel and financial district shops.

Union leaders said last night that the ranks of the strikers had been increased in Manhattan and the Bronx since Monday, and that 8,000 were now out in the two boroughs and 2,000 in Brooklyn. Master barbers said the number was but slightly more than 2,000. They admitted that the strikers had gained some ground yesterday, but, on the other hand, asserted that many strikers had telephoned the bosses to hold their places for them and they would be back just as soon as they felt safe from the more radical of their number.

The master barbers, more than 200 of whom were in session at Arlington Hall, St. Mark's Place, until early yesterday morning, laying plans to combat the strikers, pledged themselves to fight the union to a finish. Three district meetings were held last night, at which new members were received, and the employers again pledged themselves to stand together.

At a meeting last night of the International Master Barbers' Protective Association, at 218 Second Street, a committee of five members was chosen to meet a committee from the union at 11 o'clock this morning. The demands of the union will be granted, it was indicated, and the increase will be passed on to the public. The new scale of prices decided upon will be 25 cents for a shave and 60 cents for a haircut to a person who does not shave himself. Those who shave themselves will have to pay $1 for a haircut. At present shaves are 20 cents and haircuts 40 cents. The association is said to take in practically all of the east side master barbers and 200 of the 600 members attended last night's meeting.

Leon Worthall, organizer of the International Barbers' Union of America, will return this morning from a brief visit to Washington and will resume charge of the strike. Frank Raymond, President of Local 900 of the Barbers' Union, presided at a meeting of the strikers at Bryant Hall last night. Plans were made for continuing the strike and inducing additional men to go out.

Barber shops in hotels, office buildings and in other places so far excluded from the strike by the union, reported an unusually large business.

Self hair cutting machines and safety razors also promise to receive more attention than usual while the strike is on. Makers of these instruments have taken advantage of the situation to get their products before the public.

Many calls for barbers to do work in offices and homes were received at headquarters of the union, 1,947 Broadway. Barbers, with razors and scissors and lotions in handbags, answered these calls, it was said, charging 35 cents for a shave and 50 cents for a haircut. It was reported that in some buildings the barbers even solicited business, receiving information from the elevator starters as to where business men needing barbers might be found.

Discussing the suggestion of a lockout Mr. Carey said the employing barbers considered that it would be more economical to close the shops entirely than to try to operate under conditions that would likely prevail in the event of a real strike. He said the barbers employed in his shop at the Grand Central Terminal did not belong to the union, but that union agitators could make things so disagreeable there that it would be more desirable to close than to try to continue open.

BUDGET COMMITTEE DINNER

Herbert Hoover and Sir John Fraser Speak in Commodore.

The passage of the Executive Budget bill by the Senate was celebrated at a dinner by the National Budget Committee, of which John T. Pratt is Chairman and William H. Taft, Paul M. Warburg and Alton B. Parker are Vice Chairmen, at the Hotel Commodore last night.

Herbert Hoover said an executive budget should develop into a national affair, "expanding its activities more fully into co-ordinating the departmental functions of Government.

"There are at present twelve to fourteen Cabinet officials who must be the directors for the Executive. But consider the some twenty-seven departments outside these fields. Therefore it is important to co-ordinate and direct these miscellaneous items under some central control. This is a problem which might be studied and elaborated by the Budget Committee, but for the best results, such a study should extend over a period of years.

Sir John Fraser, F. R. G. S., said that repudiation of war debts is not advocated by any responsible Britisher. It is true we owe you money, but I am thankful to remind you that we are owed twice as much money by other countries as we owe you." As far as paying our debt goes, I may say that we are placing ourselves under a stiff budget to get rid of these obligations."

Criticism of each other by peoples of different countries accomplishes a certain amount of good, Sir John maintained, but misunderstandings arise when most of this criticism consists in "making jokes about one another." If international humorists "could be compelled by law to cease their profession for awhile, relations between countries would be improved."

Reduced from $15.

Reducing a Tan Cordovan Oxford this season is like selling a dollar for less than 100 cents. Of all styles and leathers, it is the one most in demand. Yet we're reducing ours, and reducing them very decidedly. Before the war a good Tan Cordovan Oxford fetched $11.25. So you can see for yourself what it means to be able to get them now for that price. The size range is excellent because it's our regular stock.

JOHN WANAMAKER

Twenty per cent. off Everything

(Excepting only about $50,000 of price-restricted goods, and our separate catalog stocks)

The Exceptionally Notable Movement of Dry Goods and House Furnishings has proved itself in three distinct ways in the two wonderful weeks it has been in progress.

First—It has been a boon to the city and the country adjacent thereto.

Second—Several hundreds of letters, telegrams and copies of advertising pages have been sent to inform us of similar undertakings of brother storekeepers.

Third—The storekeepers selling down their stocks at a flat discount have joined with us as cash purchasers at the mills and commission houses, and paid cash, for lower prices, aiding, in a measure, to ease the money market.

Our customers get the advantage, when we are able to make lower prices, as we turn over the goods, and at a price based on exactly what we pay, to which we add our customary profit, and then when sold take off the one-fifth.

It is time now for business people to unite in impressing upon makers of merchandise that a long patient public must have its turn in some evident concessions in the prices of all classes of goods, as well as the usual fashion reductions at this season of the year.

(Signed) John Wanamaker

The movement started by the Founder of this Store on May 3, as an endeavor to break the backbone of high prices, has met with a national response.

The word has gone far and wide and up and down all over the country, that as a result of the Wanamaker movement, undertaken for a patriotic purpose, the prices of the necessities of life are coming down.

Hundreds of merchants throughout the country have announced themselves wholeheartedly and courageously with us in this big thing.

Many speculators in raw materials, holding on tighter and tighter to their accumulated holdings so long as price quotations were still going up, were taken by surprise and are now rushing into the market to sell at the best prices they can get.

Even the doubters now act.

Even such merchants as could not look upon this movement in a whole-hearted and patriotic way are being swept into it by public opinion, and one by one the most reluctant are breaking loose with gilded bargains, clothing sales and all the strongest of the old-fashioned advertising devices to try to appease their customers who insist upon asking, "Why don't you cut down your prices as the Wanamaker Store is doing?"

There are lower prices for many things nearly everywhere, but the people of New York will long remember that it is only at Wanamaker's that, no matter what you wanted, little or big, the lowest or the highest priced things in the Store, you could get during this sale at one-fifth off—that you could choose from the whole great twenty million-dollar stocks in the Wanamaker Stores in New York and Philadelphia with a few minor exceptions, at 20 per cent discount.

INTERCHURCH DRIVE WILL RUN A YEAR

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Announces Expense Budget of $9,000,000.

OUTLAY IS CUT SHARPLY

After July 15 Cost of Campaign Is to be Held at $150,000 a Month.

The Interchurch World Movement will be continued until May 15, 1921. This was decided yesterday at the second day of a conference of the General Committee of the Interchurch with representatives of the boards and agencies of the thirty co-operating denominations. A budget calling for $9,000,000 was adopted. This in detail is as follows:

Current expenses, not to exceed $150,000 a month, July 15, 1920, to May 15, 1921	$1,500,000
Estimated interest charges	600,000
Continuation campaign expenses, May 15 to July 15, 1920	500,000
Running expenses of movement, May 1 to July 15, 1921	2,000,000
Balance of budget of 1919-1920	5,000,000
Total required to May 15, 1921	$9,600,000

The conference, behind closed doors, as it was on Monday, was held in the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, at Thirty-first Street. It adjourned at 6:30 o'clock last evening after debates extending through three sessions each day. Among those who sat through every moment of the convention was John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and it was he who presented the budget, as Finance Committee Chairman for the New York drive.

The continuing of the movement will give opportunity for the completion of religious surveys now under way and for the pushing of a financial campaign to a climax by July 15 of this year. Heretofore the movement has depended on the underwriting by the thirty co-operating denominations, receiving a loan without security of $7,295,622.

Mr. Rockefeller declared that the budget presented was conservative. He analyzed the running expenses of $2,000,000 in the following estimated amounts:

To May 15, 1920	$1,000,000
May 15 to June 15, 1920	750,000
June 15 to July 15, 1920	250,000

After July 15 the expenses of the organization are to be so adjusted as not to exceed $150,000 a month. During the sixteen months of its existence the maximum of expenses was $1,000,000 a month.

The presiding officer at the conference was James M. Speers, who succeeded to the Chairmanship of the Executive Committee when John R. Mott left for Europe recently.

HELD GOVERNMENT PAPERS.

BOSTON, May 18.—James P. Bosdan, editor of the International News Bureau, Inc., was held for the Federal Grand Jury today on charges of larceny of papers from the files of the Department of Justice. He furnished $5,000 bonds.

Bosdan was arrested a week ago during a raid on his home at Newton in which certain papers were taken. In a statement which he issued today, he said:

"The so-called government records seized at my home have been in my possession since November, 1919, with the knowledge and approval of George E. Kelleher, superintendent of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice."

Bosdan said these records related to the case of Dr. William K. Dean, who was killed at his farm at East Jaffrey, N. H., in August, 1918, after reporting to the Department of Justice certain lights and activities which he associated with German espionage operations.

Superintendent Kelleher denied any knowledge that any government records had been in the possession of Bosdan prior to the present investigation.

SUES MRS. HOPPIN AS RIVAL.

Mrs. F. J. Goodwin Says Husband's Affections Were Alienated.

Mrs. Marie d'Ablemont Leydier Hoppin, who was married on Sept. 13, 1916, to Samuel Howland Hoppin, a lawyer at 48 Cedar Street, was sued in the Supreme Court yesterday by Mrs. Charlotte C. West Goodwin for $50,000 damages for alienating the affections of Francis J. Goodwin. The complaint alleges that Mrs. Goodwin and her husband lived happily together until 1917, and that Goodwin's affections were alienated in that year and Mr. Hoppin has kept his affections ever since.

In behalf of Mrs. Hoppin, who lives at 51 West Eighty-fifth Street, it was said yesterday that there was no basis for the suit. Service of the complant was accepted by her attorneys, Theall & Beam. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Hoppin was performed by the Rev. Dr. S. Stuart Chambers of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament. Mr. Hoppin is a member of the Union Club, the Sons of the Revolution and the Society of Colonial Wars. He was graduated from Harvard in 1879.

REACH DEADLOCK ON NATIONAL GUARD

House Conferees on Army Bill, Urging State Control, Will Report Disagreement.

SENATE COMPROMISE OFFER

Ready to Accept Optional Federal Organization, and May Drop Voluntary Training.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Inability of the conferees on the Army Reorganization bill to agree on the provision for organization of the National Guard today caused them to decide to report a disagreement. House conferees will ask the House to take a vote on the question as a means of instructing them how to proceed.

The deadlock which was reached over the National Guard provision, with the consequent delay in final enactment of the measure, was taken as an indication that it is unlikely the bill will become law before the convention recess of Congress.

Under the Senate bill, the National Guard was organized under the army clause of the Constitution, and would therefore have been primarily a Federal force rather than a State force. Provision was made for the use of the militia as State police, but always the War Department would have had control, and the National Guard would have been represented on the General Staff of the army.

The House plan made the National Guard a State force, as in the past, with provisions for its incorporation into the Federal army much the same as under existing law.

In an effort to reach a compromise the Senate conferees offered to let each State have the option of having its guard organized as a part of the Federal force or as a purely State organization. They further offered to give up the Senate provision for voluntary military training if the House conferees would yield on the National Guard issue.

Epidemics or Disinfection, Which?

If everyone would recognize the real menace of disease germs and depend on frequent disinfection to prevent them from spreading destruction, there would be no epidemics.

But as long as there are people who, through carelessness, indifference or unbelief, serenely ignore the invisible enemy to health, there will be grippe, influenza, typhoid, diphtheria and all the other contagious diseases.

Do your part to prevent the spread of contagious disease. Use

Lysol Disinfectant

No germ life can exist where the smallest indication of Lysol Disinfectant is present. Kills disease germs at the moment of application, or prevents their creation.

Use Lysol Disinfectant at home and in the office. A few drops sprinkled wherever germs might lurk or be created is precaution against serious illness.

Remember, there is but one genuine Lysol Disinfectant—made, bottled, signed, and sealed by Lehn & Fink, Inc.

ASSERTS PENROSE INSPIRED SIMS

Daniels Declares Admiral's Charges Almost Identical with Those Made in 1918.

QUOTES SPEECH BY SENATOR

Penrose Declares That If There Is Resemblance It Is Due to Both Stating Truth.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania and not Rear Admiral Sims originated the basic charges against the Navy Department contained in the Admiral's letter of Jan. 7, Secretary Daniels asserted today before the Senate committee investigating the naval conduct of the war.

The Secretary also said that Admiral Sims's "dearest ambition" was blasted when permission was denied him to accept appointment as an honorary member of the British Admiralty.

Mr. Daniels recalled that Senator Penrose in a speech in the Senate Aug. 24, 1918, declared that procrastination on the part of the Secretary had delayed the end of the war at least three months and cost $15,000,000,000 and many lives. The words used by Senator Penrose were almost identical with those used by Admiral Sims more than a year later, Mr. Daniels said.

"When Admiral Sims appeared before your Committee," said the Secretary, "and made the grave charge that the Navy Department's delay had cost $15,000,000,000, lengthened the war months, and other wild and preposterous statements, I thought he was voicing his own vivid imagination and that these figures were original with him. Since I gave an exhaustive and complete answer to this charge, which every responsible Admiral in the Navy has sworn was without foundation, I have been informed that it was not Admiral Sims who originated this charge, but that it was first made in the Senate on August 24, 1918, by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania.

"It attracted no attention whatever then and I do not recall seeing any reference to it in the press. Certainly if my attention had been called to it, the answer would have been as easy then as now."

Daniels Quotes Penrose Speech.

Secretary Daniels quoted from Senator Penrose's speech, which was in part as follows:

"It is easily demonstrated that the Secretary of the Navy lost at least three months, and very likely much more time, before he got started on his naval preparedness. This fleet of destroyers, which ought to have been gotten ready long before they were, are now being built, and very few of them have been turned out.

"In my opinion, this is due very largely to the procrastination of the Secretary of the Navy, who for some reason or other was unable to reach conclusions or decisions about the matters submitted to him. At least 150 days elapsed before even many of the preliminary contracts were awarded.

"Some people in close touch with the Department, assuming that the war has been costing this country and the Allies some $100,000,000 a day, estimate that some $15,000,000,000 or more have been expended merely to maintain a situation until the Navy Department could come to some conclusion, not to mention the losses in deaths and casualties on the different fronts."

"Either Admiral Sims is a plagiarist and appropriated his views and charges from Senator Penrose, or by the new science of mental telepathy the views of the Senator from Pennsylvania were communicated to Admiral Sims by wave lengths of some other wireless method unknown to those not familiar with occult science. Penrose comes from Pennsylvania and Sims was appointed to the Naval Academy from that State. Did they collaborate or exchange mental telegrams?

"This mental telepathy not only went from Senator Penrose's active brain to the dome of Admiral Sims, imparting figures, but his ouija board communicated the same character of ideas and exact words to some other witnesses who have been heard by your committee. Several officers, who were so obsessed by their own superior wisdom that they thought the Secretary of the Navy ought to 'sign here' whenever they presented a plan they had written out, have told you I was guilty of 'procrastination.' Where did they get that idea and that particular word? See the speech above quoted of Senator Penrose. You gentlemen of the committee must have been surprised at the parrot-like repetition of the word 'procrastination' used by several witnesses.

"All these charges are contained in Senator Penrose's speech of August, 1918, and you might have saved thousands of reams of paper by investigating his brief accusations, which his plagiarists or hypnotized successors have elaborated into many hundred thousand words."

Says Senator Was Imposed Upon.

The Secretary charged that Senator Penrose "was imposed upon by some informant who is almost as reckless in his figures as Admiral Sims was in his accusations.

"The telepathic wireless," he continued, "must have been working clear across the ocean, for Sims was telling practically the same thing to Americans who were in Europe. Is it not rather a remarkable coincidence that Admiral Sims in his speech to the American newspaper men in London Oct. 11, expressed precisely the same idea? He said, as quoted in The London Times of Oct. 12, 1918:

> Another idea was sometimes in the American mind that the American Navy had been doing the bulk of the business over here—at least a half. That was not correct. There were about 5,000 anti-submarine craft operating day and night, and the American craft numbered 160, or 3 per cent. The figures were about the same in the Mediterranean.
> Again, Americans seemed to regard it is a miracle of their navy that they had got a million and a half troops here in a few months and had protected them on the way. "We did not do that," said Admiral Sims. "Great Britain did." (Cheers) "She brought over two-thirds of them and escorted a half. We escorted only one-third of the merchant vessels that came here."

Mr. Daniels proceeded: "It is also worthy of note that it was at this very time that Penrose was making his speech Sims was writing to Captain Pratt threatening an investigation of the conduct of the war.

"His charge that the Secretary of the Navy lost at least three months, and very likely much more, before he got started on his naval preparedness, and that at least 150 days elapsed before even many of the preliminary contracts were awarded, is answered fully and completely by the records of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, which I will present. It shows that bids were invited for all the destroyers and nearly all the other vessels in the 'three year program' appropriated for in the act of Aug. 29, 1916, on the day that bill was passed; that when more money became available a number of additional destroyers were contracted for in March, 1917, just before the declaration of war; that within a few weeks after war was declared we had, either under construction or contracted for, every destroyer that American yards, with their then existing facilities, could build—that is, 117 of this type of vessel, more than twice as many as we previously had in the navy."

Secretary Daniels, after saying that Admiral Sims's "highest and dearest ambition" was blasted when permission was refused for him to accept an appointment as an honorary member of the British Admiralty, added that the Admiral expressed "deep regret and embarrassment" when the permission was denied because the tender had come from the "King himself."

Although the offer was without precedent, Mr. Daniels said, it could not be accepted because it was "un-American" and had not been made to representatives of the other Allies.

Mr. Daniels devoted much of the day to a resumé of the Navy Department's war construction activities, comprising approximately 1,000 vessels, nearly three times as many as there were in the entire navy when the war started. He paid high tribute to Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, Chief Constructor, who, he said, had no superior in the world.

The Secretary announced at the conclusion of today's session that he would end his direct statement Thursday afternoon. Chairman Hale said that the committee would attempt to conclude the cross-examination by Saturday night and then would adjourn for a few days to enable Rear Admiral Sims to study the testimony before he was called to testify in rebuttal. There will be no session of the committee tomorrow.

Coincidence of Fact and Truth, Says Penrose.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 18.—"If Admiral Sims's statements in reference to the Navy Department bear any resemblance to mine it is merely because we were both relating facts and the truth."

That was the reply made today by Senator Penrose to the testimony given by Secretary Daniels concerning himself. Senator Penrose also paid a tribute to the work performed during the war by Samuel M. Vauclain, President of the Baldwin Locomotive Works. He said in effect that Mr. Vauclain had brought order out of chaos in the Navy Department.

"I have no desire to mix in the controversy over the conduct of the war by the Navy Department," Mr. Penrose said. "The war is over, and with it the vast aggregation of incompetency, extravagance and inefficiency which characterized the greater part of the Administration.

"I am not acquainted with Admiral Sims, and have never had any communication with him. If his statements bear any resemblance to mine it is merely because we were both stating facts and the truth. I believe I did say casually, during the course of a debate, that the greatest inefficiency had prevailed in the Administration of the Navy Department, not only during our preparations for war, but during the preliminary stages.

"This ignorance and incapacity at times was almost incredible, and in my opinion, it can be mathematically calculated that delays incurred thereby resulted in actual waste or loss of several hundred millions of dollars and several thousands of lives of American soldiers. The detailed figures of these were given by me in the brief speech referred to.

"These delays arose chiefly because of infirmity of purpose and absence of business knowledge and ability on the part of the Secretary of the Navy. The facts are familiar to all men who had business with the Navy Department during those days. Contracts for iron and steel products and other necessities connected with the navy were carried home night after night without decisions being rendered.

"The delays were due to sheer ignorance and incapacity, and I know of no problem concerning the department—and I knew details pretty well—that could not have been promptly and honestly disposed of, and with full advantage to the Government, by a conference of any half dozen business men in the country taking the matter up for deliberation and determination.

"Later on the Navy Department functioned much better, and the chief reason for the change was the leadership of Samuel M. Vauclain and his associates on volunteer boards, whose decisions came to be followed promptly and without question."

HENRIETTA BULTE FOUND IN MOVIE CITY

The country-wide search for 16-year-old Henrietta Bulte has ended. Word came to the Bureau of Missing Persons at Police Headquarters yesterday that the girl had been found in Los Angeles, Cal., where she was seeking to satisfy her ambition to enter the moving pictures. The girl, in the custody of Captain Williams, of the Chicago Police Department, spent Monday night in Juvenile Hall in Los Angeles, and yesterday, in charge of a New York policewoman, started back to her home, 116 East 116th Street.

On April 12 Henrietta Bulte was sent by her father, Louis Bulte, a cigar maker, to a Harlem bank to deposit $265. She dropped out of sight without having visited the bank. The girl was tired of school, it was said, and after she left home it was remembered by her parents that she had two ambitions—to visit Cuba, her father's native country, and to become a moving picture star.

Several weeks ago Mr. Bulte received an anonymous letter notifying him that if he wanted to see his daughter again he must signify a willingness to pay a ransom by placing an advertisement in The New York Globe. This he did, but nothing came of it.

A Miss Collette of this city, about a month after the girl had disappeared, said that eight or ten days previously she had had as a room mate in the Y. W. C. A., at 59 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, a girl who said her name was Vivian Viniani, whom she afterward identified by photograph as the Bulte girl. On this clue a policewoman was sent from this city to Chicago and the Chicago police took up the trail there.

According to information received here Henrietta Bulte has told the police that she began her journey West immediately after she left her home for the bank. From Chicago she said she went to Dallas and then to Fort Worth. After a brief stay in each place she went to Needles, Cal., and thence to the Hollywood district of Los Angeles. Although she had planned to enter motion picture work she had made no attempt to do so when found.

RATE HEARINGS OPEN.

Express Company Submits Figures to Commerce Commission.

At the opening of the hearing before Examiner E. H. Barclay of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the application of the American Railway Express for an increase in rates, George C. Taylor, President of the American Express Company, and J. H. Butler, Manager of the Loss and Damage Department of the express company, submitted figures to support the request for increased rates.

Representatives of more than a score of business men's associations from various parts of the country at the hearing were agreed on the necessity for an increase in rates if efficient service was to be maintained, and their objections were confined to a few parts of the proposed schedule.

Another Event
in Fifth Avenue History

The removal next Monday of the Fifth Avenue Office of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York to its new banking quarters at the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue and 44th Street, calls to mind the remarkable transformation which has taken place in Fifth Avenue within a short score of years.

In 1898 when the Fifth Avenue Office—then the Fifth Avenue Trust Company—was first established, business did not extend much above Thirty-fourth Street. North of Forty-second the Avenue was entirely residential. The carriage-and-pair were fashionable; the motor car was still a novelty.

Within twenty years, Fifth Avenue—one of the famous thoroughfares of the world—has become notable for the beauty and distinction of its buildings, the variety and character of its shops, the diversity of its interests, the fascinating panorama of its traffic.

The Fifth Avenue Office of this Company has shared in the growth which has come to Fifth Avenue. The removal of the Office to its new location is typical of the constant changes along the Avenue, and is indicative of a purpose to keep pace with the fullest development of this section of the city.

THE RESPONSIBILITY.

The proposed bonus raid on the United States Treasury cannot get through Congress except it be put through by the Republicans of the House and the Republicans of the Senate. As the Republican Party is in control of both branches of Congress it cannot escape sole responsibility if this scandalous looting scheme is enacted into law.—The Sun and New York Herald.

Our neighbor is right beyond all question and dispute. If the "bonus raid" is authorized, the Republican Party, being in control of both branches of Congress, "cannot escape the sole responsibility." It is also a truth from which there is no escape that since the Republicans have the majority control in the Senate and since at all times a sufficient number of Democrats to make up a two-thirds majority were ready and eager to vote with them for the ratification of the Treaty, the full responsibility for its rejection falls upon the Republican Senators. The Indiana Republicans are heretics. They scoff at the true and sound doctrine laid down by our prelatical neighbor, The Sun and New York Herald, and impudently attempt to put upon the President the sole responsibility for defeating the Treaty and the League.

Our neighbor's doctrine of Republican responsibility applies also to Government expenditures and the excess profits taxes and surtaxes. The Republicans have been in control of appropriations and of the ways and means to raise revenue for a full year and more. Yet the Government is annually spending $2,500,000,000 unnecessarily, wastefully, and the whole business of the country and all of its people are taxed oppressively and destructively to pay costs which the Republicans should have made it their first business to cut down.

RAILWAY WAGES AND SERVICES.

No one knows more than the Railway Managers' Association about railway wages, not even the unions, and the Railway Labor Board cannot fail to be impressed by the large measure of agreement between those two authorities on the subject. The country is glad to remark the fair and even generous temper of the employers, and knows that the unions which are working deserve such reward as the Labor Board may decide is their due. Just as the Interstate Commerce Commission has arrears to make up on the rates which ought to have been raised years ago, so the Labor Board has arrears to make up regarding the wages which ought to have been readjusted months ago. If the rates had been raised, the wages would have been raised. The requests of the men were practically denied by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and were formally denied by the Director General and by the companies pending their resumption of private management. The question before the Labor Board, therefore, is rather what is due the men than whether anything is due.

The country will receive the award of the board in the same temper that it received the Managers' recommendations, regardless of the fact that the increase of wages means an increase of rates. The full demand of the men means a labor bill of some six billions. Probably much less would be accepted. The damage through not getting service, and the excess cost of having railway work done by motor, has disillusioned the country regarding the service done to shippers by refusing rates high enough to prevent railway men from seeking other occupations. On that point the evidence is conflicting. The petitioning unions are known to be maintaining the service the country is receiving, but it is not clear how many "outlaws" are merely idling, or have found other work. It is the duty of the Labor Board to decide how great or natural the shortage of railway labor is, and what attractions are necessary to keep the railway men on duty. As the Managers' Chairman said, the railways do not need to meet in money the wages of other occupations. The service on the railways will hold the men against somewhat higher wages elsewhere. The men know that the war schedules of wages are under readjustment and that the railway schedules are a better reliance for steady workers.

The railway men are fortunate in having their pay fixed when the country is in a mood to pay anything in reason for railway service. They could not capitalize their jobs more advantageously, and must expect this to be as plain to others as to themselves. In due time it may be expected that railway wages will decline with others, if there is a general fall with the cost of living. But other wages will fall first and further. It may be hoped that the Labor Board will not need so long to make up its mind as the Interstate Commerce Commission has required about rates. The Commission cannot act judiciously on rates until after the decision about wages, and prudent haste by the Labor Board will do double duty in quieting the country's industrial troubles.

A PLATFORM REFERENDUM.

It was an ingenious and interesting notion of that most unconventional of Chairmen, Mr. WILL HAYS, to take a sort of limited referendum of Republican and other opinion in regard to the policies which should be proclaimed and favored at Chicago. Under his urging, the Advisory Committee on Policies and Platforms issued twelve questionnaires, which have been republished in a handsome pamphlet. Of these questionnaires 100,000 copies were printed. It speaks well for intelligent interest in public affairs that they have been studied and that answers to them have been made by many organizations and experts. Indeed, they are for the expert, and can't be expected to throw a very vivid light on Republican feeling.

That apple of discord, the Versailles Treaty and the covenant of the League of Nations, was, of course, not thrown into the party arena by the discreet Mr. HAYS or his representatives. A referendum of Republican opinion on that subject is the last thing that is wanted; and it will require a genius for compromise, evasion and circumlocution not evident in the platform of Indiana Republicans to make a neutral color out of the white, black and red tints of squabbling Republican statesmen. One of the questionnaires, that on immigration, is already print wasted. The Chairman of the House Immigration Committee regrets that it is impossible to build an Immigration bill till after the political conventions have been held.

Was it good judgment to ask Republicans or anybody else to say what they think about the causes and the high cost of living or about Federal taxation? What have the Republicans done to bring down that cost or that taxation? They have almost entirely broken the hopes and pledges which gave them control of this Congress. They have determined to postpone until after the election the reductions of expenditure, the deflation of public employés, the indispensable systemization of appropriation and revenue that are of the first necessity. They are dallying with a bonus.

What will the cynical old heads that are really to determine the platform care for these questionnaires or the answers to them? To them they are the merest junk. Platforms are not made in that way. Meanwhile, the members of the Executive Committee of the Republican National Advisory Committee on Policies and Platform, the Chairmen of its sub-committees and the Congress members of it are in solemn consultation at Washington. To be busy is to be happy.

AMERICA AND "ABROAD."

The expected objections and bogies have been set up against the proposal to use $500,000,000 of American money in helping the people of Eastern Europe to struggle to their feet. What, grant such a sum to others before caring for our own? Is it to be supposed that Congress, hesitating over the difficulties of a bonus to men who have votes, can be persuaded to give aid to men who have none? Then there is the alleged fear of doing something that might look like a League of Nations at work with America. Senator BORAH perceives the dangerous entering wedge. HIRAM JOHNSON is certain to take fright at the camel's head within the tent-flap. There is, besides, the unwillingness of certain opponents of the League to make even a tacit confession that the world would have been better off if they had acted differently. Not a cent if it means that they inferentially plead guilty!

All these petty obstacles ought to be swept aside. We are in the presence of an emergency so great that small ideas go ill with it. It is not an act of pure charity that is asked of Congress. The money pledged will be strictly in self-defense. We cannot allow a plague-spot between the Baltic and the Black Sea to go uncleansed and hope ourselves to remain immune. Deadly infectious diseases leap over national boundaries. Even the sea is no sure barrier to them. European typhus may threaten to become American any day. The Health Commissioner of New York, Dr. COPELAND, is on no fool's errand when he crosses the ocean to study the danger on the spot. It is we who should be the fools if we did not take the steps necessary to establish a powerful first line of sanitary defense. And there are morbid political conditions and social poisons more to be dreaded than physical scourges. If the prostrate nations of Middle Europe are not aided to set going again their industrial and commercial machinery, they may in black despair let loose explosives which would shake us out of our complacent feeling of far-off security. The United States cannot longer live in isolation. We are inextricably bound up with all the world.

Not merely as an obligation, but an opportunity, ought Congress to regard the appeal now made to it in behalf of stricken peoples. To make to them advances on long-time credit whereby they will be enabled to start their factories and restore their transportation, and set trade flowing freely again, would really be the noblest of investments for the United States. An equal sum could not be laid out to better advantage anywhere. The essential thing—the imperative thing—is to deal with the whole matter in the largest spirit. Partisanship should be hissed off the stage when it is a question at once of humanity and a sound international policy. Let the Congressional leaders of both parties be asked to co-operate in the great undertaking—LODGE with UNDERWOOD, ex-Speaker CLARK with Speaker GILLETT. Provided everything that is mean and self-seeking and parochial can be put aside, to start with, Congress may rise to the height of the great opportunity.

THE FRENCH LEAVE FRANKFORT.

There was once a King of France who, with a certain number of thousands of men, marched up a hill and then marched down again. Superficially, the evacuation of Frankfort, Darmstadt, Homburg and Hanau just completed by General DEGOUTTE'S army resembles that celebrated manœuvre; but there is a considerable difference. The French marched to Frankfort because the Germans had violated their agreement and concentrated heavy forces in the Ruhr district. The French leave Frankfort because the Germans have reduced their armies on the Ruhr to the permitted strength.

There may have been some French annexationists who would have liked to stay in Frankfort, just as there were many American "liberals" who would have been glad to see the French stay in Frankfort in order to give some excuse for the cry of imperialism. But the body of French sentiment remains cold to the annexationists, and the French troops have promptly kept the promise made by Mr. MILLERAND when they advanced. They stayed in Frankfort as long as they were needed and then left. And by their advance they served notice on the Germans that the process of persistent violation of the Treaty could not go on forever without punishment. The net result of the episode has been to show the Germans that they are expected to keep their word, that penalties will be imposed on them if they continue to break it; but that there will be no encroachments upon German rights if they live up to the Treaty. It was a lesson that was badly needed in Germany, and that may do some good elsewhere.

MORE THAN FOUR HUNDRED.

The day is past when the social fears and aspirations of New Yorkers afforded an easy mark for the personal journalist; but the change has been so gradual, and so complex in its workings, that we have as yet imperfectly realized it.

Doubtless there was once a smart set whose deeds constituted topics for the town. It may even have been numerically limited to four hundred. Certainly there was a succession of gentlewomen, great ladies in the full sense of the term, each of whom in turn was recognized as leader of metropolitan society. We had something that corresponded, however remotely, to the Court circle of a European metropolis. Inclusion within the reputed charm of the more or less suppositious circle was the ambition of a lifetime. The doings there—especially the misdoings—were thus of keen local and even of nation-wide interest. For the insider there was the ever present possibility that his standing might be lost; for those on the social borderland there was a prospective interest in the closets, skeletoned or untenanted, of prospective acquaintances; for the country at large there was a desire, whether prompted by awe or by envy, to know all that was most glamourous or most shocking.

What has made the change? The fundamental factor, in all probability, is a matter of mere numbers. Instead of four hundred, the socially registered now number upward of thirty thousand. When the last of the great ladies died, almost a decade ago, no one appeared to take her place. So vast a flock is doubtless beyond the skill and authority of even the most accomplished leader. It has become a commonplace that there is no "New York society." In the process of expansion and disintegration doubtless much has been lost. A closely knit social fabric is a great tonic to manners and a not inconsiderable strait-jacket for morals. In the eighteen eighties and nineties "tone" was a good word, and it must now be admitted that there is distinctly less of it. But there has also been a gain. It no longer matters superlatively what any one says about any one. Reputations are made, and social currency established, by those who know men and women for what they are. Regret as we may the divinity that hedges a "Court" circle, that is the democratic, the true and human way.

In the hinterland, meanwhile, the legend of the hallowed circle persists, and memory of unhallowed conduct. More journals exist than ever before for recording the manners of the metropolis. But their home circulation is only some 5 per cent. of the total. They are most eagerly devoured by the good folk who rejoice in the movies. It is in the movies, in fact, that the legend of metropolitan splendor and depravity mainly persists. What has been called the Fear Market, in which the dread of scandal was converted into cash, is a thing dying or dead.

THE BROOKLYN INSTITUTE.

For a quarter of a century A. AUGUSTUS HEALY was President of the Board of Trustees of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, and his resignation takes place at the moment when the underlying idea of the institute has been recognized by the American public as the one source of hope and comfort for the future. Education, and especially education in the arts and sciences, is the modern weapon with which Americans are fighting the always fierce battle against barbaric and purely materialistic instincts. Science is counted upon to do constructive work in building a race of human beings with sane minds in sound bodies to make a pleasant and healthful world. Art is asked to play its important part in the industries of the country and fortify them against attacks from without. Art and science must speak with the tongues of men.

The Brooklyn Institute was founded upon this idea, and during his long term of office Mr. HEALY has encouraged a happy balance of idealism with the practical growth of the institution toward a type of usefulness increasingly concerned with the active life of the city. Such idealism is more than ever essential to hold the multitudinous details of education in a true relation to the spirit of wisdom. The pioneers in the work done by the Brooklyn Institute laid a sound foundation.

Fortunately for the future of the institution and Brooklyn, Mr. FRANK L. BABBOTT, who succeeds Mr. HEALY as President of the Board of Trustees, not only is highly trained in the necessary work of administration but is deeply initiated in the finer part of the institute's service to the public. His study of art has led him to clear discrimination of aesthetic values, and no standard will fall under his leadership.

THE AERIAL DEFENSE BILL.

It should not be necessary to cite the example of Great Britain to provide for the United States an aviation organization that shall accomplish the double purpose of giving the country an efficient air force for defense and of encouraging the manufacturers, without whose co-operation there can be no air force at all, or at best the shadow of one. Soon after the war an Air Ministry was established in Great Britain, with the result that preparation for another war, if it must come, is far advanced. It is true that the British appropriations, while liberal, have not been what was asked for; it also seems to be true that the head or chief of the Air Ministry does not exercise an undivided responsibility, an untrammeled authority, which is well, no doubt. But the point is that an effective air force was assured when the separate Ministry was organized and British aviation is in the ascendant today, so that paramountcy in the air is attainable. Great Britain plans to be mistress of the two elements in which navies now make war.

How is it with the United States, which promises to have a fleet on the sea that will soon be second to none, provided she can fight as well in the air as any other Power? In the aerial competition the United States is far to the rear of Great Britain, and it will be a long stern chase to catch up. It is the judgment of specialists who are not partisans of either the army or the navy that the United States should have a separate Air Department if aviation is not to remain under a cloud in this country. Some of us have been too optimistic about the future of aeronautics, reading too much of promise in sporadic private enterprise and well advertised exhibitions.

The new bill, which the Senator from Indiana withdrew soon after introduction, proposed an Air Department, and now Congress is called upon to take up the Aerial Defense bill of Representative JULIUS KAHN, an intelligent and seasoned champion of preparedness. The title reads: "A "bill to make more effectual provi- "sion for the aerial defense of the "United States and to provide for "the concentration of national air "strength." It is bound to meet with opposition from the present War and Navy Departments because it would turn over to the Bureau of Air their aerial equipment and make them dependent upon the new organization for material and personnel. The bureau would be what might be called a supply department, but it would have charge of construction and training. At the same time, the Kahn bill provides that the bureau "shall not en- "gage in any aerial operation of a "military or naval character" independently of the War or Navy Department. When hostilities come the supreme and directing commanders are to be officers of the two services. There is a qualification which will have to be explained and defended: it is that the President may himself direct aerial operations on occasion. The commissioning of officers for the air forces is to be confined to those who have had at least three years as "qualified" flying officers, a rule that might shut out competent aviation officers who are now in the service. There are other features of the bill, which would make the bureau supreme in the country in aeronautics, that will be assailed in Congress by those who want the army and navy to have their own services. As drawn, it leaves room for improvement, but Mr. KAHN has made an honest attempt to give the United States a skilled flying force for defense.

A HIGHLY CREDIBLE MEXICO.

In BLASCO IBANEZ the genius of a born reporter has not been submerged by the genius of the novelist. Rather, it has been enhanced; the daily gleanings of fact, which are necessarily the chief output of a steady-going correspondent, are vitalized.

Señor IBANEZ expressly disclaims historic or even reportorial accuracy. He realizes that the broad national forces at work, and also the personal motives of the leading figures in the revolution, are and must be for the present latent and undecipherable. Yet Mexico, like all Latin-American countries, is a whispering gallery of gossip, a mart of personal anecdote, a theatre of illuminating burlesque and satire. It has been his privilege to meet and converse with many of the leading personages of the conflict, and his great reputation as a man of letters has of necessity acted as an open sesame. He has frequented drawing rooms and cafés, mingled with street mobs and the crowds of the arena.

It would not be strange if, thanks to his genius for reading character and divining motives, his articles present more of the essential truth than will appear a generation hence in the pages of history. They are the first comprehensive account of what is happening across the border, and in the main undoubtedly veracious and credible.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Why Food Prices Are High.

Information of a highly disquieting kind in regard to farming and farmers in the State of Michigan has been collected and embodied in a report by a field agent of the Federal Bureau of Crop Estimates. Most important of the facts presented is that 18,283 farms in Michigan, or almost 9 per cent. of all there are in the State, will lie idle this year. Differently put, 1,663,000 acres of fertile land will produce nothing to meet the demands of a hungry world, and, as a result of the drift of the rural population to the cities, 30,000 farmhouses are without inhabitants, some 10,000 of them having been vacated within a year.

To make the matter worse, of the men left on the farms a large percentage are over 50 years of age, and, counting all the men and boys above 15 years old still remaining on the land, there is only one for each eighty-two acres, which is far from enough to insure effective cultivation.

Conditions in Michigan, of course, are somewhat unlike those existing in some other States, owing to the recent enormous development there of industrial plants paying attractive wages to men who, like most young farmers, are handy with tools and familiar with machinery. But the same or a similar situation does exist in many parts of the country, and it is this that furnishes what justification there is—which is not a little—for the current prophecies of food scarcity next Winter and food prices for us all that will cause the present food prices, high as they are, to be remembered with regret as cheap.

Remedies Hard to Find.

Nothing of much promise in the way of cure for the ills and dangers he describes is offered or suggested by the Government's investigator. He says, as anybody might say, that something must be done, but his proposal is no more definite or practical than that present conditions are to be reversed through an increase in the number of food producers and a corresponding decrease in the number of non-producers.

That is simple, but it is not easy to bring about as long as there is no method under our laws as they are—or as we would have them—by which a man can be prevented from doing the sort of work he finds most profitable or most to his taste. Farmers as yet will not, and probably they cannot, offer to their hired men wages as high as they can get in automobile factories or in dozens of employments to be found in towns and cities. Then there is the difference in attractiveness between urban and rural life—a difference which, in spite of all that has been said and sung in favor of the country, always has resulted in the migration of the ambitious, the enterprising, toward the place where are what they consider the larger opportunities and the more desirable rewards for ability. Starvation, or even real hunger, would drive a lot of the urbanites back to the country, of course, as it already has done in Europe, but apparently nothing else will do so. Moreover, the country does not extend a particularly warm welcome to the city worker with a family unless he has money enough to buy land and keep himself going till his first crops mature. There are frequent references to "abandoned farms," but really, though many farms are unoccupied, none is abandoned in the sense that nobody owns it.

It's Risky Being a Prodigy.

Another PAUL MORPHY, and one even more precocious than was the original, has appeared in France, but before the parents of little SAMUEL RESCHEWSKI exploit, or even exhibit through the European capitals, the child's surprising abilities as a chess player they would do well to read and carefully ponder the biography of the man who was, probably, the greatest master that ever lived of the best game ever invented.

It is, indeed, by no means certain that MORPHY'S untimely and pathetic death resulted from the mental strains incidental to the displays of his genius. As a matter of fact, the chroniclers of his triumphs agree in stating that he won them with the ease that always or usually marks the achievements of genius. Still, he did die before he had a chance to prove himself something more than the most brilliant of chess players, and before he died he did fall into a condition such as popularly is ascribed to making upon the brain streaks like those involved in playing, blindfold, many simultaneous games of chess.

That the prodigy who is astonishing the Parisians plays chess without seeing the boards is not reported, but it certainly is of more than dubious wisdom to let a frail boy of 8 years encounter twenty skilled players at once, even though his eyes are open. That he beat them all in the exhibition described in a TIMES dispatch yesterday justifies a doubt that the twenty were all of high rank, even as amateurs, but it was no small feat for such a child to win against a man who had played a draw with CAPABLANCA.

A Solution Much Too Simple.

Congress is considering the passage of a law under the provisions of which the larger newspapers would be compelled or ordered to cut down their week-day issues by 5 per cent, and that of Sunday twice as much. The object of this device is to decrease the use of print paper by those whose consumption of it is greatest, so that more will be left for others, but that the object would be attained is much more than doubtful, for there would be nothing to prevent the paper so "saved" from going to foreign markets at prices which the small papers could not possibly pay.

But that is about the least weakness in the proposed law. It contemplates, in effect, a censorship of the press. As the newspapers themselves hardly could cut off 5 or 10 per cent. of their subscribers, that way of decreasing the use of print paper is impracticable unless the task is undertaken by the Government, and then what would be the basis of discrimination?

A like difficulty would arise from a compulsory reduction in number of pages. What advertiser is to be excluded or what sort of news banned?

If Congress were wiser it would know that the big papers are not the enemies of the little papers, and that they are not depriving them of material which the little papers otherwise would get.

Grant the Fund for Europe.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We should be thankful to Henry P. Davison, the head of the Red Cross Society, who has so clearly and forcibly given to us the situation with regard to the unfortunate conditions that exist in East and Central Europe. The area that requires immediate assistance is extremely large, but it should not be difficult for us to cope with the duties that are clearly imposed upon us.

Although some criticism may be found with Congress for its slowness to grasp the present situation, still we must appreciate that our own post-war problem has been a somewhat difficult one, and we should, therefore, not ascribe political motives as the cause of the inaction on the part of our Congress.

Mr. Davison's position is such as to make indisputable the information that he brings to us. Let us hope that Congress will rise to the occasion and promptly adopt Mr. Davison's splendid suggestion for an appropriation of $500,000,000 to aid suffering Europe. In that way only can we meet our responsibilities and our obligations, which every American citizen is surely ready to do. WILLIAM GUGGENHEIM.

Americanization Overdone?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I not express grateful appreciation for the admirable article on "Americanization Fallacy" by Mr. L. P. Edwards, published in your issue of May 16? While I cannot subscribe to all of the statements therein contained, in these days of "isms," propaganda and sham patriotism (not infrequently used to cover up profit and plunder), it is refreshing, indeed, to find some one who knows his subject and has the courage to express his convictions.

For the last twenty-five years I have been engaged in the work of practical Americanization at close range, and having participated in the religious, social, political and economic life and activities of the foreign born, I venture to make these observations. There is real and imminent danger of too much "Americanization" of the brand emanating from two groups, viz: One consisting of the well-meaning but wholly ignorant and misinformed theorists and hysterical faddists, the other of the professional patriots and self-constituted saviors of the Republic, as well as the self-seeking opportunists in the political and business world. Those of the first group are perfectly honest but none the less harmful; those of the last set are exploiters of the worst kind.

Those who have devoted a lifetime to the difficult problems of true Americanization and thorough amalgamation join in the timely admonition to all our professional and dilettante "Americanizers" to make haste slowly. The gradual and natural process of absorption and assimilation has worked so marvelously well that our country became rich, powerful and prosperous beyond the boldest dreams of the founders of the Republic. Why force narrow, intolerant and artificial methods repugnant to the most cherished traditions of America and violative of the very spirit of her institutions? MORRIS CUKOR.

FOR EVERY SPRING.

Now, when wistaria's drooping grace,
Miraculous with Summer-dreams,
Leans to the slow and silver streams
That make Japan a lovely place—

Now, when the hedgerows shall impart
Beauty to England's budding trees—
And when the sweeter ecstasies
Visit, with Spring, the northland's heart—

What of those loved who lie so still
Where France makes tribute to their blood
With poppies—when the memories flood
In on the hope, their dream to fill?

Must they not share this newer thing?
Know that their deeds are not forgot

AIDS CITY PORT FACILITIES.

Governor Smith Signs Bills for Marginal Warehouses and Terminals.

ALBANY, May 18.—Construction of warehouses and other structures in marginal streets in New York City was authorized today by the Governor's approval of the Lynch bill.

The act permits the Dock Commissioner to establish a railroad terminal with warehouses and other buildings for industrial purposes as a part of the $25,000,000 pier development at Stapleton. It will also enable the construction of warehouses, with an elevated driveway, along the North River from the Battery to Seventy-second Street, plans for which are now being made.

The Governor also signed another measure designed to increase New York's port facilities when he approved the Dowling bill, appropriating $2,500,000 for the straightening of the bend in the Harlem River at Johnson's iron works. The Barge Canal act of 1911 provides for a terminal at 136th Street and the East River, the construction of which cannot be undertaken until the Federal Government improves the channel between Randall's Island and the mainland. This Secretary Baker has refused to do until the city removes the obstructing piers to navigation, at High Bridge. The city officials have deferred such action until the State acquired title and ceded the rights of way to the Federal Government for the improvement of the Harlem River. The Dowling bill makes this possible.

Vetoes Five More Bills.

ALBANY, May 18.—Vetoes of five bills were announced by Governor Smith today. The measures disapproved were:

Assemblyman Bly's bill barring persons over 70 years of age from serving as referees in the Second Judicial District and militating against judges who had retired because of the age limit.

Senator Cotillo's bill permitting foreign banking corporations, under certain conditions, to receive deposits in New York City. This was opposed by the State Banking Department.

Assemblyman Soule's bill authorizing Public Service Commissioners to vary the nature of warning signs at railway crossings.

Assemblyman Fearon's bill amending the tax law in relation to the effect of dissolution of a corporation on taxes assessed or paid. Governor Smith held the measure was drawn to meet the conditions of one particular corporation and that, if enacted, it would put a premium upon dissolutions and reorganizations, and relieve corporations of a perfectly legitimate tax based only upon net income.

Senator Karle's bill relating to retirement of employes by the Appellate Division of the Second Judicial Department, which the Governor wrote "is evidently intended to benefit some individual or small group of individuals."

NEWSPRINT HEARINGS END.

Conservation League Opposes Regulation of Prices.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The Senate Sub-committee on Manufactures, which has been investigating the print paper situation, announced today that it had closed its hearings and that no further witnesses would be called. The sub-committee will meet tomorrow, Chairman Reed said, and attempt to agree upon recommendations to be made to the full committee.

Opposition to the regulation of newsprint prices was expressed by the newly organized United States Publishers' Newsprint Conservation League, representing more than 100 smaller newspapers east of the Mississippi, in a report submitted today to Senator Reed. The report predicted that price regulation would result in the suspension of 400 dailies and 5,000 weeklies. Small publishers would benefit if large papers would keep out of the spot paper market and if manufacturers would allot contracts to smaller publications, the report added.

To pursue co-operation in buying the league decided to designate an agency in New York or Chicago where orders would be placed by small publishers.

The league also decided to affiliate with the National Editorial Association, the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, the Inland Daily Press Association, the Kansas City Print Paper League and the Midway Newsprint League for the purpose of co-ordinating policies regarding several bills before Congress to relieve the paper scarcity.

A print paper conservation organization similar to the one here will be launched by publishers in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas, officers of the league announced.

KING ALBERT HONORS TWO.

T. E. Kirby and Miss R. H. Lorenz of American Art Association.

In recognition of services to Belgium by the American Art Association during the war, when the management contributed its energies and facilities in work for the Belgian orphans and later for the wounded soldiers of Belgium culminating in an exhibition of Belgium art opened by Queen Elizabeth in its galleries, two members of the corporation have just been honored by King Albert.

Thomas E. Kirby has been named a Knight of the Order of Leopold II., and upon Miss R. H. Lorenz has been conferred the Palms of Silver of the Order of the Crown.

TO BEGIN HOSPITAL UNIT.

Work to Start at Once on Broad Street Building.

The Directors of the Broad Street Hospital announced yesterday that contractors would begin work immediately on a new six-story structure at 123 Broad Street for use as a nurses' home and private pavilion. This new unit, the third to be added since the hospital was opened three years ago, will cost $215,000.

Alterations on the South Street side of the hospital, costing $173,000, will provide a new clinic and dispensary, X-ray and electro therapeutic departments, pathological and bacteriological laboratories. These units will be opened in June, and will provide at least thirty more beds for the hospital.

When the hospital was opened in 1917, with subscriptions obtained in the financial district, it had thirty-five beds. Demands within two months required an addition of thirty-five beds. The total capacity then was increased to eighty-five beds. The Directors said that about $75,000 was needed to finish paying for the nurses' home and asked that subscriptions be sent to the Treasurer, William Hamlin Childs, at 120 Broad Street.

CELEBRATE FIFTY YEARS OF ART HERE

Presidents and directors of art museums from all parts of the country were present at the fiftieth anniversary exercises of the Metropolitan Museum of Art at the museum yesterday afternoon and honored it as the greatest museum of this country. Tributes were paid to the men who founded it fifty years ago, the men who have built it up and the men who are at its head today, Robert W. de Forest, the President, who presided yesterday, and Edward Robinson, the director.

"The Metropolitan is the gift of New York to the nation," said Morris Gray, President of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, which was founded in the same year.

"The Metropolitan Museum has surpassed all the museums of the West combined," said Charles L. Hutchinson, President of the Art Institute of Chicago. "I am not sure but we should say it is the greatest museum of the world."

Mr. Hutchinson spoke of the late J. Pierpont Morgan and his great services to the Museum as President and through his many gifts, saying that it had made its greatest leap forward with him as President and Mr. de Forest as Secretary. Referring to the gift of the Altman collection to the Museum he said:

"No gift as fine as that of the Altman collection has ever been received by any other museum in the world. The only private collection approaching it was that of Sir Richard Wallace in London, and that was the work of three generations, while the Altman collection was made in less than that number of decades.

Greater Art Activity Here.

"There is no such activity in art in any other part of the world as here," continued Mr. Hutchinson. "Why should not we have a third renaissance of art and why should not American art dominate? In the new movement why should not the Metropolitan Museum of Art take the lead?—and we will all follow and acclaim you first and foremost of museums."

Mr. Gray said the interest in beauty as it is put forward in the museums might do something to quiet the unrest that has followed the war.

John H. Finley, President of the University of the State of New York, said that the poorest houses in the land should have some treasure of thought gathered from the museums. He quoted Aristotle as saying:

"The right use of leisure is the chief end of education."

"That is an idea I worked out myself," said President Finley, "and I did not know until I had come to that opinion that Aristotle had antedated me by a couple of thousand years."

Mr. de Forest told of the founding of the Museum and the "vision" of a few "dreamers," and with "no building, not even a site; no existing collection as a nucleus; no money."

"It is even pathetic to recall their early efforts," he said. "Their appeal reads: 'A subscription for $250,000 will insure the complete success of the Museum,' and with big men interested $10,000 was the largest subscription.

"Today," continued Mr. de Forest, "the institution which they founded has a building extending four blocks on Fifth Avenue, a site on which there is still room for expansion, collections which already rival in extent and surpass in installation those of the great museums of Europe and money to the amount of over $16,650,000, and if I was speaking next week I should say $17,000,000."

City's Co-operation Needed.

Mr. de Forest said he saw but one storm signal ahead for the Museum and that was the difficulty to support it without the co-operation of the city. Ten years ago the city contributed 68 per cent. of the cost of maintenance, five years ago 43 per cent., and last year only 36.5 per cent., while the cost of the Museum's service to the public is increasing and none of the Museum's funds from bequests can be lawfully diverted to pay the cost of administration. This year the city increased its contribution to $300,000, while the cost of administration was more than twice that.

"In Europe the Government supplies to art museums not only all the buildings, but all cost of operation and almost all the purchase funds," said Mr. de Forest. "We do not ask the city to supply these, but we do ask it to supply half the cost of operation."

Following the exercises two tablets to the founders and benefactors of the Museum, at the foot of the grand staircase of the Museum, were unveiled. Elihu Root, first Vice President of the Museum, making the address.

Mr. Root spoke of the low standard of taste in 1860, when the Museum was founded. That was the meretricious period of the Second Empire in France and in England, the combination of crudeness with unfitness called Victorian. We were building here rows of brownstone houses with high stoops and such buildings as the New York Post Office. There were chromos in the houses, and American women were expressing their artistic tastes in pressing Autumn leaves and doing the crudest form of crewel work. There was little art for the public and little public for art. Works of art were far away in the Old World. The little group here striking for a museum were playing the part of Columbus. They knew that when the food, clothes and shelter had been provided there came the question of happiness. They knew, what we know today, that there is a problem with the laboring class, and that with higher wages and leisure hours, where there is no taste there is no way to fill the time. All arts go for the cultivation of taste which makes for human happiness."

A fiftieth anniversary dinner was given last night at the University Club, attended by the officers and trustees of the Museum, the visiting Presidents and Directors of museums and other men of note in the art world.

I hope your efforts for funds will be successful even beyond your expectations."

The Campaign Committee announced that treasurers had been appointed in about twenty industries to receive subscriptions.

THREE SEE THE CEREMONY

Miss Hester Le Gallienne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Le Gallienne, and Robert Hare Hutchinson of Philadelphia were married yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock by Justice of the Peace Albert S. Mead at his office in the Town Building at Greenwich, Conn.

An application for a marriage license from the Town Clerk at Greenwich was made several days ago. The couple motored to Greenwich, accompanied by three young women, and remained only long enough to have the nuptial knot tied. One of the young women was said to be Miss Eva Le Gallienne, the actress, a half-sister of the bride. Mr. Hutchinson was divorced from his first wife, according to the marriage license.

The bride, although only twenty-three years old, has won considerable fame at home and abroad in her literary work, especially poetry, many of her poems having appeared in publications here and in England. She is the daughter of Mr. Le Gallienne by his first wife, and was born in London, growing up in the literary circles of London and Paris. She came to this country four years ago, and has been associated with several monthly publications. Mr. Hutchinson is a writer and educator.

In an interview yesterday, before her marriage, the bride said she planned to carry on her work in poetry after marriage, and to write music. The couple will make a honeymoon tour through New England.

KELMAN JOINS UNION DESPITE HIS CHURCH

HONORED AT EXERCISES

Despite the fact that the session of his church, the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian, at Fifty-fifth Street, had unanimously passed a resolution that it could not indorse his action in accepting a place on the Board of Union Theological Seminary, the Rev. Dr. John Kelman yesterday afternoon was inducted into office as a director of that institution, which is at Broadway and 120th Street.

Not only was Dr. Kelman formally installed, but he made the principal address last evening at the annual commencement. Dr. Kelman was also a guest of honor yesterday at the annual luncheon of the alumni of the seminary, held in the building, and at the annual dinner of the alumni on Monday evening at the Hotel Pennsylvania Dr. Kelman was one of the two speakers.

Last evening Dr. Kelman received most of the honors, and sat in the chancel at the right of the Rev. Dr. Arthur Cushman McGiffert, President of the seminary. In the long procession of students, graduates, professors and directors, Dr. Kelman walked by the side of President McGiffert. After the exercises Dr. and Mrs. McGiffert gave a reception at their residence, which adjoins the seminary.

The topic of Dr. Kelman's address at the commencement was "The Foundations of Faith." Afterward clergymen present said it was "perfectly orthodox."

Dr. Kelman was nominated as a Director of Union Seminary on Jan. 13 last. He accepted soon afterward and without informing his church session that he had been nominated.

Dr. Kelman's action resulted in the calling of a special meeting of the session on Jan. 23. An effort was made by several of the members of the Rev. Dr. Kelman officially "to withdraw his acceptance of the Directorship of Union Theological Seminary." Instead, however, the following resolution was finally unanimously adopted:

"While we regret exceedingly that we cannot indorse the action of our pastor in accepting the position and election on the board of the Union Theological Seminary, we have no desire to interfere with his personal liberty, and, as a session, we wish to place on record that we have no responsibility for the action or its outcome, but at the same time have full faith in Dr. Kelman's power to serve the cause of Christ in any field which he may enter."

JUSSERANDS SOON TO SAIL.

Ambassador, at 65, to Take First Summer's Rest Since War.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Jean Adrien Antonine Jules Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States and dean of the Diplomatic Corps, will sail for France early in July to spend the Summer. Accompanied by Mme. Jusserand, the Ambassador is going to his country home near Lyons, France, where he has spent but two days in the last six years. The understanding is that he will return to his post in Washington next Fall.

Gossip has been current that the Ambassador, who is 65 years old, might take advantage of his trip home to retire, in which event Washington would have probably a complete reorganization of the already depleted French Embassy staff, as well as a new Dean of the Diplomatic Corps. However, the information was vouchsafed tonight that, so far as members of his staff were aware he had no intention of retiring.

M. Jusserand has been French Ambassador at Washington since Feb. 7, 1903, a period of seventeen years since he presented his credentials to former President Roosevelt, having come here in 1902 as successor to Jules Cambon. He has been in the French diplomatic service forty-four years, and he was President Wilson's guest on the George Washington when the President sailed for the Peace Conference.

FRENCH PILGRIMS SEE POPE.

Twenty Thousand Received in Audience in St. Peter's.

ROME, May 17.—French pilgrims who came to Rome for the canonization of Joan of Arc were received by Pope Benedict in St. Peter's today. It had been planned to hold the reception in the Vatican, but no hall in that edifice was large enough to accommodate the throng, which numbered approximately 20,000.

Among the Cardinals present were Amette of Paris, Lucon of Rheims, Dubois of Rouen, Andrieu of Bordeaux, Maurin of Lyons and Begin of Quebec. There were, in addition, French Archbishops, Bishops, Senators and Deputies, all of whom were greeted with especial deference by the Pontiff, who singled out General Castlenau for particular notice.

Mgr. Touchet, Bishop of Orleans, thanked the Pope for the canonization in the name of the entire French nation, the Pontiff answering this address.

"Pope Pius X.," he said, decreed the beatification of Joan of Arc. I am glad the Almighty allowed me to sanctify her, but I regret this honor was not reserved for Pope Pius X."

The Pontiff ended by invoking the benediction on France, especially her Senators, Deputies and civil authorities. Cardinal Andrieu presented General Castlenau to the Pope, who warmly congratulated him and spoke flattering words of the French Army.

This afternoon the Pope received in the Vatican Museum 900 French priests, headed by Mgr. Touchet. This occasion was a new manifestation of rejoicing for the canonization.

CONTRASTS OUR NAVY PROGRAM WITH BRITISH

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 18.—The Daily Telegraph, in an editorial on the peace-time reduction of the British Navy, as shown by the naval estimates now being debated in the House of Commons—the amount asked of Parliament for the current twelve months is £84,000,000 as against an expenditure of £325,000,000 in the financial year of 1918-1919—says:

"It is especially regrettable that the public of the United States should, as the proceedings of Congress and the speeches reported in American newspapers show, have reached a wrong conclusion as to the character of the lead we have given in this respect to other nations. When the armistice was signed we had 1,005 ships of war of various types under construction, including four battle cruisers of the Hood type. The Admiralty forthwith countermanded all but one of the battle cruisers, as well as orders for 608 other vessels. The cancellations would have been on an even more wholesale scale if it had not been that 119 ships, mostly of small displacement, were on the eve of completion and work on them could not be stopped. By the end of last year only seventy-five units of our vast war program were being proceeded with. For the first time for centuries we have not a single capital ship of any description in hand, and no vessel, large or small, has been laid down in our own or in Dominion shipyards since the armistice was signed.

"On the other hand, eighteen battleships and battle cruisers are being built in the United States, effective construction of no small proportions having been started since the end of 1918. We mention that contrast not in a spirit of criticism, but merely because there is a feeling in some quarters in the United States, supported by erroneous intelligence as to Admiralty policy, that we are in some sort of way engaged in competition in naval armaments with them. The contrary is the fact. We have abandoned all navy shipbuilding and armament. An rivalry with the United States never entered into our calculations before the war, so it has absolutely no existence at present, when the war is over.

"We regard the large sums which American taxpayers are being called upon to spend on new ships with no jealousy, though it is impossible to conceal our regret that this great Republic should be giving a lead which other nations, less determined than ourselves on economy, may in time follow. But the scale on which the United States Navy is being supported at a cost far exceeding that of our own is a matter for the American people, and for them alone."

CHURCHMEN ASKED TO DEPLORE 'MEDDLING'

In British Affairs (Meaning Ireland)—Resolution Tabled After Warm Debate.

GARDEN CITY, L. I., May 18.—A stir was caused at the fifty-fourth annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Long Island here today when the Rev. Thomas C. Johnson, pastor of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, offered a resolution deprecating any "meddling in the domestic affairs" of Great Britain by this country. The resolution was tabled by a vote of 60 to 40 after much heated discussion. The resolution read:

Whereas, Certain legislators at Washington have shown a decided tendency to interfere unwarrantedly in the domestic affairs of a friendly power, our late ally, the British Empire, with the intention of committing the United States to an unfriendly policy; therefore be it

Resolved, That the clergy and laity of Long Island, in annual convention assembled, deprecate any act intended to commit the country to a policy of meddling in the domestic affairs of a friendly power and thus abandoning its traditional policy to observe the international comity of nations. Be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the Foreign Relations Committee and the Senators representing the people of New York.

Those who opposed the resolution argued that clergymen should not meddle in affairs which should be decided by the country's legislators. There were some, however, who thought the convention should go on record in the matter. In an effort to prevent the tabling of the resolution, Supreme Court Justice Townsend Scudder moved for the appointment of a committee of five to thresh out all matters pertaining to laws and politics as regards international affairs and politics and report their findings to the convention for action.

This motion likewise was defeated after it had been opposed by several speakers, including the Rev. Robert Rogers, Secretary of the convention, who opposed it, he said, because he did not believe in "gagging the convention," regardless of what the press might have to say concerning the developments of the meeting.

The community church was condemned by Bishop Frederick Burgess in his morning sermon. He asserted that while the general convention, under the influence of the Commission on Faith and Order, had considered the question of church unity, the interest in this movement was not so general as had been supposed.

HUNGARY TO SIGN TREATY.

BUDAPEST, May 17.—Hungary will sign the Peace Treaty presented to her by the Allies, it was indicated here today. Count Albert Apponyi, who strongly opposed the acceptance of the treaty, has resigned from the peace delegation.

The Cabinet Council has adopted the text of its answer complying with the allied ultimatum that the treaty be signed. M. Praznavsky has left for Paris with the document and Count Apponyi's letter resigning as President of the delegation.

It is not yet determined who will sign the treaty for Hungary.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Hungary is not expected to ratify the Peace Treaty before Autumn, according to advices today to the State Department.

A delegate appointed by the Hungarian Government, the advices said, left Budapest on May 15 for Paris, to continue negotiations with the Allies for revision of the terms of the treaty, which was presented to Hungary in January.

The name of the delegate was not given, but it was said here that the appointment apparently was made to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Count Apponyi, head of the Hungarian peace delegation.

Provisions for holding a plebiscite in territory awarded to Jugoslavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia, formerly included within Hungarian boundaries, constitute the major demand of the Magyar representatives in the request for revision of the treaty.

YANKEE BATS GIVE INDIANS HARD JOLT

RUTH OUT OF THE GAME

Vick Replaces Home-Run Specialist and Punches Out a Two-Bagger with the Bases Filled.

The Yankees hit the ball hard and far at the Polo Grounds yesterday and a crowd of 18,000 gave unqualified approval when Cleveland went down to defeat by a score of 11 to 0. It was a shocking rebuff for the Indians, and is the second whitewash bath Tris Speaker's pennant aspirants have suffered in three games here. The respect which the Indians hold for Huggins' lads has increased considerably since they came to town.

The Yanks coined eleven runs from a dozen hits made off two Cleveland pitchers, Elmer Myers and George Uhle. It can't be denied that this is making thrifty use of hits. Of course there were a few errors and some bases on balls dovetailed among the hits, but the run harvest was considerably more than the Yanks have indulged in of late.

Bob Shawkey held the Clevelands to three hits, and he ran the bases wildly at times and seemed so fatigued that it was feared that the Indians might get to him. Shawkey did a lot of sprinting in the seventh, and in the eighth the strain told on him, and two passes and a hit filled the bases. But Shawkey had enough reserve strength to stave off a run.

All this terrific swatting was consummated yesterday without the aid of Babe Ruth's prolific flail, for the home-run puncher was out of the game with another strain. The club physician advised Babe not to play on Sunday, but the superlative swatter didn't want to disappoint the multitude, so he played against the doctor's orders. The strain is nothing serious, and Ruth may be back in harness today. Although Ruth was out, Peckinpaugh was back at short and Ward took up his regular station at third.

Vick's Cleanup Wallop.

Out in Ruth's garden was Samuel Vick, and he celebrated the occasion in the third by plastering a double to left when the bases were loaded, and catapulted three runs over the tray with one crack.

Signor Pinola did his best to make the crowd overlook Ruth's absence, and the Italian lancer smote a couple of two-baggers which made the table d'hote favorite more popular than ever.

There has been considerable chatter about Shawkey being overworked, but if he is, it agrees with him. Bob twirled one of his niftiest performances. None of the Indians got to first until the fourth, and then Chapman walked. Gardner got the first hit off Shawkey in the fifth, but Wambsganss obligingly hit into a double play. Johnston contributed another hit, which was harmless. The third and last Cleveland hit was delivered by Johnston in the eighth, when Shawkey was blowing like a whale after his sprinting session on the base lines.

In this eighth chapter the Indians gave every indication of an intent to clutter up the plate with runs. They jammed the bases with two out and Ray Chapman walloped a long drive to center field. The three Cleveland runners all hot-footed it homeward, but Bodie got under the rocket and assured Shawkey of a shut-out.

Elmer Myers, the first Cleveland boxman, used to be with the Athletics and he pitched just as if still a member of the Green Elephants. He is a tall thin piece of pitching architecture, built along the lines of a flamingo, and was just as wild. He pitched seven innings and by that time the Yanks had annexed seven runs.

Uhle Warmly Received.

Succeeding Myers was Uhle, the boy who is commonly known as the brilliant product of the Cleveland sand lots. Probably Uhle is so used to the sand that he can't pitch well on a turf diamond. His name is pronounced so that it rhymes with unruly, and Uhle was all of that.

Bodie opened the third inning with a double to left; Gardner tossed Hannah out at first and Shawkey was safe on Gardner's fumble, Bodie scoring. Ward walked and Peck also ambled, filling the bases. Pipp rolled to Johnston and Shawkey was forced at the plate. Sam Vick rocked the ball on a dizzy flight to left, till it hit the fence on the first bound. Ward, Peck and Pipp all trotted home on the punch. The demonstration which ensued was all that could be expected from 18,000 lusty throats. Lewis ended the inning when Myers tossed him out at first.

Hannah started the seventh round with a one-base slap to left. The ball rolled to the fence and a fleeter runner could have had a double. Truck knew his speed and remained at first. Shawkey forced Truck and Ward's double to right, over Smith's roof, sent Shawkey to third. Peck fanned and Pipp punched a double to centre, scoring Shawkey and Ward. Vick walked, and Lewis laced a single to left which scored Pipp. Graney handled the ball carelessly and Vick went to third and Lewis to second. The inning closed when Pratt skied to Speaker.

Bodie Prevents Score.

Shawkey was tired when he went to the mound in the first of the eighth. With one gone, Johnston singled to left. O'Neill walked and Speaker sent the former New York resident, Slim Caldwell, up to bat in place of Myers. Caldwell forced O'Neill and Johnston went to third. Shawkey was still puffing and Graney walked, filling the bases. It was here that Bodie made the highly necessary catch of Chapman's drive and pulled Bob out of a deep excavation.

Uhle of the Sand Lots, wherever they are, was introduced in the eighth. Bodie flied to Wamby and Hannah creaked a single to left. Shawkey was safe when Wamby missed his hot grounder. Ward strolled and jammed the bases. Peck showed that he had fully recovered from his muscle injury by thumping a single to left which scored Hannah and Shawkey over the tally dish.

Pipp got a walk and the corners were again loaded. Vick fanned and Lewis poked a single to centre which coaxed Ward and Peck home. Pipp tried to score on this play, also, but he was run down at the plate. O'Neill collided solidly with Pipp as he came tumbling in, and Pipp was laid out flat for a few minutes. He got the jolt right where sister wears her string of corals, and it was no gentle smack. He narrowly escaped a bad injury.

HOME RUN SETTLES GAME.

Felsch's Long Drive Gives Chicago Victory Over Boston, 4-3.

BOSTON, May 18.—Singles by Felsch, Jourdan, McMullin and Williams, together with Schalk's sacrifice fly, gave Chicago three runs off Bush in the second inning today, and Felsch's home run over the left field fence off Russell in the sixth gave the visitors a 4 to 3 victory over Boston. The home team did little with Williams until the ninth, when Menosky's single, Hendryx's triple and McInnis's hit through Weaver yielded two runs.

LAJOIE GETS OFFER.

Veteran Infielder Wanted as Manager of Syracuse Club.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 18.—Negotiations with Napoleon Lajoie, former star Major League second baseman, to manage and play first base were opened today by President Ernest C. Landgraf of the Syracuse International League Baseball Club. Lajoie is said to be considering the offer.

Lajoie managed the Toronto International Club in 1918 and the following season led the Indianapolis American Association Club. He retired from the game after the 1918 season.

Cornell Grandstand Burns.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 18.—The main grandstand and several adjacent bleachers in Percy Field, Cornell University's baseball field, were destroyed by fire last night, causing a loss of $10,000. Four firemen were injured in the blaze. The fire, the athletic association announced today, will not interfere with the Spring Day events, scheduled for this Saturday, temporary bleachers being in the course of construction today.

Curves and Bingles

That pre-season shout that Cleveland looked like a sure pennant winner has dwindled to a whisper.

Umpire Ollie Chill is so small that when he stands behind Truck Hannah he can't see as much of the game as the kids in the centre-field bleachers.

Peck made a gorgeous scoop and peg of Wamby's sizzling hopper in the second, and Pipp dug it out of the ground to make as pretty a put out as you'd care to see.

It was probably lucky for Cleveland that Ruth took a day off. It was unfortunate, however, for Ruth's home-run record.

Bodie made a double in the fourth, but was out at third when he tried to go home on Hannah's out at first. Bodie's base work fast when he runs, but in a perpendicular, rather than a horizontal direction.

Not an Indian reached second until Johnston reached there in the eighth.

A crowd of school children were the guests of the Yanks in the first ball game. It's a hard question what they enjoyed most, the ball game or the free peanuts.

Speaker barely got his hands on Bodie's two-bagger in the fourth. Touching the ball usually means a put-out for Spoke, and it was a novelty to see him lose this one.

Manager Huggins got some good news yesterday. Chic Fewster is going to report at the end of the week. Huggins also said last night that Heath would probably be able to shoot at the right field stand again today.

12TH INNING RALLY WINS FOR GIANTS

McGrawites Get 8 to 6 Verdict After Cubs Have Game Apparently Sewed Up.

CHICAGO, May 18.—The winning streak of the Cubs, which had mounted to seven straight, was cracked here this afternoon by the Giants when McGraw's men made their first appearance of the season at the North Side park. Twelve innings were required to turn the trick and the fans saw all sorts of rallying and hectic playing before the Easterners made the winning assault. The score was 8 to 6.

Kauff and Lear co-operated in settling the game in the twelfth. Young led off with a single and was sacrificed to second by Fletcher. Martin was taken out of the box at this stage and Vaughn rushed to the front. Paskert apparently saved the game with a sensational catch which robbed Doyle of a triple, but Kauff and Lear followed with singles. Benny's hit sent Young over the plate and he went to second on the throw-in, scoring on Lear's single.

Mitchell's men picked up what seemed to be an all-sufficient lead in the early innings, the count being 4 to 0 against the visitors at the end of the fifth frame. The Giants made up half the distance in the sixth and seventh innings and succeeded in putting over the tying runs in the ninth, when a number of the fans were on their way out of the park, satisfied that the Cubs had registered their eighth consecutive triumph. In the tenth the visitors chalked up a pair of runs, which seemed to assure their triumph, but the home team came back with a counter-rally, and but for the timely arrival of Phil Douglas, a former Cub, Mitchell's men would have taken the game in the tenth.

Douglas's Fine Feat.

Douglas came on under the most trying conditions and gave a brilliant exhibition of airtight pitching in a pinch. The bases were filled, the score tied and none out when McGraw called upon Phil to save the game, which was slipping away from Hufbell. Paskert, whose stick work had been one of the big features of the game, fell before the wiles of Douglas and went out on strikes. Phil then made a fancy stop of Barber's hot smash and threw to the plate, forcing McCabe on a close play for the second out. Robertson, who also did some real clouting against his old team, followed with another bounder to Douglas, who threw Daye out and retired the side.

It was bitter medicine for the Chicago fans to see victory denied their favorites under such conditions, but they were game enough to realize that they had seen a brilliant exhibition of pitching and Douglas was warmly applauded as he made his way to the New York bench at the close of the inning.

Two-base hits were a feature of the battle, no less than nine being chalked up by the two teams. Benny Kauff and Earl Smith each got two for the Giants while Kelly and Doyle drew one apiece. Hollocher, Robertson and Killefer punched out doubles for the home team. Young led in the attack on the Chicago boxmen with four hits, with Kauff, Lear and Smith getting three each. Paskert and Robertson got three apiece for the home team. McGraw's men had their best hitting day of the season with seventeen hits the total of twenty-three bases. Fletcher was the only visiting player who went through the game without hitting safely.

There was a parade of pitchers, pinch hitters and pinch runners, who came along so fast that the announcers became hoarse and scorers almost wilted under the strain. McGraw used up sixteen players before victory finally smiled on his efforts and Mitchell used fifteen in a futile effort to keep the winning streak in progress.

Rube Benton, who started the game for the Giants, was harshly treated and McGraw subtracted the southpaw from the proceedings after five innings, in which the home team picked up a 4—0 lead. Dave Robertson started the run-making against his old team in the second when he doubled against the right field wall, reached third on a sacrifice and scored on Terry's single to left. In the third, after two were out, Paskert and Barber landed on Benton for singles and again Robertson came to the front, this time with a single to left which sent Paskert over the plate.

Two more runs in the fifth inning satisfied McGraw that Rube should depart. Flack singled to right and Hollocher sacrificed. Paskert's single to right sent Flack to third. Max was caught between third and the plate when Barber hit to Doyle, Paskert reaching third and Barber second on the play. Robertson's single to centre sent both runners home.

King, batting for Benton, singled through the box in the sixth, reached second on Burns's out and scored on Young's single to centre. In the seventh Kauff was safe and went to third on Lear's single to right, scoring when Kelly also hit to right field. With two on bases and none out Smith popped to Terry and McCarty hit into a double play.

Giants Tie it Up.

Two were out and the bases empty in the ninth when the Giants tied up the game. Lear singled to centre and pulled up at third when Kelly hit to left centre for two bases. Smith's single to left scored both runners and tied up the game. In the tenth Burns drew a pass and was forced by Young. After Hendryx had thrown out Fletcher, Doyle doubled to right, scoring Young, and Kauff's double to right sent Doyle over the plate.

Two runs by the Giants in the tenth made the game appear as safe for the visitors as it had for the Cubs in the previous inning, but Hubbell could not hold the lead. Terry started the home half with a single past Lear and Killefer followed with a double to left centre. Terry was not halted at third and he raced in to what seemed to be sure death, but Smith dropped the relayed throw and he was safe. McCabe batted for Hendrix, and Twombley went in as a pinch runner for Killefer. McCabe bunted safely and Flack hit to Doyle, who threw to Fletcher for a double play. Fletcher failed to tag second and his throw to first was too late to get Flack. He yelled for the ball again, and McCabe again set out for second, making the bag safely. Hubbell then walked Hollocher and Twombley came over with the tying run. Then came Douglas and the great pitching which turned the Cubs back.

Martin got through the eleventh inning without trouble, but in the twelfth he started poorly, was replaced by Vaughn, and Jim could not keep the Giants in check.

MAN O' WAR FIRST IN THE PREAKNESS

WINS BY LENGTH AND HALF

Upset Is Second and Wildair Third —Lowers Track Record for Mile in Scoring Victory.

BALTIMORE, May 18.—Samuel D. Riddle's Man o' War came back to the races at Pimlico this afternoon and before a crowd of $6,000 persons captured the rich Preakness Stakes at a mile and a furlong, and demonstrated that he has come back an even better colt than when he retired last Autumn as the champion of the juvenile division. Pitted against the cream of the three-year-olds, he had but to romp home to take the winner's share of the $30,000 purse, while Harry Payne Whitney's Upset was second, and his stablemate, Wildair, third. There were nine starters. The race was run in 1:51 3-5. Man o' War won by a length and a half.

The victory added $23,000 to the winnings of this fine son of Fair Play and Mahuba, and carried with it the Woodlawn Challenge Cup, a notable trophy which has been contended for by many great horses. The approximate odds on Man o' War were 4 to 5, while the Whitney entry was 9 to 20 for second place. The mutuel machines were swamped by those who supported the various horses in this historic event.

The race was witnessed by as distinguished a gathering as has ever been present at Pimlico. Among the spectators in the clubhouse were Governor Albert C. Ritchie, Bernard M. Baruch, United States Senators Pittman of Nevada, Gerry of Rhode Island, and Elkins of West Virginia, and Admiral Cary T. Grayson, President Wilson's physician.

For several hours trains from Philadelphia and Washington brought great throngs to Baltimore and thence to Pimlico, and fully 50,000 sought to gain admission to the enclosure, which could accommodate but 30,000. The enthusiasts packed into the place until it was impossible to move about on any part of the lawn or in the stands.

Outdistances His Field.

At the conclusion of The Preakness some experienced horsemen expressed the opinion that Man o' War is undoubtedly the greatest colt that this country has produced in a score of years, if indeed he is not the greatest racer the country has ever seen. He won with the same ease that featured his victories as a two-year-old. He set his own pace and was never threatened. He displayed speed which made such fleet horses as Upset and Wildair appear but a poor match for him. He ran as though he was not even extended to his best, while the others in the race were tearing at their heart strings in the vain but desperate effort to keep up with the Fair Play colt. Man O' War not only outclassed his field but proved once more that Upset, which gained a lucky victory over him in the Sanford Memorial at Saratoga last August, is not a match for him at any weight or distance.

Man O' War was the only starter among the nine that went to the post which had not been seen in a race this year. Encouraging reports of his condition had come from his owner and trainer from time to time, and a public workout at Pimlico had demonstrated that the horse was perfectly sound and had fine speed. But he had not been tried out in a race and there was a desire on the part of the spectators to see just how he had come through the Winter. There was never much doubt about his victory, for almost every one believed he would be the winner and the fact that he was made an odds-on favorite in the mutuels showed the confidence of the public. However, there was strong backing for the Whitney colts, especially as Upset had finished second in the Kentucky Derby and had run a truly fine race. He was known to be as fit as he could be and there was still the question of whether Man O' War would come back in all his greatness over the distance and without having had a test.

The first few strides that Man O' War took after the barrier was sprung were his answer to any that doubted his prowess. Breaking from a position near the outside he was in front in ten yards and from then to the finish he showed his heels to the country's best three-year-olds. As he flashed past the stands for the first time he was two lengths in front of Commander J. K. L. Ross's King Thrush with Upset running third. Jockey Kummer, who came from New York to ride Man O' War, held his mount in slight restraint all through the back stretch but the colt was moving so swiftly that at the end of six furlongs King Thrush gave up the futile chase, a tired colt.

Whitney Colts Make Bid.

Upset and Wildair had been restrained awaiting the time when they could make a rush at the leader after he had pitted his speed against King Thrush. The real test for Man o' War came in the turn into the stretch when Rodrigues and Ambrose gave the Whitney colts their heads and sent them after the leader. Kummer just let out a wrap and Man o' War, instead of showing the slightest signs of fatigue, bounded on to a greater lead, having two lengths to spare as he passed the sixteenth pole. He was being eased up slightly at the finish and won by a length and a half. Upset had come through the stretch under severe punishment and his effort to catch the leader was a courageous one. But he never had a chance.

Man o' War clipped two-fifths of a second from the record at Pimlico for a mile, doing the distance in 1:38 3-5, and if he had been extended to the finish he might have established a new record for the Preakness distance.

Mr. Riddle announced that Man o' War would be shipped to New York tomorrow, where he has a number of engagements at Belmont Park.

Lack of Entries Causes the Cancellation of $10,000 Derby

BOSTON, May 18.—The $10,000 American Derby, which was on the program of the Grand Circuit meeting at Readville in August, has been called off, it was announced today. Entries, which closed ten days ago, were too few to warrant a renewal this year of the classic race, which for several seasons before the war was one of the feature events of the Grand Circuit.

VICTORIA PURSE IS WON BY CONVERSE

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 18.—The Victoria Hotel Purse, which was the feature of a rather dull card at Churchill Downs today, was won by M. J. Reardon's Converse, which took the measure of Flying Welshman and Aiulu among others at seven furlongs. It was an easy victory, for the winner had three lengths to spare at the end. He raced Flying Welshman into submission in the first half mile and then drew out to a long lead, and was never threatened.

John S. Reardon proved the best of the field of two-year-old colts and geldings which went to the post for the third race at four and a half furlongs. He led all the way and won by six lengths from Philanderer, with Tom Norris third. The summaries:

EXPECT SHOOTING VICTORY.

U. S. Will Have Even Stronger Teams in Olympics Than in 1912.

The Americans won all the shooting honors in the 1912 Olympics with teams which will hardly compare with the New York Athletic Club and most of the teams that will strive to uphold the honor of the Stars and Stripes this year. America's trapshooters of 1920 will be much stronger than the trapshooters of 1912. So will the rifle shots and pistol shots. The National Rifle Association has appointed Colonel William Libby of Princeton, Brig. Gen. F. H. Phillips of Tennessee, Major L. W. T. Waller, United States Marines; Lieut. Col. Townsend Whelen, Commander G. L. Osborne and Colonel E. C. Shaw, all of Washington, D. C., to arrange for the participation of the United States in the rifle and pistol matches in the Olympic games.

While rifle shooting is more or less the same the world over, there is a great difference between the system of trap shooting in the United States and in Europe, and the conditions that prevail throughout Europe will prevail in the Olympic games for the rules of sport in the country where the games are held are the ones that are adhered to.

WYOMING AN EASY WINNER AT JAMAICA

Richard T. Wilson, Jr.'s Wyoming showed fine form at Jamaica yesterday and captured the Garden City Selling Stakes, at a mile and a sixteenth. This was the second feature event to go to the Wilson stable in two days. To make the victory all the more impressive, Wyoming took the measure of Crystal Ford, which had created a sensation at Pimlico recently by defeating Star Master, Billy Kelly and Sir Barton, among other topnotchers, at odds of a little better than 100 to 1. Thrift, one of the long shots of the race, was third.

After the scratches had taken considerable of the competition out of the race, it came down to a contest between Wyoming and Crystal Ford, and the victory of the latter over high class racers in Maryland lingered in the minds of the racing folk to such an extent that Crystal Ford was made a strong and well supported choice over Wyoming. After the race there was some dissatisfaction over the showing of the second horse, and many of his supporters contended that he was given the worst of the start and should have won with fair racing luck.

The start was none too good, but Crystal Ford did not suffer so much by it that it cost him his chance in the race. Wyoming broke quickly, as is his custom, and was out in front by more than a length when he reached the first turn. The favorite was among the last to leave the barrier, but was rushed up, and the horses were well bunched as they went around the turn.

In Front All the Way.

Wyoming remained in front all the way. Turner kept him under slight restraint through the backstretch, and Crystal Ford, which had found his racing legs by the time he had covered three furlongs, began to move up and at the far turn was close to the leader. He had a chance then to catch Wyoming, but when urged by Rowan he could not improve his position.

Turner handled the winner cleverly. He eased him up slightly at the turn into the stretch, and was thus able to hold the rail and prevent any of the others from slipping through on him. Once straightened out, he drew away from his rivals, but the pace was telling on him in the final sixteenth, and Turner had to make the horse do his best. Wyoming had a length and a half to spare at the finish. Crystal Ford having made up considerable ground in the drive through the stretch. However, he never threatened the winner and got up just in time to take second place from Thrift by a head.

The surprise of the day was the victory of Mr. A. Bourne's Sunnyland in the Manhattan Handicap, a six furlong dash, which he fairly romped home at 30 to 1, with Assume second and Jack Mount third among seven starters. This race brought about the defeat of the strongest played favorite of the day, Manoeuvre, which went to the post a 4 to 5 choice, got away last, and, under a poorly judged ride by McTaggart, never improved much, finishing fifth. Sunnyland raced to the front in the first quarter, outgamed Stepson, and drew away to win by four lengths, while Assume saved second by five lengths.

Episode Wins Juvenile Event.

Morton L. Schwartz's two-year-old Episode made up for his defeat in his initial start by winning the juvenile event of the day easily from Dream Crepe and Mary Erb. Episode showed fine speed, raced Dream Crepe down in the first quarter of the five-furlong dash, and had a length and a half to spare at the finish.

The remainder of the card was given over to cheaper performers, and among these J. Byer's Orderly scored an easy victory in the fifth race at a mile and seventy yards, leading home Air Man by two lengths, with Rosary third. Orderly set his own pace all the way and had enough speed left to withstand the challenge of Air Man in the stretch drive. Rosary, which was making her first appearance, showed fine speed for six furlongs and was close at the heels of the leader, but tried badly and could not keep up.

Flying Orb captured the final event, a six furlong sprint, winning by five lengths from Sugarmint and Game Chick. This three-year-old gelding was much the best. He went to the front at the start, stole into a long lead and was never threatened.

Ten maidens, three years old and upward, went to the post in the opening race and the victory went to Lover's Lane, 2d, which defeated the well played favorite, Sammy Kelly, by four lengths, with Musito third. The winner had all the speed of the race, while Sammy Kelly was off slowly and could never make up the ground over the six furlong route.

ANDERSON REACHES LAWN TENNIS FINAL

Defeats Letson in Harlem Tourney, and Will Meet Behr for Challenge Trophy.

Frederick C. Anderson, the tall son of the Long Island tennis veteran, yesterday entered the final round of the open singles at the Harlem Club, defeating his recent doubles partner, Ben Letson, in straight sets, both scoring 6—4. Although the figures indicate a close and well-fought match, the actuality was rather disappointing. Neither of the young players showed anything like top form and Letson in particular had little control of his shots. Anderson took things easily and seemed disinclined to exert himself except when necessary.

The winner's advantage lay chiefly in his ability to disguise the direction of his shots, and many a stroke that carried little speed scored cleanly because the ball traveled to a totally unexpected spot. On service, too, Anderson had somewhat the better of the argument and could generally come to time with an effective delivery when he most needed the points.

Both contestants tried to rush the net, but with only indifferent success, as a majority of their volleys and overhead shots went wild. Their tactics were of a sort that precluded long rallies and two or three strokes were usually sufficient to decide a point. The small gallery applauded willingly whenever it had the opportunity, but in general it found little to create real enthusiasm.

Both Make Many Errors.

Most of the scoring was done on errors, and some of the chances missed were of the easiest description. In the first set in particular Anderson was very ragged in his returns of Letson's service, making six of seven outs and three out of five outs in this way. With two double faults registered against him in addition, the winner barely kept himself in the lead through this session. He had not much more to spare in the second, although he established an early edge and was never in real danger.

Letson had the service at the start, and won the final point coming on a close one that was credited as an ace. Anderson immediately equalised with a love-game, and then broke through his rival's delivery in four more rallies, without another score against him. Letson returned the compliment, but once more saw his service upset by the accurate returns of Anderson, who then chalked up another love-game, with the delivery in his own hands. The latter had at this stage taken four games for a lead of 4-2, with the loss of only one point in the four that won, in spite of the fact that two of them were on the opposing service.

Letson had difficulty in serving out a long deuce game in his favor, and trailed at 4—3 after Anderson had again won easily. A final stand brought the former boy champion within one game of a deuce set, but Anderson still had the advantage of the service, and closed out the set without trouble at 6—4.

Takes Three in a Row.

The Long Islander took three in a row to start the second session, twice breaking through service. He dropped his own, however, as Letson began a desperate pull-up, and the loser then served a love game, getting his points by following the ball to the net and doing his best volleying of the match. They alternated on service after that, with Letson never quite able to equalise, and Anderson content to hold his advantage of a single break to the finish. It was his set and match at 6—4 on his final delivery, Letson's best efforts bringing him only one point in this last game.

The final round, bringing together Allen Behr, who umpired yesterday, and Frederick C. Anderson, will be played next Sunday afternoon, May 23, at 3 o'clock.

COLGATE IN TENNIS TIE.

Breaks Even with W. & J. in Both Singles and Doubles.

HAMILTON, N. Y., May 18.—Winning two single matches and one doubles match each, the Colgate and Washington and Jefferson tennis teams fought to a tie on the former's courts here this afternoon. Reed, for Colgate, easily won over Heniger in straight sets, 6—2, 6—1. Captain McLaughlin lost to Garfisch, the W. and J. leader, 6—3, 7—5. Reed, for Colgate, beat Willcox and Ramsey, for W. and J., downed Law, both matches being completed in straight sets.

In the doubles, McLaughlin and Law, spurred on by their defeats in the singles, proved too much for Garfisch and Heniger and after a hard fight the W. and J. men were defeated, 4—6, 7—5, 9—7. Reed and Reed lost to Willcox and Ramsey, 6—4, 2—6, 6—3.

ASSISTANT COACH CHOSEN.

Stanley B. Sutton, of Germantown Academy and head coach at Virginia Tech for the season of 1920-21, has announced that Benjamin C. Cubbage of Penn State had been selected by him as assistant football coach for next year. Cubbage was one of the mainstays of the crack Penn State eleven last season and is regarded by football authorities generally as one of the greatest linemen in the grid game today. He played one year on the freshman team and three years on the 'Varsity at his Alma Mater.

When Coach Bernier accepted the directorship of athletics at the University of Alabama several months ago it was decided by the Virginia Tech Athletic Council that a re-organization of the coaching system would be effected at an early date. Recently the athletic body appointed Stanley Sutton as head coach and "Monk" Younger, former Tech star and at present director of athletics at Hampden-Sidney, assistant coach. The selection of the third man was left to Coach Sutton.

It is believed that in the selection of Cubbage Tech has secured one of the best men in the East and that this selection will meet with the approval of the students, alumni and all those who are interested in Tech's athletic development.

Women Players Rehearse for Tennis Invasion of England

In preparation for their invasion of England, during which they expect to meet the foremost tennis stars of European courts, Mrs. Franklin I. Mallory of New York and Miss Marion Zinderstein of Brookline, Mass., have been engaging in practice at the Longwood Cricket Club with Mrs. George W. Wightman, national women's champion, and her Longwood teammate, Miss Edith Sigourney. Although Mrs. Mallory and Miss Zinderstein do not make an ideal combination in doubles, the fact that they won the majority of their sets from the Bostonians demonstrates that they are quite likely to make a winning one. Mrs. Mallory, though not quite up to her best form of a year ago, has demonstrated that there is plenty of trouble ahead for Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, the French champion, and Mrs. Lambert Chambers, the famous English player, if they expect to defeat her. Miss Zinderstein's play has been brilliant, though not quite so steady as it will be after a week or two of additional practice.

8,000 DANCING GIRLS A RAINBOW IN PARK

FIFTEEN ACRES OF COLOR

Thirteen is a lucky number for the Girls' Branch of the Public Schools Athletic League. The girls held their thirteenth annual park fête on the sheep meadow of Central Park yesterday afternoon, and there were almost 8,000 of them. The colors representing the fifty different schools were never so gay and attractive, and the weather was perfect.

In fifteen acres of the park, the entire sheep pasture, which was roped off for them, there were more May poles than could be counted easily and a perfect kaleidoscope of color in the poles, in the ribbons the children twined around them and on the girls themselves. All the park fête ribbons are crêpe paper, adopted before the days of the H. C. L., and there was plenty of it. The girls wore bouncing bows of it for hair ribbons and they did not scant their sashes. Little girls with pale blue sashes on white dresses made a sky-like oasis on the green grass; purple and lavender ran strong and, combined with deep orange and bright red and combinations of many colors worn by other groups of girls, made a wonderfully vivid mass of color. Every nationality was represented in the army of little dancing girls.

A great crowd of spectators stood in rows outside the protecting ropes while Boy Scouts, acting as aids, bicycled in and out among the dancers. The Police Band furnished the music from the grandstand in the centre of the lawn.

A salute, "To the Colors," was No. 1 on the program. From 7,000 to 8,000 little girls' voices then gave the "Pledge of Allegiance" and sang "America." There were two new dances yesterday, American ones, made to order for the girls in New York, and they sounded like it. They were "Off She Goes" and "Paddy Whack." Then there were the "Carrousel," "Seven Pretty Girls," "Our Little Girls," "Sailor Boy" and "Bridge of Avignon" in addition to the games. Next came the "May Pole Dance." Carrying Off the Poles" preceded the last number on the program, always the great feature of the day, which no one could witness without a thrill.

The signal was given, the band sounded the opening notes of the "Star Spangled Banner" and from all over the fifteen acres of park land there came running the 7,000 to 8,000 girls, flushed and breathless and wonderful rainbows of color. Massed together, they halted just at the right moment and then those thousands of young voices sang the National anthem.

Dr. William L. Ettinger, Superintendent of Schools, was there to see the fun. Captain Brown was in charge of the police looking out for the children. The program was under the direction of Miss Emily O'Keefe, assisted by Miss Christine Dobbins and the Field Committee, headed by Miss Catherine Leverich and Mrs. Richard Aldrich.

PUPPETS IN SHAKESPEARE.

Miss Ellen Van Volkenburg, who shares with Tony Sarg the distinction of having raised the puppet above the mere Punch and Judy show in this country, is the power behind the marionet entertainment which was seen for the first time at the Little Theatre yesterday afternoon. Miss Van Volkenburg's figures are seen in six scenes from "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and provide entertainment of about an hour and a half which is certain to be a source of huge delight to the youngsters and of considerable pleasure to adults.

The figures themselves are somewhat smaller than the Sarg puppets, and are mounted, as were the others, upon a raised and deep-set stage which completely deceives the eyes as to the size of the marionettes. It has all been carried out in great detail, so far as costumes, settings and lighting are concerned, and the result is a truly artistic production. The manner of lighting causes the strings to be visible a large part of the time, but since the figures are frankly figures this does not greatly mar the enjoyment.

Additional performances will be given tomorrow and Friday afternoons and Saturday morning, with more to follow next week.

Recover 60 Pearls of Stolen Necklace

Recovery from dealers of sixty of the eighty-four pearls in the $250,000 necklace, stolen from Mrs. Regina V. G. Foye, formerly room clerk at the Hotel Biltmore, for the theft of Mrs. Millhiser's jewelry, valued at $380,000, from her safety deposit box in the hotel. Foye pleaded not guilty before Judge Thomas C. T. Crain of the Court of General Sessions, and was sent to the Tombs in default of $200,000 bail.

SEES POLITICS IN SHIP RULE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 18.—Archibald Hurd in the Daily Telegraph discusses the United States Shipping Board's order that vessels under the board's orders must be classified by the American Bureau of Shipping. Mr. Hurd conjectures that this is an incident in the Presidential campaign and says it may be merely a coincidence that the President of the Shipping Board is Rear Admiral Benson, who, according to Admiral Sims, warned the latter "Not to let the British pull the wool over his eyes."

"The coincidence may have no significance," says Mr. Hurd, "but there it is, and let us remember that the two great parties are marshalling their forces for a Presidential election. Those who are described in American language as flag-waggers have evidently come to the conclusion that by artificial means the American commercial flag can be made supreme; so on the eve of an election we have many manifestations of what is regarded as a national or patriotic policy.

"They regard Lloyd's Register as a British institution and it is thought to be a bold and independent thing just now among certain sections of Americans—and the German and Irish vote is an important asset—to twist the tail of the British lion. There is one virtue about the British lion, and that is his good temper and his patience. These little incidents will assuredly have no influence on this country's maritime, commercial or international policy.

"I do not know what opinion the management committee of Lloyd's may have upon the action of the Shipping Board, but I feel convinced that they will regard the matter with the equanimity which becomes those who are responsible for an institution which has weathered many storms and was never more prosperous than today, when of 8,000,000 tons of shipping building throughout the world, nearly 5,000,000 tons are being constructed under the inspection of its surveyors."

TROLLEY CAR CATCHES AUTO

Driver Arrested After Flight from Upper Broadway Accident.

Passersby on upper Broadway last night saw a trolley car filled with passengers pursuing an automobile whose driver is alleged to have been fleeing from an accident. The chase began at 207th Street, where an automobile driven by Stanley D. Kennedy, a salesman, of 314 Westervelt Avenue, New Brighton, S. I., crashed into a motor truck which had stopped behind a Broadway surface car, which was discharging ppassengers. The impact caused the truck, which was owned by J. N. Rea & Co., 685 Eleventh Avenue, to knock down Mrs. Agnes Lane, of 624 West 207th Street, and her 6-year-old son, Jack. Both suffered bruises and were taken to their home.

According to bystanders, Kennedy backed away from the scene of the accident, turned his machine around and started away at high speed. Immediately Denis Fleming, motorman of the surface car, switched the car to the southbound track and started in pursuit, sounding his gong to attract attention. Patrolman Kohler of the 177th Street Station boarded the car on the way and at 180th Street, when Fleming had caught up with the auto, was able to place Kennedy under arrest. Kennedy was charged with reckless driving and failing to come to a stop behind a surface car which was discharging passengers.

Resume Hearing in Croker Case.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., May 18.—Hearing was resumed in the Circuit Court today on the motion to set aside the restraining order issued on the complaint of Howard Croker against Richard Croker, Sr., and Bula E. Croker, by reading the answer of Mr. Croker and his wife to the complaint. Attorneys for Mr. Croker have forty affidavits to read.

JERSEY CITY HEADS FACE JURY INQUIRY

HINTS AT MURDER CHARGES

Investigation of the labor situation in Jersey City, with mention of the possibility of the indictment of the City Commissioners for misfeasance in office, if they persist in barring strike breakers from the city, was directed by Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Swayze in a charge to the new Hudson County Grand Jury at Jersey City yesterday.

Judge Swayze's charge was believed to have been caused by the disorder resulting from the building trades strike in Hudson County and by his apparent belief that the Jersey City authorities have not been giving proper protection to workers taking the place of strikers.

Judge Swayze said many assaults already had taken place in the building trades strike, and issued a warning that such breaches of the peace, if death should ensue, might result in indictments for murder.

"I am sorry to say that there are people who think that the Commissioners of Jersey City and the Police Department of Jersey City are not doing their duty," said Judge Swayze in his address to the Grand Jurors. "There is an idea among the members of the Commission Government of Jersey City that they should adopt a policy, as they said, with reference to strikebreakers to keep them out of the county, a policy that is not in harmony with the laws of the State. Neither the Government of Jersey City nor any other government has the right to adopt a policy which the law of the State does not countenance.

"If that was done, however, it seems to me that it must have been one of those mistakes that all of us are likely to commit. If, however, it was not a mistake, if it has been persisted in since the attention of the Commissioners had been called to it—sharply called to it by the actions for damages against three police officers—then, gentlemen, you may indict for misfeasance in office."

Justice Swayze said the seriousness of the situation was shown by a large number of applicants for revolver permits.

An application for permits for the special policemen of the Erie Railroad to carry revolvers was made to the Jersey City Commissioners, under a State law giving special policemen the right to carry weapons upon approval of the local authorities. Mayor Hague said he was opposed to granting permission and other Commissioners indicated that they were against it.

WILSON GREETS ENVOYS FROM ITALY AND PERU

WASHINGTON, May 18.—In spite of rumors to the contrary regarding his health, President Wilson was strong enough to have a busy day today. Besides receiving two new Ambassadors who presented their credentials, and presiding over a meeting of the Cabinet, the President late in the afternoon took a long ride in an open automobile into the northern suburbs.

The envoys received by the President were Senor Don Frederico A. Ueset, Ambassador from Peru, and Baron Camillo Romano Avezzano, Ambassador from Italy. Secretary Colby presented them.

This makes six envoys received by the President in a week. They are being received two at a time until all who have not had opportunity to present their credentials are received.

FOUR DIE BY GAS IN HOME.

Mother and Three Children Found in Sealed Kitchen with Jets Open.

Mrs. Laura Balada, 40 years old, and her three children, John, 11, and Irene and Paul, twins, 3 years old, were found dead in the kitchen of their home on the second floor of the two-family house at 10,116 120th St., Morris Park, L. I. yesterday afternoon. Four jets of a gas range were open, and air crevices were stuffed with paper. A bible lay on the floor beside each of the children. Neighbors who noticed the odor of gas and broke into the apartment gave first aid treatment, but Ambulance Surgeon Hermes of St. Mary's Hospital said all four had been dead several hours when he arrived.

Mrs. Balada's husband, Samuel, died in February and since then her grief has made her irrational acording to Mrs. Margaret Frey, who occupies the lower floor of the house. Religious pamphlets and books were scattered about the house in such numbers that the police believe Mrs. Balada was the victim of religious mania.

Attorney for Estate Estimates He Will Have $90,000,000 When He Is 45 Years Old.

$80,000,000 5 YEARS LATER

His Income at 35 Years of Age Will Be $1,200,000, and $1,800,000 at 40 Years.

CHICAGO, May 18.—John P. Wilson, attorney for the trustees of the Marshall Field estate, arguing for the maintenance of the will in the Superior Court today, said that Captain Marshall Field 3d, who is asking a construction of his grandfather's will, will at the age of 45 come into the accumulated income of the estate, which will be approximately $90,000,000, and five years later will get the additional accumulated income and the principal, which is now about $80,000,000.

The attorney declared that Captain Field gets an annual income of $40,000 from the trust fund, $70,000 a year for his services as trustee for the estate and $450,000 which the will provides shall be paid him every five years, beginning at the age of 25 years.

"At the age of 30 years," Mr. Wilson said, "Captain Field would receive under the will one-sixth of the income of the residuary estate. This will amount to $500,000. At 35 years the income will amount to $1,200,000 a year and at 40 years it will reach $1,800,000.

"When he becomes 45 years old Captain Field will receive the accumulated income on the entire estate up to that time.

"The fundamental question in this hearing," Mr. Wilson said, "is the scheme of the testator in disposing of his property. It was his aim to promote the welfare of his grandson and to conserve the estate so it would pass to his kin and not to strangers."

Mrs. Lydig's Library at Auction.

The library of Mrs. Rita Lydig was sold yesterday at the Anderson Galleries. Dr. A. S. W. It came from the Sunderland Library and has Robert Hoe's book plate. The total for the afternoon and evening sessions was $19,580.25.

SOCIALISTS APPEAL TO BAKER FOR PRISONERS

He Tells Them No One Was Held Except for Real Infraction of the Law.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—A committee appointed by the Socialist Party called on Secretary Baker today to present a memorial asking for the release of conscientious objectors still held in prison. The delegation was headed by Elvina S. Beals of Berkeley, Cal., and other members present were Herman D. Kent of Wisconsin, Carl Parsons of Minnesota, Joseph W. Schwartz of Ohio and Abraham Tuvin of New York.

Secretary Baker told the delegation that there were not now, and have not been, any political prisoners in he army prisons, and none now was in custody whose conscientious objections to war were based on religious grounds. Those remaining in the military prisons were held, he said, while the authorities investigated each individual case to ascertain whether the prisoner would be a useful and law-abiding citizen on his release.

The Secretary emphasized that the so-called conscientious objector was neither tried nor imprisoned for any statement of belief, but because of definite infraction of the military law.

LEVINSONS ARE INDICTED.

Levinson and his wife, Mrs. Florence Levinson of 165 West Forty-fourth Street, were indicted yesterday on a charge of having stolen a ring valued at $7,500 from the apartment of Mrs. Claire Turek, 460 West End Avenue, on April 1. The ring was returned to Mrs. Turek by E. M. Gattle & Co., of 630 Fifth Avenue, and an investigation was said to have shown that Gattle & Co. purchased it from another firm and that it was originally purchased by Maiden Lane jeweler.

Mrs. Levinson was held in $5,000 bail. Mr. Levinson, a lawyer and formerly an actor, was held in $2,500 bail. They will be arraigned today.

PROTEST TO FRANCE FOR STANDARD OIL

FRENCH DENY SUCH INTENT

Petrol Directors Say Delay in Granting Concessions for Tanks and Ports Is Due to Rush.

PARIS, May 18.—The State Department at Washington, it is learned here, has made representations to the French Government with regard to a complaint by the Standard Oil Company that the French were placing obstructions in the way of the company's French subsidiary and were also discriminating in favor of non-American concerns.

The Standard Oil Company had complained to Ambassador Wallace of obstacles it had encountered in the introduction of fuel oil into France on a large scale after the arrangements for such introduction had been made, and the Ambassador made a report on the complaint to Washington.

The introduction of fuel oil into France on a large scale by the French subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company has been prevented by French opposition, according to the announcement here. The Standard Oil Company on April 1 organized a French concern for handling petrol products, with a capital of 25,000,000 francs. This company leased one of the most imposing buildings in the Champs Elysees, where it maintains offices.

Negotiations had been going on for a considerable time between the Standard Oil Company and the French Government for the purpose of obtaining permission to erect oil storage tanks at Havre and to carry out other necessary business projects. Permission was refused for the construction of these storage facilities, and other obstacles were encountered, according to officials of the company.

In the meantime the subsidiary company received orders from French firms and steamship lines, but were unable to fill them. A controversy arose between the United States, France and England over the disposition of fourteen oil tankers belonging to the Standard's German subsidiary, which the Standard company hoped to use in the French trade. The oil tankers finally were awarded to the United States, but are at present unavailable for that purpose because of lack of port facilities.

The Director of the Petrol Administration of France say that there is no intentional discrimination of the enterprises of the French subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company and that there has been no discrimination in favor of any particular oil industry. If there has been a delay in granting concessions for the erection of tanks and for port facilities, he declares, it is because of the great number of applications on which the Government is desirous of acting impartially. Each one of these applications must go through a long administrative routine, which, he asserts, is unavoidable in the case of the Standard Oil Company, as well as other applicants.

AWAIT OIL STATEMENT IN BRITISH COMMONS

London Papers Comment on Report Made to Senate—Denial That Americans Are Excluded.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 19.—It is expected that an official statement will be made in the House of Commons either today or tomorrow on the oil question, especially in reference to the State Department's report to the Senate.

The only papers commenting on the report are The Daily Mail and The Daily Express. The former asserts that American oil interests have never been excluded from the world's oil fields, and instances Rumania and Egypt, where they abandoned concessions; the Dutch East Indies, North Borneo, Japan and China.

It also pointed out that Premier Lloyd George has declared publicly that if the United States had oil rights in Mesopotamia they would be respected and that Sir Marcus Samuel, head of the Shell Company, publicly welcomed participation of American interests in the Carribean Company for development of Venezuelan oil fields.

"On the other hand," says the Daily Mail, "it should be fairly stated that the policy of the American Government has been constantly favorable to international participation in American oil activities. Business men in close toucn with oil enterprises point out that if a policy were announced of allowing British interests only to develop oil fields in the British Empire it would raise many delicate questions, for British oil operators are busy in many foreign fields. The strength of the present British oil position lies, in fact, in this variety of sources of supply."

The "4x4" Club, the only qualification for membership in which is the desire to see General Leonard Wood become the Republican nominee for President, has 800 members, although only eight days old, Mrs. Alice McKay Kelly of the Greater New York Wood Campaign Committee announced yesterday. Mrs. Kelly explained that the name was selected because every one in the club gets a "square deal." Meetings are in almost constant progress daily and nightly at the clubhouse in Twenty-third Street, just off Sixth Avenue, which was opened by a speech by General Wood.

The claim is made for the club that it is the most cosmopolitan organization in the city. Noonday singing, with Miss Maude Bowman and Robert Miller as soloists, is a daily feature. Much work has been done in the way of advice to aliens who wish to become citizens and to first voters, both boys and girls, who wish instruction in citizenship. "We started out to work for the nomination of General Wood," said Mrs. Kelly, "but we find that we are rapidly becoming headquarters for Americanization efforts in the Chelsea section."

NAMES WOMEN WORKERS.

Glynn Appoints New Committee of State Committee.

Chairman George A. Glynn of the Republican State Committee announced yesterday the membership of the new Women's Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee. This committee, composed of sixteen women, with Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore of Westchester as Chairman, will be charged with the work of instructing women in their political duties and getting out the woman vote at primary and general election. Here is the list:

Mrs. Livermore, Chairman; Mrs. William H. Ives, Secretary, Westchester; Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes, Nassau; Miss Helen Varick Boswell, New York; Mrs. Marion P. Burton, Monroe; Miss Mary Chaboon Clinton; Mrs. MacDonald De Witt, Kings; Mrs. J. Sloat Fassett, Chemung; Mrs. Nathan Glauber, New York; Mrs. Ell T. Hosmer, Erie; Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, Onondaga; Mrs. Henry M. Sage, Albany; Miss Laura Skinner, New York; Miss Florence Wardwell, Otsego; Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, New York, and Mrs. Rosalie Loew Whitney, Kings.

There are six newcomers on the committee. Nine members of the old committee retired, two of these, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin and Mrs. Ruth Litt, both of this city, to accept places on the main executive committee of the Republican State Committee.

PENROSE AGAIN URGES KNOX'S NOMINATION

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 18. — Senator Penrose was in conference this afternoon with United States Senator McCormick of Illinois and John T. King, former campaign manager for General Leonard Wood, at his home here. In an interview he reaffirmed his support of Senator Knox for the Republican Presidential nomination.

"I still think Senator Knox is the best equipped man for the office of the President, among all the candidates," said Senator Penrose. "His Americanism is of sterling quality, and if he were elected he would command the respect of foreign nations which we are sadly in need of, it having been completely forfeited by the Wilson infirmities."

Senator McCormick, while praising Senator Knox, said that he could not agree with Senator Penrose on the Presidency, as he believed that Governer Lowden of Illinois was the logical Republican candidate.

"Governor Lowden is my choice," he said. "Of course, at the present time it is only a conjecture, but just now he is the big man of the West. I have the highest opinion of Senator Knox. I have always had it, ever since I was a cub reporter in the Senate press gallery at Washington. There is no doubt he is a good man. But Governor Lowden is a great administrator and a legislative leader and has given proper service."

Senator Penrose did not vote in today's primary on account of his still weakened condition. His physician, he said, had prescribed quiet for him for two months more.

FEARS REPUBLICAN SPLIT.

Senator France Predicts "Dark Horse" Will Be Nominated.

None of the present candidates is likely to get the Republican Presidential nomination, according to U. S. Senator France of Maryland, in a speech last night at a dinner of the Society of Arts and Sciences in the Hotel Biltmore. He declared the choice before the country was between "autocracy and liberty," and said the nominee should be a "fearless leader who will declare his devotion to the great American principles of liberty and liberalism," and one "who will not equivocate."

Before making his speech, the Senator was asked why he announced his own candidacy at so late a date.

"We face a situation which threatens the disruption of the Republican Party," he replied. "Who, among the candidates except Senator Johnson, can prevent the formation of a third party this year? Already that third party is forming. A combination of the Labor Party, the Non-Partisan League and the Committee of Forty-eight might put the Democratic party back into power by splitting the Republican forces again as in 1912. The voters demand a progressive candidate."

"Principles and not personalities should be the issue in this campaign," said the Senator in his speech. Elaborating on his theme that autocracy or liberty were the alternatives, Senator France declared that "unrest cannot be cured by repression, co-operation for production cannot be secured by coercion, and intolerant and despotic measures produce and aggravate the very condition which they are designed to cure."

The Senator opposed the use of the injunction in strikes, advocated a nation-wide co-operation to reduce the high cost of living, urged a reconsideration of the Eighteenth Amendment and denounced the League of Nations as the product of "five venerable statesmen of a passing age," whose "spirit was out of harmony with this great new spirit of liberty."

OIL DEPLETION HERE ALARMS OFFICIALS

BRITISH CONTROL EXTENDED

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Interest of the United States in the race for the oil supply of the world, as embodied in the report of the State Department submitted by President Wilson to the Senate yesterday, has arisen from the alarming depletion of oil reserves in the United States.

While this country contributes 69 per cent. of the oil supply of the world, 40 per cent. of its producing fields have been exhausted and, according to official estimates, oil reserves remaining in the United States are not expected to last twenty years.

Of the reserve in this country, foreign interests control but 4 per cent. despite the fact that the United States is the only oil producing country in which citizens and foreigners are permitted to participate in oil production on equal terms.

In the face of this "open door" oil policy pursued in this country, officials said American interests are excluded in Australia, Barbados, British East Africa, British Guiana, Burma Dutch East Indies, Egypt, France, Algeria, India, Japan, Mesopotamia, Palestine, Persia, Trinidad and the United Kingdom.

In Mexico, which ranks second in oil production in the world and thereby controls the "balance of power," according to official estimates, American concerns hold controlling interest in 60 per cent. of producing fields.

Potential interests of the British, however, have shown a steady increase throughout the world since 1914. At the beginning of the war, British control was estimated at only 2 per cent., while today the British Admiralty is said to reckon it at 56 per cent.

The strong active British policy to gain potential oil areas, pursued systematically since the armistice, officials explained, was an effort to obtain the same position in control of oil as has been so long maintained by the British in the control of coal. Oil as a fuel now is used almost exclusively by the British Navy.

TO FIX JUNE MILK PRICE.

Farmers and Distributors to Confer Today.

The price to be paid to farmers for milk in June will be considered this afternoon by representatives of the Dairymen's League and the New York Milk Conference Board, representing the distributors. League officials said they believed the price would be about the same as for May, possibly a shade lower.

It has been decided by the League that the milk will be sold according to the Warren formula with differentials, discarding the butter and cheese basis, which has been in effect for fifteen months.

COX FOR THE LEAGUE ON WILSON'S BASIS

No Objection to Interpretative Reservations—Says Republican Leaders Plotted to Beat Treaty.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 19.—A special correspondent of The Sun telegraphs from Columbus, Ohio:

"Governor James M. Cox of Ohio stands with President Wilson in support of the League of Nations. He says he is not interested in quibbles over details, nor opposed to interpretative reservations, but he holds that the world needs the League and that the Democratic position is clear.

"Governor Cox is equally definite in condemnation of the Republican leaders. He charges them with conspiracy to defeat President Wilson's work in behalf of the League, and contends that the conspiracy began with the President's departure for Europe, and ran through every stage of the negotiations.

The correspondent quotes the Governor as saying:

"I can see no embarrassment whatsoever in writing the League of Nations plank into the Democratic platform. We need simply to recite the facts from the beginning of this question.

"The affairs of the world's civilization are disjointed. The loose ends will never be tied together until the nations of the earth unite in this purpose. This would have been done long ago except for the Senatorial conspiracy formed by Senator Lodge and other Republican leaders.

"If further evidence were needed of their present insincerity it is supplied by the circumstance of their violation of precedent and the Constitutional provision itself when they denied the President both the courtesy and his Constitutional right of submitting to the Senate the treaty as the initial communication between the Executive and the Senate.

"Instead of standing behind the President as a part of America when national co-operation was essential to a peace that would rapidly bring an end to world confusion and prevent a prolonged controversy over territory in Europe, they never exerted a single effort to help."

"The Democratic platform should recite that the Democratic position (on the covenant) is precisely the same as President Wilson has cited it in his letter of Jan. 8—that is, that any suggestions or additions are welcome so long as their purpose and effect are interpretative rather than destructive."

On the prohibition question the correspondent quotes the Governor as saying: "I don't know exactly what is ahead of the country in the fight over prohibition. Public opinion will rule, but it is not clear as yet how far the reaction against the Volstead act will go or how permanent it will be. My judgment is that the reaction certainly will not go further than stand for beer and light wines."

"DRY" AGENT IS ARRESTED.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 18.—James W. Waldie of New York, a Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue in the office of James S. Shevlin, Supervising Federal Prohibition Agent in New York, was given a hearing here tonight before Richard E. Carroll, United States Commissioner, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government and violation of the prohibition laws.

He was arrested in Torrington today while riding on a truck which contained 150 gallons of bonded whisky. Thomas F. Bowe of New Haven, driver of the truck, was also taken into custody. While the officers were inspecting Waldie's personal effects, he snatched a paper from his belongings and tore it up, it is said, before he could be subdued.

KAISER'S YACHTS ARE OFFERED HERE

Meteor IV. and Meteor V., Racing Craft, to Go for $300,000 and $350,000.

With household furnishings of the Kaiser already on the auction block, the marine part of the former German Emperor's establishment is in the market for a new owner. Realizing apparently that the big new moat around Doorn is all right for privacy, but not so good for regattas, he has offered for sale his two famous racing scooners, Meteor IV. and Meteor V.

Andrew Blom of Svenborg, Denmark, agent in the transaction, announced in an advertisement yesterday the Kaiser's decision to part with the boats, one of which he used to pilot to victory at Kiel. Mr. Blom stipulated that delivery of the vessels be in "Scandinavian waters."

The Meteor IV. is an American-built schooner, having been laid down in New York City in 1902. The yacht is of steel construction and was completed from designs made by Cary Smith. The craft, in addition to its big sail spread had auxiliary motors and, advertises Mr. Blom, "it is the fastest vessel afloat of its size."

The yacht is magnificently fitted out. For the craft and attendant privilege of treading the boards once paced by Wilhelm when he used to steal away to read the Krupps' latest report and "dream of peace," $300,000 is asked. Or, at yesterday's rate of exchange, 15,000,000 marks.

Whether Mr. Blom's information is wrong or the reporters who covered the launching of the Smith designed yacht in New York eighteen years ago were less accurate than present day reporters is open to question, but at any rate the racer that slid down the ways of the Townsend-Downey shipbuilding yards in 1902 was known as Meteor III.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, then Miss Alice Roosevelt, was the sponsor. Her father, then President, was among the brilliant assemblage that witnessed the event. Prince Henry of Prussia also was there and a detachment of the "Imperial Guard." The "Imperial Guard" were there, for a newspaper account of the launching told how an officer of the Guard "asked pardon for inadvertently jostling the wife of a local politician."

The Meteor V, as set forth in Mr. Blom's advertisement, was "never used." The schooner was constructed in the Germania Yards at Kiel in 1914 and was launched just before her Imperial owner turned from yachts to submarines and from regattas and to regrets that he should be away cruising when his army invaded Belgium. The racing ship was put together from designs by the Krupps and lavishly decorated throughout.

The price asked for the Meteor V is $350,000 or 17,500,000 German marks.

DENIAL FROM GOETHALS.

Says He Is Not to Head Syndicate for Reconstruction in France.

Major Gen. George W. Goethals denied yesterday cable reports from Paris that he would head an American syndicate joined with the French Federation of Labor for the reconstruction of devastated areas in France.

General Goethals said that he had a conference with M. Jouhaux of the French Federation of Labor when the latter was in this country attending an international labor congress in Washington several months ago. No agreement was made at this interview, said General Goethals. Their conversation, through an interpreter, consisted only of an "abstract discussion of what should be legitimate returns for capital, labor and engineers in various enterprises," General Goethals said.

SAVE MAIL SERVICE, URGES MAYOR HYLAN

ASKS BUSINESS MEN TO ACT

Efficiency of System Can Only Be Preserved by Keeping Trained Workers, He Says.

Mayor Hylan yesterday issued a statement to the public and entitling it "Saving the Postal Service," urged business men to get together and impress upon Congress the necessity of New York City getting adequate mail service. For months the Merchants Association and other commercial organizations have been advocating the same thing.

"New York City," declared the Mayor, "needs adequate postal facilities. This is required for our six million people. It is also made necessary by the fact that this city is the clearing house for most of the mail from abroad, and business of any character, wherever located, has connections here.

"Trade and commerce need good postal service. The efficiency of the system can only be saved from utter worthlessness by retaining the trained employes.

"The seriousness of the situation was brought to the attention of Congress two years ago and its Postal Wage Commission has been investigating the matter for many months.

"If the business people of this city will assert themselves, there is no doubt that New York would not only have the present condition remedied but also secure such necessary betterments of the postal service as the most populous metropolis on the globe should have had long ago.

"It, therefore, behooves all the business interests of this city and all associates of business men who appreciate the vital relationship of good postal service to the management of business, to urge Congress to take prompt action on this matter."

All New, Fresh Stocks in Every Conceivable Weave, Pattern and Quality at History Making Prices

S. Strauss & Co., 127 to 133 West 26th Street, operate one of the largest wholesale silk houses in New York City. They have (until now) transacted the bulk of their business with manufacturers of the various kinds of apparel and other makers.

There has been a temporary lull in the business of these wholesalers, so S. Strauss & Co., finding themselves with a $3,000,000 stock of seasonable silks, decided to turn to retailers for distribution of their merchandise.

Gimbels with their enormous three-store outlet loomed up as the natural selling point and succeeded in being chosen as the exclusive distributor of as much of the Strauss stock as they can absorb.

A score or more of special groups are mentioned below. Space does not permit of full mention of all the items to be offered. New ones will be added daily—but you can see the scope of the sale from the specials mentioned below. Note that this sale is within reach of the smallest buyer and that the same choosing and saving is open to the purchaser of one or one thousand yards.

Therefore—with a stock totalling more, we believe, than any other store has ever offered, with silks of every color, kind and quality, at prices which approximate present wholesale cost—Gimbels presents this silk sale to the country today as—the supreme silk event of the decade.

INDUSTRY COMPILES POLITICAL PLATFORM

APPEAL TO BOTH PARTIES

GROSS SALES TAX PROPOSED

The National Association of Manufacturers, holding its silver jubilee convention at the Waldorf-Astoria last night, adopted "a platform for American industry," to be submitted to the Republican and Democratic Conventions for incorporation in their national platforms.

Before discussing the platform the delegates received the report of the Committee on Industrial Betterment, Health and Safety, which contained a bitter attack on the American Federation of Labor. The Federation, the report asserted, "brazenly proposes to take the power of the Government" by electing a President and Congress that will do its bidding.

The statement of Samuel Gompers that "we will stand by our friends and administer a stinging rebuke to men or parties who are either indifferent, negligent or hostile" was characterized as a defiant challenge to all opposing labor's ambitions in the coming election. Labor has "openly declared war," the report said, "and is going to appeal to the public, for whom it has no compassion when striking to gain its ends."

Government and Industry.—As it is not the function of our Government to own or operate industry, but to protect and encourage its legitimate development under private ownership and management, it should abstain from competition with its own citizens in any form of business which they can successfully undertake. The Federal Trade Commission is promoting the perplexity of business men, is persistently inquisitorial beyond its capacity and represents government by men and not by law.

Regulations of Combinations—The right to organize and act in combination, whether by labor or capital, is relative and not absolute, ending where injury to the public interest begins. The public interest demands that this principle, applied to business for twenty-five years, should now be applied to all combinations. The right to strike or lockout must be defined and limited whenever it conflicts with the community's paramount right of self-preservation. The National and State Governments should establish control over combinations operating in production and transportation essential to the life of the community. The paramount common interest in continuous public utility service requires the ultimate submission of disputes threatening the interruption of such service to impartial adjudication without depriving the community of it."

Individual Bargaining Upheld.

Private Employment Relations—The right to seek and establish employment relations with each other without respect to the membership or non-membership of either in any organization is an essential part of the personal freedom of employer and employe. * * * The parties must be free to make and maintain their own relationship in such form as is mutually satisfactory.

Taxation and Finance—The excess profits tax should be repealed and there should be substituted for it a tax on gross final sales of goods. We favor the refunding of our war indebtedness into long-term securities and the postponement of the sinking fund payments until industry has an opportunity to recover from the strain of war conditions. Economy in public expenditures will be permanently secured only by the enactment of an effective budget system.

Transportation—We approve of the return of the railroads to their owners. To save the business of the country from irreparable injury rates must be speedily adjusted to re-establish and maintain railway credit and capacity to render adequate service. We favor the permissive consolidation of existing railway systems under conditions that will promote economies of operation, efficiency in management and maintain competitive rivalry in service. The deliberate obstruction or interruption of transportation service is intolerable. Railroad strikes inevitably become lockouts of the farmer and factory worker and boycotts the public.

Would Examine Immigrants Abroad.

Immigration—We believe in a "constructive policy of selective immigration." Our policy should distinguish the requirements for admission from those of naturalization. Through official foreign agencies of our own we should obtain accurate information of the character and qualification of alien applicants for admission and to the fullest extent practicable approve or reject them before embarkation. The distribution of immigrants should be systematized.

Merchant Marine—Successful commerce and national security require an adequate, privately owned and operated American merchant marine, composed of ships built in American yards, of American material, by American labor, manned, officered and owned by Americans and sailing without handicap under the American flag. To this end we urge the termination through due notice of all treaties or commercial conventions with foreign nations which restrain our Congress from enacting appropriate, independent, protective and promotive legislation.

Foreign Trade—The tariff policy should be framed in the light of present conditions, and of its relation to a scientific revision of our system of taxation. We must by every means facilitate foreign trade, but at the same time adequately protect the high standards of our industrial life. We favor a definite and liberal policy toward our allies in the war, with respect to their indebtedness to us, to the end that there may be a prompt re-establishment of foreign exchange and trade conditions on a sound basis.

Opposed to Indiscriminate Bonuses.

War Bonus—The general and indiscriminate distribution of a cash bonus is not justifiable. It would tend to lessen the inspiration and debase the motive of national service. It would dangerously overstrain our heavily burdened economic structure. Generous provision should be made for the dependents of those who died in the war and reasonable Government assistance should be accorded to those who served in the army or navy and who need assistance.

Louis Marshall delivered an address on immigration at the afternoon session. In view of the shortage of labor, he said, it was desirable that the right kind of immigrants be admitted. He opposed the literacy test and the payment of a head tax.

Senator Edge of New Jersey urged the examination of immigrants before leaving Europe for America, the examination to include their political activities on the other side.

Henry Parker Willis of the Federal Reserve Board said the United States was in a stronger financial condition than any other nation in the world. Dr. R. S. MacElwee, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, told the convention the excessive cost of marine terminals was handicapping the country's commerce.

Name Senators for Inquiry on Primary Campaign Funds

WASHINGTON, May 18. — The Senate Auditing Committee will take up tomorrow the Borah resolution providing for an investigation of primary campaign expenditures of both Republican and Democratic Presidential candidates.

In anticipation of its adoption, Chairman Dillingham of the Elections Committee today announced the appointment of a sub-committee composed of Senators Kenyon, Iowa; Sherman, Illinois; Wadsworth, New York; Reed, Missouri, and Pomerene, Ohio, to make the investigation.

LENIN GOVERNMENT ARRESTS 75 ZIONISTS

Charges Treasonable Relations With the Entente and Accuses Henry Morgenthau.

MOSCOW, May 16 (Associated Press). —Seventy-five delegates and alternates to the All-Russian Zionist Congress, which met here late in April, have been arrested, according to a statement issued by the Extraordinary Commission today. It is asserted that the extraordinary secrecy observed regarding the meeting of the Congress and the fact that a large proportion of those present were not connected with the Zionist movement led to the arrests.

Investigation, it is alleged, has resulted in the discovery of compromising documents, many of foreign origin, revealing close contact with Entente countries. The existence of a courier service between Russia and London has also been shown, it is asserted. Charges are made that bombs have been found in the office of the Central Zionist Committee.

It is alleged that 80,000 Jewish legionaries in Palestine have pledged support to the Entente armies through an agreement with England, and that Henry Morgenthau, former American Ambassador to Turkey, visited Poland last Fall as a representative of the Zionists. It is said that on that occasion he urged the Jewish population to submit to the Polish imperialists.

American Zionists, it is charged, furnished financial support to Admiral Kolchak, white Jewish troops, it is alleged, were used in England against the Egyptian Nationalists and on the Archangel and Odessa fronts in Russia. Zionist reports of pogroms in Soviet Russia are cited as part of the Zionist propaganda. It is declared that the Soviet Government is not opposed to legitimate Zionist activities, but that the abuse of privileges by that party has forced the Government to take drastic action.

Henry Morgenthau last night expressed amazement at the reference to him in the foregoing dispatch. The ex-Ambassador to Turkey said that he was not and never had been a Zionist, as was well known, and that while in Poland investigating conditions he carefully avoided taking any side on the Zionist question, lest it prejudice the success of his mission. So far as he was concerned, Mr. Morgenthau said, the allegations in the dispatch were wholly erroneous.

RECOGNIZE SIBERIAN REPUBLIC.

Soviets Suggest Immediate Negotiations Looking to Trade.

MOSCOW, May 16 (Associated Press.) —A note informing the Far Eastern Democratic Republic of Siberia that it has been recognized by the Russian Soviet Government was sent today to M. Krasnoshoikoff, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Siberian Republic, at Krasnovarsk.

M. Krasnoshoikoff is regarded as the strongest man in the Far Eastern Republic and was formerly a lawyer of Chicago. He was identified with the American labor movement for several years, and recently has been President of the Executive Committee of Khabarovsk. He was the first to advocate a coalition of parties and the establishment of a semstvo democratic Government in Siberia as being best suited to the country's needs and the international situation.

HINTS AT WAR BREAD FOR ENGLAND AGAIN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 18.—Food Controller McCurdy, speaking in London tonight, said:

"It is quite possible that in a few months from now the people of this country will be called upon to eat war bread of a quality comparable only to that we were obliged to eat during the most difficult period of the war.

"If that necessity comes about, it will be due simply to the fact that the wheat supplies of the world are not going to be enough for the world's demands."

CONGRESS IS COLD TO DAVISON'S PLEA

POINT TO PRESENT TAXES

Methodist Conference Calls on the People and the Government to Respond to the Appeal.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Congress today received with little favor the suggestion of H. P. Davison, head of the Red Cross, that it appropriate $500,000,000 for relief of Central Europe. The opinion generally expressed by members of both houses was that with heavy taxes at home, and demands for money apparently increasing, Congress should not dip into the public treasury to help people of other countries. Some doubt was expressed as to the constitutional right of Congress to levy taxation for this purpose in peace times.

Members of Congress deplored the situation described by Mr. Davison in his Des Moines speech, and said that many Americans would doubtless be glad to contribute to a fund to help Central Europe, but it seemed unlikely from the tone of the comment that Congress would consider at this time appropriating any such sum as Mr. Davison suggested, involving, as it would, a further tax burden.

Representative James W. Good, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, disapproved of Congress making another appropriation for the relief of the starving in Central Europe. The American people, he said, are against further expenditure of money to aid stricken countries, and furthermore, he added, it is questionable whether Congress has the authority to spend the people's money in this way.

"I think that the situation is very bad in the countries mentioned by Mr. Davison," said Mr. Good, "but aid should not be given them by Congress but rather should come through an appeal to charitable and benevolent Americans. The rich of America should give to the limit and I hope that they will give in such amounts that it will not be necessary for Congress to appropriate any money.

Fears a Bad Precedent.

"Congress ought to encourage and aid in any way an appeal to the American public, but it ought not to make such a big appropriation as $500,000,000, or anything, if it can be done by the people through voluntary subscription. The giving of money in this way is a bad precedent. We have cut down the estimates this year because we did not have enough money.

"Such a large amount of money could be obtained in only two ways, by additional taxes or by the selling of bonds. The American people are opposed to more taxes and we could not sell bonds. Congress has already shown its position on appropriating further for those in war countries. It refused to grant an appropriation of a large amount for the relief of European peoples and merely allowed the Grain Corporation to send 50,000,000 barrels of flour abroad.

"Let the Red Cross, which is admirably fitted for this work, organize an appeal and start a campaign to raise the money. They could get the money and allocate its use better than any non-partisan commission."

Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio expressed a similar view.

"So far as this Congress is concerned it is perfectly absurd to think that it would grant any money for the relief of those in Europe," said Mr. Longworth. "Congress has taken the only action it will take this session. It has already authorized the sending of flour to Armenia and Poland."

Senators Borah and Kenyon voiced almost exactly the same sentiments, and among other members of both houses there was virtual unanimity in disapproving of the proposal.

Methodists for Government Aid.

DES MOINES, May 18. — Immediately after the address yesterday of Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the League of Red Cross Societies, at the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the following resolution was offered from the floor and adopted unanimously:

"Whereas, From various parts of the world, and particularly from many sections of war-stricken Europe, there comes from thousands upon thousands of God's children and our brothers and sisters the cry of 'Help us or we die!' and

"Whereas, The Red Cross is continuing its great work of the wartimes, and, so far as its resources and means will permit, is facing the fearful conditions which exist and is nobly responding to the cause of the suffering and dying; and

"Whereas, The Hon. Henry P. Davison, the head of the World-Red Cross, has brought to us the heart-breaking message of need.

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, assembled in general conference in the city of Des Moines, State of Iowa, do hereby record our full and sincere indorsement of the great humanitarian and Christian purposes of the Red Cross and our highest recognition of its wide service and mercy and brotherly love to suffering humanity, and,

"That we do urge all people, and, because of the representative character in which we are here assembled, do particularly urge the members and friends of our church connections, to support generously by efforts and means the far reaching and merciful work of the Red Cross, and

"Be it resolved, that the Government of the United States should take appropriate action to help meet the crisis as to human existence in portions of Europe, and

"Be it further resolved, that we do hereby express to the Hon. Henry P. Davison our deep appreciation and sincere thanks for his bringing to us his heart-stirring message of the hour and assure him of our prayers and God-speed in his work for suffering mankind, to which he is so effectively devoting his high abilities."

ROBBED, THEN SHOT TWICE.

Chicago Advertising Man Injured While Pursuing Assailants.

While he was chasing two men who had stolen $200 in cash and jewelry from him, Charles L. Storms, a Chicago advertising man, was shot twice early yesterday morning. Storms had been visiting friends and was leaving thmeir apartment in Fort Washington Avenue near 190th Street when he was held up. Storms was submissive until his assailants, who had driven up in an automobile, started to take his cuff links. As he pursued them they jumped into their automobile and opened fire on him. A patrolman took Storms to the St. Lawrence Hospital, where surgeons said his wounds were superficial.

ASQUITH WANTS REVISION.

Says Europe's Only Hope Is in Modifying Treaties.

LONDON, May 18.—Ex-Premier Asquith, speaking at a meeting held to advocate a revision of the peace treaties, said that the only practical remedy "for the tragic state of things all over Europe" was in a modification of the terms of the treaties, universal disarmament and effectiveoperation of the authority and powers of the League of Nations.

Madden Again Calls Confederates Traitors; Barely Escapes Attack in House Uproar

WASHINGTON, May 18.—A reiterated statement by Representative Madden, Republican, of Illinois, in the House today that the Confederates of civil way days were traitors, evoked a storm of protest from Southern members.

Representative Stedman, Democrat, of North Carolina, a Confederate veteran, had told the House that Mr. Madden's similar remark last week would be disapproved by a majority of the people of the country. Madden replied that he had no apology to make. The Confederates were traitors because they attempted to destroy the Union, Mr. Madden said, and asked:

There was an uproar from the Democrats, several Southern members shouting "yes" and others "you're a liar."

Representative Romjue, Democrat, of Missouri, arose from his seat, starting toward Madden, as did Representative Johnson, Democrat, of Mississippi, but both stopped short. Madden turned toward the Democratic side and said:

"They were traitors. You say no, and I say yes. They did try to destroy the Union."

The turmoil finally subsided, but previously Mr. Stedman drew cheers from the Democrats when he said that no one questioned the bravery or integrity of Robert E. Lee, and that Mr. Madden was "alone in a wilderness of his own creation."

GERMAN MAGNATES TO MEET FRENCH

Five Industrial Leaders Will Inquire French Attitude Toward Business Reconstruction.

SEEK MARKET AND SUPPLIES

Meeting Is Expected to Smooth the Way for Negotiations at Spa Conference.

BERLIN, May 18.—Five leaders of the German industrial world, including Herr Deutsch, of the General Electric Company, and Herr von Einberg, of a Cassel aniline dye concern, are proceeding to Paris to confer with the leading French industrial men.

One of the delegates, speaking for the whole commission, said today that the motives which actuate the German delegates to seek contact with the French are to ascertain whether and to what extent Germany may look forward to receiving encouragement from her former enemies to enable her to determine the guiding lines of Germany's future industrial development in so far as it is affected by the provisions of the Peace Treaty.

Germany is anxious to discover what sources of raw material are at her disposal and what markets are available for finished articles.

Hitherto there has been a feeling of uncertainty in German industrial circles regarding the future French attitude and the forthcoming deliberations are expected to clarify the situation.

It was said at the Foreign Office today that the conferences would partake of a political and general economic character. Politically, it was declared, efforts would be directed toward clearing the atmosphere between the two countries, thereby smoothing the way for the conference at Spa and the negotiations to follow at the conference.

In general, it is expected, the deliberations will mark another step toward the rebuilding of Europe by enabling experts of both countries to discuss the situation fully and freely at the same table.

TURN DUKE'S MANSION OVER TO THE MOVIES

Devonshire House Will Retain Crystal Stairs as Ascent to Huge Dance Hall.

LONDON, May 18.—Devonshire House, the ducal residence in Piccadilly, which on more than one occasion has attracted the attention of Americans anxious to find a site for a huge hotel run on the transatlantic plan, has been purchased by a British syndicate for 1,000,000 guineas, and will be turned into a combined cinema palace and huge dancing and assembly hall. At the head of the syndicate are Shurmer Sibthorp of London and Laurence Harrison, the Liverpool shipowner.

The old house will be broken up, but those who fear the loss of historic features may find some consolation in the fact that the Duke is taking away certain old doors, windows and panelling before he leaves the house in the hands of the syndicate, while the famous staircase of crystal, along which stately dames and lords in bygone days were accustomed to pass on great social occasions, will be retained and used for ascent to the dancing hall.

Sibthorp, the chief negotiator of the deal, says he intended to make the place "the most gigantic pleasure house in London," and he has the legal right to retain the name of Devonshire House. There will be either one cinema, accommodating 5,000 persons, or two cinemas back to back, each accommodating 3,000. It will be the finest equipped and most lavish picture theatre on American lines in this country.

As Sibthorp required only certain street frontages of the building, he has been joined by Harrison, who is going to deal with the rest of the property, and the back sites will probably be offered for other premises. Sibthorp is at present in trouble by restrictions now imposed by the Ministry of Health on the "luxury" of building.

The erection of many projected places of amusement is being held up in consequence of the authorities refusing permission for the use of material and labor while the shortage of dwelling houses continues. Sibthorp hopes, however, to convince the Ministry that his building, a special form of concrete, will not divert any purely household materials. The business men interested in the cinema plans have both engineering works and a shipbuilding yard.

LONDON, May 18.—A new British record has been established by a Handley-Page airplane fitted with two engines, of 450 horse power each. The flight lasted eighty minutes, and a record load of 2,690 pounds, equivalent to twenty-six passengers, was carried to a height of 13,999 feet.

TURKS AND GREEKS FIGHT NEAR SMYRNA

AGITATION AGAINST TREATY

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 18 (Associated Press).—Greek and Turkish troops have been in collision about 25 miles east of Smyrna, where the Turks are taking the offensive and are apparently massing reinforcements preparatory to further advances against the Greeks.

Jafar Tayar, Turkish commandant at Adrianople, has sent a message here from that city, saying 40,000 Turks and Bulgarians are prepared to resist the Greeks. He declares they will meet the Greeks midway between Tchatalja and Adrianople when the Greeks begin the occupation of Thrace.

The first meeting of protest against the peace treaty will be held here Friday, when Prince Seba Heddin, who recently returned from France after a long perfod of exile, will be the speaker.

Sali Pasha, who was Grand Vizier before Damad Ferid Pasha, has gone to Angora to join the Nationalists. All the Turkish parties have announced that they will unite in protest against the peace treaty.

COUNTING ON AMERICA TO HELP ON WAR DEBTS

PARIS, May 18.—Co-operation by the United States is very largely counted upon by allied circles, and particularly by the French, for success of the scheme of liquidation of war debts and reparations, the principles of which were laid down by Premiers Lloyd George and Millerand at the recent conference at Hythe.

The opinion in French official circles is that the German bond issue on which the whole plan rests must largely be accepted by the United States in payment of French debts, otherwise the plan will fail. Great Britain's acceptance of these bonds in payment of the debt of France also depends upon their acceptance by the United States.

The principles of the plan as sketched by the French and British Premiers will be referred to Washington, as well as to the Allies, for approval, and it is probable that each Government consulted will be asked to suggest any improvements on the plan in order to make it acceptable all around.

It was said today in official circles that there was plenty of room left for suggestions, since the Hythe conference left the details to be worked out by experts. Even the total amount of reparations will be open to modification, 120,000,000,000 marks being the maximum.

The French appear to accept freely the idea of linking the question of Germany's economic revival with the question of reparation payments, so long as such a course does not interfere with the working of a plan for the settlement of the interallied debts in a way that will make possible American co-operation. It is held that the bond issue proposed at Hythe is the only practicable method yet offered, and the success of that plan is considered certain if it is approved by Washington.

LONDON, May 18.—In the Divorce Court tomorrow there will be heard the undefended divorce petition of Lady Katherine de Vere Somerset against her husband, Captain H. C. S. A. Somerset. Lady Katherine is a daughter of the tenth Duke of St. Albans. Captain Somerset is the only son of Lord and Lady Henry Somerset, and grandson of the eighth Duke of Beaufort.

Captain Henry Charles Somers Augustus Somerset, whose mother visited this country as a temperance advocate, was born May 18, 1874, and married Katherine de Vere Beauclerk, fourth daughter of the Duke of St. Albans, in 1896.

Captain Somerset served in South Africa, winning the Queen's medal, and in the European war, when he was twice mentioned in dispatches and received the Mons star.

RECOUNTS FRENCH GAINS AT HYTHE

HAD TO RENOUNCE PRIORITY

PARIS, May 18.—The Matin publishes an analysis of the results of the Hythe conference, which is the subject of so much varying comment in the French press. The important point made by The Matin is that England conditions her "paralleling" of payments of the debt of France to her with payments by Germany upon the attitude of America with regard to allied debts due her.

Here is The Matin article:

"Before the conference at Hythe the Allies had no financial system. Since this meeting they have one. That it is perfect and definite neither Millerand nor Lloyd George pretends. At least the two Premiers can feel that they have entered together and almost pari passu upon the ground of realities.

"In order that France may not be ruined by her victory it is necessary that she realize on her German credit.

"This evident truth, which dictated Millerand's policy for him, every one recognizes, even the authors of that manual of philosophy which is called the Treaty of Peace. The latter unfortunately failed to discover the means of applying the rules they laid down.

"They have well said that Germany should give us bonds, and Germany has never refused to do so. As for the method of negotiating these bonds, that is not written on any page of the Treaty. They constitute by themselves a recognition of the debt and nothing more. They are really not bonds; they are principles.

"'You can,' said a foreign member of the Commission of Reparation the other day, 'put several billions of these bonds into your cash drawer and leave it open. Nobody will take them.'

"'Germany,' Lloyd George says on all occasions, 'can pay her debts only on condition that she work and reconstitute herself.'

"Our Prime Minister said to Lloyd George that his reasoning called for a counter proposition: that Germany should be helped to her feet only on condition that she be constrained to pay her debts. It would truly be too easy if, after having started the war in order to open new markets for herself and having failed, she would only have to say to us now: 'Let me rebuild myself. As for what I have cost you in ruins, in sorrow, in wounds and miseries, then I shall be again powerful and rich we shall see about all that.'

"At San Remo Millerand and Lloyd George agreed in declaring that if Germany wished to regain her prosperity she would have to purchase it.

"There remained to fix the method. That was the object of the meeting at Hythe. Evidently Germany can discharge her indebtedness only by annual payments spread over a long period of time. Should these payments be fixed at once or should the total be changed from time to time and debates reopened without ceasing?

"This second eventuality offered all sorts of difficulties, of which the gravest was that neither France nor England nor Germany, nor any one in Europe, could establish the total. No plan for the future would mean perpetual chaos.

"On the other hand, these annual payments, appearing small to begin with, would have aided the allied budgets very little even admitting that Germany would make them in good faith, which is not probable.

"Thus Millerand and Lloyd George at the beginning of their meeting at Hythe set about fixing the minimum amount of the German debt and then considering the annual contributions of the conquered nation as the basis of the successive loans which Germany would be authorized to float in the international market.

"These loans would permit the Allies immediately to get hold of sums infinitely more important than a German annual payment; for it is not in thirty years that we must rebuild our devastated regions; it is at once. The future of all the nations which our debt will be fixed in the next three or four years. Every month of delay represents billions of loss.

"In order that Germany may have an interest in giving these guarantees it is necessary that she have a part of the proceeds of the loans and employ such amounts to her own restoration. Millerand and Lloyd George agreed definitely on this point.

"The method being settled, what should be the term of the annual payments? How should they be distributed among the Allies? There was much discussion at Hythe on these points. To begin with, Millerand requested priority for our devastated regions. And, indeed, if there was ever a just claim, it was that.

"Unfortunately, Lloyd George, who thinks in English—that is, thinks of the British dominions before the French devastated provinces—rejected the French claim, invoking the promise given by France.

"'Is France going to change her doctrine each time she changes her Premier?' he demanded. 'Clemenceau renounced this priority; you demand. It is not written in the treaty which your Parliament has approved.'

"Thus the faults of the past rose up against us. It was too late to gather the fruits surrendered by our treaty negotiators. It was necessity to hold to the 55 per cent. of the indemnity which the preceding agreements gave us.

"At least on other points Millerand scored a success.

"The English proposed the figure of 100,000,000,000 marks gold, payable in thirty years, without interest. There would have come to us 55,000,000,000. But 55,000,000,000 in thirty years, without interest, means, if one discounts it today, 28,000,000,000.

"The French delegation declared that it could not accept this proposition, and the first day of the conference ended in incertitude.

"The next day Millerand presented a counter proposition in which the figure was put at 120,000,000,000 marks gold, with interest. He gave his reasons for this figure. Of 120,000,000,000 marks gold the share of France would be 66,000,000,000. The damages caused our invaded regions he fixed at 152,000,000,000 francs, and the capital of our pensions as 58,000,000,000. The total of the reparations due us, then reaches 210,000,000,000 francs. The gold mark represents a quarter of a dollar—in other words, at present exchange something more than three francs. To obtain the 210,000,000,000 francs due us we must have at least 66,000,000,000 gold marks, with interest.

"The British delegation recognized the justice of our claims and admitted the French figures, turning them over to the experts for consideration.

"The English Government proposed in addition that in order to facilitate German loans all similar loans be prohibited for five years.

"The French delegation, which had to renounce the priority it desired, proposed another plan, and asked that England consent to subordinate the payment of the credit she possessed against France—about 30,000,000,000 francs at present exchange—to the payments which Germany should make to France.

"The British Government received this suggestion favorably, but could not give a definite response before ascertaining the demands of the creditors of England, namely, the United States."

Quits Reparation Board.

PARIS, May 18.—Raymond Poincaré has resigned his post as French representative on the Reparation Commission and Premier Millerand has accepted his resignation. M. Poincaré's reason was that recent conferences had relieved the commission of its most difficult task.

Order from Jail Now Strike of Chicago Street Cleaners

CHICAGO, May 18.—Five thousand employes of the municipal Street Cleaning, Garbage Removal and Repair Department struck today to enforce demands for increased wages. Unless settled within twenty-four hours, officials said, the strike will force between 5,000 and 6,000 other workers out of employment.

The strike was called from the County Jail by "Big" Tim Murphy and Mike Carrozzo, union leaders, who are being held for the murder of Maurice ("Mossy") Enright, gunman and labor organizer.

Chauffeurs who formerly received $6 and are now getting $7 ask $8. Street cleaners, increased from $3.75 to $4.15, ask $4.75. Garbage handlers, raised from $4 to $4.40, ask $5.60.

MODERATES BEATEN IN GERMAN VOTING

FEAR REICHSTAG OVERTURN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, May 3.—Within three weeks of the time for the appeal to the country the German coalition Government has suffered a series of heavy defeats at provincial elections, the results of which are just announced. In Strelitz, the reactionaries have secured a majority in the new Landtag, and in Brunswick they increased their representation from 15 to 23.

Today the whole conservative press is jubilant and the Government organs are correspondingly despondent. Vorwärts, for example, wails thus:

"The growing strength of the Right parties is extremely significant. These results show that the German democracy can only win the electoral struggle for a new Reichstag if it forms a united front against the Right and abandons the present suicidal civil war."

As a prelude to these results Chancellor Müller, in a speech on the previous day in the Majority Socialists' campaign, said that the danger of a dictatorship of the proletariat was less than that of a dictatorship of the great industrialists. So much for the increasing power of the reactionaries, for it is accepted that these elections are a reflection in miniature and therefore at the same time of tremenedous significance and importance at this critical moment in the history of the new Germany.

There is another aspect—the Communists have shown that their support is as weak as their words are strong. Participating in elections for the first time, their experiment proved disastrous for them. They polled less than 2 per cent. of the votes recorded.

See Trend for Reichstag Election.

BERLIN, May 18 (Associated Press)—The results of elections for the Diets of German States, held on Sunday in Brunswick, Strelitz and the free State of Danzig, are widely commented upon today as indicating the trend of public opinion likely to be expressed in the approaching elections to the Reichstag.

An example of this trend is found in the results of the elections to the Brunswick Diet. That Diet consists of sixty members. The Independent Socialists elected nine additional members, making their total twenty-three, while the parties of the Right raised their representation by eight members, to a total of twenty-four.

Returns from Danzig show that the Conservatives captured thirty-four seats and the Radicals jointly won forty. All the bourgeois parties will hold seventy-three seats. The Independent Socialists scored a slight lead over the Majority Socialists.

Commenting upon these showings, the Tageblatt today says:

"If on June 6 the Democratic middle parties are beaten in this fashion it will come to an issue between the parties of the right on the one hand and the Independent Socialists and Communists on the other. Neither can rule for a fortnight without the gravest disorders and civil war in the country."

For the first time in the history of the country, a German Chancellor has appeared before the voters to deliver a partisan campaign speech. The existing Parliamentary system made it possible for Herr Müller to meet his constituents at Nuremburg on Sunday and freely discuss issues involved in the present campaign.

Herr Müller declared that the Majority Socialists would not enter a coalition bloc in which the National Liberals were represented, and rejected the Soviet scheme of government. After his address he was subjected to heckling by Independent Socialists.

BERLIN PAPER URGES PARLEY WITH AMERICA

BERLIN, May 17.—Only a few Berlin newspapers comment editorially on the vote in the United States Senate on the Knox resolution for ending the state of war between the United States and Germany.

The Tageblatt believes that the United States has "found a convenient solution of the situation growing out of the rejection of the Versailles Treaty," in that its present action absolves it from assuming the numerous obligations imposed by the treaty, while on the other hand it is benefitting through the burdens assumed by Germany when she affixed her signature to the terms laid down by the signatory powers jointly.

The newspaper, however, suggests that it will be necessary to enter into friendly negotiations with the United States for the adjustment of many mooted issues before normal commercial relations can be resumed. It says that among these is the question of the treatment of German property confiscated in the United States.

Suggestion is made by the Lokal-Anzeiger that news of the vote in the Senate should be "received with an ample measure of skepticism, as numerous parliamentary obstacles are yet to be overcome."

Liberal organs express the belief that the action of the Senate may materially help in enabling American financiers to take up the problem of aiding German reconstruction in a practical manner.

'NICKY' AGAIN DEFIES BANKRUPTCY COURT

CLEVELAND LAWYER NAMED

"Nicky" Arnstein, testifying yesterday in the bankruptcy proceeding instituted against him in the Federal Court, answered less than ten of 500 questions put to him by Saul S. Myers, counsel for the National Surety Company, the petitioner. Then he took a stroll down to the financial district with his lawyers, William J. Fallon and Eugene F. McGee, while Mr. Myers was preparing papers in new contempt proceedings against him.

"Nicky" was put on the stand in the morning before Deputy United States Commissioner Tallman, in the Federal Building, who presided in the bankruptcy hearing in the absence of United States Commissioner Gilchrist, who was ill.

"Under what other names are you known?" was the first question put to Arnstein by Mr. Myers.

"I refuse to answer," replied the witness, "on the ground that it might tend to incriminate me."

"There you have it right now," broke in Commissioner Tallman, in referring to Judge Knox's ruling that Arnstein did not have to answer such questions. "I can understand where that question might tend to incriminate him."

"Where have you been since Feb. 10?" was the next question, but "Nicky" refused to answer on the same grounds.

Admits Knowing Cohen.

Mr. Myers asked "Nicky" if he knew "Nick" Cohen, who also fled the city on Feb. 12 last, and who is being sought in connection with thefts of securities from brokerage houses in the financial district in the last year and a half. Arnstein refused to answer, and Mr. Fallon insisted that he did not have to do so, but Commissioner Tallman order him to reply. "Nicky" then answered in the affirmative, the first admission of the kind he had made since the beginning of his examination in the bankruptcy.

He then was asked if he had given any property of any kind to Cohen, whether he had any correspondence with him in the last five years, or if he ever had any business transactions with him. "Nicky" refused to answer.

"Do you remember going to Washington with 'Nick' Cohen about Oct. 12 last, and going with 'Joe' Gluck about the same time, and meeting David W. Sullivan in the Union station there? Did 'Joe' Gluck give you a satchel full of stolen securities in the Pennsylvania Station in this city on Oct. 12 last?" were among some of the questions that followed, but Arnstein refused to answer.

Certified In Contempt Twice.

"What property is in your control or possession now?" demanded Mr. Myers. Arnstein refused to answer, on the ground that it might incriminate him, but Commissioner Tallman told him he must answer that question, as it had a bearing on the hunt for assets. Arnstein again refused and Mr. Myers said:

"Your Honor, I ask you to certify this witness in contempt." Commissioner Tallman granted the request.

Mr. Myers, Commissioner Tallman and others interested in the bankruptcy then called on Judge Knox in his chambers in the Woolworth Building, while "Nicky" went for a stroll down to the financial district.

At 2:30 P. M. the hearing was resumed and Mr. Myers again demanded to know whether "Nicky" had any money or property under his control. Arnstein declined to answer at first, but when directed to do so by the Commissioner he admitted that he did. He was asked how much property he had under his control, and he again refused to answer, whereupon Commissioner Tallman again certified him in contempt of court. The examination was ordered to proceed, however, and Arnstein refused to say where he got the property. He also refused to reveal whether he had any bank accounts or safe deposit boxes in the last year, and was sustained by the Commissioner.

Says Strong Received "Assets."

The witness again was asked if he knew about twenty persons whose names have been connected with the bankruptcy proceeding, and he refused to answer, on the ground that such answers would incriminate him. He then was asked if he knew E. P. Strong, a lawyer of Cleveland, Ohio. He declined to answer.

"What connection has he with this matter?" broke in Commissioner Tallman.

"We say that E. P. Strong has received a large amount of assets from this man," declared Mr. Myers. "That is our contention."

Commissioner Tallman, after argument on behalf of Arnstein by Mr. Fallon, declined to force Arnstein to answer the question, and Mr. Myers then asked the witness if he knew that "Nick" Cohen was sentenced to the penitentiary in Cleveland under the name of Harry Davis. Arnstein refused to answer and also refused to say whether he knew Philip F. Kastel, who disappeared from this city several weeks ago, after he had appeared as a witness in the bankruptcy proceeding, or that he had ever given Kastel, "Eddie" Winkler and Louis Levine ("Pinkey") Druckner, sought as witnesses in the bankruptcy proceedings, any securities or money.

Soon afterward Mr. Myers announced that it was a waste of time to ask the witness any further questions in the bankruptcy until Judge Knox made a ruling on the new contempt proceeding. Commissioner Tallman said he would lay the minutes of the proceeding before Judge Knox next Friday, and

INJUNCTION ASKED FOR

The Hildick Apple Juice Company, Inc., brought suit in the Federal Court yesterday to enjoin Charles O'Connor, State Prohibition Director, and his agents from attempting to enforce the provisions of the prohibition law against the manufacture and sale of the company's product. This product, it is explained is "preserved sweet cider" which is made of pure apple juice, to which is added one-tenth of one per cent. of benzoate of soda. Then the product is placed in kegs and the like and set on sale throught the country.

Cider thus prepared, it is admitted, contains more or less than one-half of one per cent. of alcohol by volume. Prior to its transmission to air-tight receptacles there is some fermentation, but this ceases until air is admitted, whereupon the sugar content begins converting itself into alcohol. It is also admitted in the papers that prior to the Eighteenth Amendment unpreserved cider may have been used as an intoxicating beverage. Since the amendment, however, the belief is that the cider changes only into vinegar.

"Preserved sweet cider" goes through an entirely different process and under no circumstances should it be placed in the category of alcoholic drinks, the plaintiff contends, and therefore it is beyond the control of all of the authorities responsible for the enforcement of the prohibition law. The complainant has a large plant at Mount Kisco which will become valueless, it says, if the company is not permitted to continue in business.

TO BUY LAND BANK BONDS.

House Passes Measure Designed to Aid Farm Loan Financing.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The House adopted today a resolution authorizing the Treasury to buy Federal Land Bank bonds, issued against loans approved before March 1 last. Efforts to extend the measure to cover loans approved before next March was defeated, 148 to 121.

Supporters of the legislation said its enactment was necessary to finance farmers, as all loans by farm loan banks had been suspended pending litigation in the Supreme Court attacking the constitutionality of the Farm Loan act. The resolution now goes to the Senate, where it is expected to come up for early consideration.

Under the resolution the Treasury will have $64,000,000 available for the purchase of the bonds, but no statement was made in the House of the amount required to finance the loans approved prior to March.

MERCHANTS ELECT BOARD.

President Tells Association of Transportation Plans.

The Merchants' Association held its annual meeting yesterday at its headquarters in the Woolworth Building and chose the following new Directors: Michael Friedsam, Alfred E. Marling and J. Louis Schaefer, each to serve for three years. The following were re-elected: J. Crawford McCreery, William Fellowes Morgan, Lewis E. Pierson, John W. Nix and Gustav Vintschger. The Directors will elect the officers for the coming year.

William Fellowes Morgan, President, referred, in a brief address, to the transportation congestion and the efforts of the Citizens' Transportation Committee to end the tie up. "We shall do everything in our power to free the city from the menace of isolation from the rest of the world, which it could not long survive," he said. "Your officers depend upon each member of the Merchants' Association to give his full support to the movement which we have begun, regardless of the magnitude of the obstacles that may be thrown in our way. This is a fight on behalf of the people of New York City."

Should Set the Stage Properly.

Apropos of the contention of the United Waist League of America, that a proper amount of business can never be done in blouses at retail until the clerks assigned to sell them are required to wear waists themselves during business hours, comes the suggestion from the jewelry trade that it might not hurt business any if some of the retailers and their clerks were more careful about "setting the stage" by wearing some jewelry themselves. With sales less active than they have been for some time, the suggestion is regarded here as particularly timely. Experts on selling tactics contend that the psychological effect on prospective buyers of scarfpins, for instance, of seeing the salesmen's necktie bare of adornment, has lost many sales. The same thing applies to rings and to numerous other articles of the kind.

Clothing at Half Off.

Report of a large sale of children's and junior young men's clothing was heard in buying circles yesterday. The amount involved was said to be $1,000,000 and the values 50 per cent. off former prices. The previous price range was from $6.50 to $25. The goods were from stock and consisted of merchandise canceled because of belated shipment. While such a "buy" was considered an exceptionally good one and not generally obtainable, the feeling is among clothing buyers that more "bargain" cothing will appear because of cancellations of deliveries delayed through transportation difficulties.

Larger Dress Concessions.

The report that dress manufacturers, and some of the largest of them, were offering new merchandise at one-third off former prices was confirmed yesterday by the head of a large buying organization. In some cases the reductions are larger, and figures between 40 and 50 per cent. included in such offerings are cottons as well as silks. The merchandise does not consist of goods in stock but of new Summer merchandise that has not yet been cut. In this buyer's opinion, the manufacturers are awake to the fact that unless orders are taken within the next thirty days their season is over and losses will be greater than if taken now.

A View of Cottons.

In explanation of the peculiar situation that exists in cotton goods, a leading buyer pointed out how there may be a difference in values between goods in the piece and the same material cut up into garments. Where cotton goods are concerned, he explained, prices seem strong enough for the reason that they are not in oversupply. Once they are taken and cut up into garments, however, there is another story to tell. Cotions in themselves may be desirable and not overpientiful, but many classes of ready-to-wear appear to be a drug on the market. For that reason the value of piece goods put into garments depreciates.

Gray Goods Sales Slow.

Snap to demand in the local gray goods market was again made conspicuous by its absence yesterday. Print-cloth business was confined very largely to spot sales, and for this delivery 39-inch 68-72s were sold at 23½ cents, 38½-inch 64-60s at 23 cents and 35½-inch 60-48s at 21 cents. Five-yard sheetings were let out for delivery during this and next month at 18 cents. Fine-yarn cloths experienced another listless day. In the clothing styles a further drop in sateens was noted when 39-inch 64-104 4.30-yard goods were sold by second hands for May delivery at 36 cents a yard.

Afraid of Production Maximums.

While that part of the clothing trade which operates on a week work schedule has been gratified to hear of the stand taken by the union for production standards, there is some fear felt that such standards may not be altogether satisfactory in practice. The manufacturers bring up the point that when the minimum wage was adopted it meant placing the non-efficient workman on a basis with the efficient employe. In the same way it is feared that a production standard may well turn out to be a production maximum based on the output of the less efficient. Instead, therefore, of providing a means of getting a minimum amount of work from each employe, the minimum may easily become the factory maximum.

Silversmiths Fairly Busy.

While the current demand for silverware from the wholesale trade may best be described as somewhat spotty, there seems to be little to complain of so far as retail sales are concerned. With the approach of the June wedding season and well-posted men profess to see as good a business coming in the next five or six weeks as was done in the same period last year. While bar silver is down from the high point of a few months ago, it was said yesterday that the drop had not been sufficient to offset increases in other production costs. As a result prices have not been lowered. A further drop in bar silver is not looked for here in view of the Pittman act, which authorized the Treasury Department to buy 207,000,000 ounces of the metal when it got back to $1 an ounce. Being there now, the buying is expected to begin and the price of the metal thus to be stabilized.

Special Order Business Good.

Although this is the "off" season for buying for stock in the retail jewelry trade, reports from the local market tell of a fair amount of business being done here in the form of special orders. Particularly is this true of the finer pieces, such as are developed in platinum and diamonds, but it also applies more or less to the other lines. There has been a dropping off in the price of platinum, but because of the fact that high-grade platinum jewelry is made of the so-called hard metal, which contains iridium, the price of the more expensive lines of finished jewelry has not been affected adversely. Due to the scarcity and high cost of iridium, platinum containing 10 per cent. of that metal for hardening purposes is still quoted at $145 per ounce, or $100 an ounce more than just before the war. Soft platinum, on the other hand, has eased off to $115 an ounce.

Campaign Was Not a Failure.

The "Four Seasons a Year" campaign in the millinery trade, which has just closed, was far from a failure, according to a statement made yesterday by Jerome C. Mendel, Executive Director of the Retail Millinery Association of America. The campaign did exactly what it set out to do," said Mr. Mendel, "which was to keep every hat off the streets and out of the retail shops at this time of the year." He also said that the millinery sales now being held by the retail trade are furthering the "Summer Hats for Summer Wear" movement by clearing Spring goods out of the way and affording the merchants capital with which to buy Summer stock. Mr. Mendel also asserted that Saturday last was the biggest millinery day of the year so far. Particularly was this so in the flower trimmings departments, where more of this merchandise was sold than on any other single day in the last ten years. On the same day, he said, more Summer hats were sold than on any other day in the history of the trade.

Sales Without Preparation.

An argument put forward by wholesale dry goods sellers at present to strengthen their price position is that no preparation was made for the large retail sales now being held. In other words, many of the stores now holding sales were forced to such action before they were able to secure stocks of merchandise for such offerings. The inference is that if all the stores started their sales practically together, it will be necessary for them to go into the market for replacement purchases together, with the result that a repetition of the former rush in market may be expected. In opposition to this view of the situation, buying representatives feel that the largely overstocked condition of the retail stores was in itself an entirely adequate preparation for the sales now being held. Such sales, it was further explained, may start off with considerable activity, but sooner or later "peter out." Enough buying will be done, it is felt, to reduce stocks to their normal size, but not enough to make the stores rush into the market for large quantities of merchandise.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Max M. Holzer has become associated with the Brighton Dress Company, Inc., 49 West Twenty-seventh Street, according to the company's announcement. Mr. Holzer will be active in the management of the business.

A. R. Whittaker, President of A. R. Whittaker & Co., importers of cotton and linen fabrics, 28 West Twenty-sixth Street, has obtained for that concern the representation in the American market of one Swiss and two French manufacturers of exclusive cottons. He has now been abroad for three months.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Government War Bonds Fall Under Heavy Sales—Pressure to Reduce Loans.

The stock market acted yesterday as though it was standing aloof from events in the field of wholesale prices and of bank credit, waiting for the shaping of new and probably far-reaching developments. Business was duller than in any full trading day for more than a year. Quotations were inclined toward a lower level, with the more substantial movements in industrial issues classed as "inventory" stocks, representing corporations whose great scope of activity in the last two years has necessitated the upbuilding of large stores of materials or finished goods. The market was not weak, however, and final price irregularity disclosed little more than diffident operations of the professional trading element.

In the Liberty bond market, on the other hand, there was evidenced the play of forces which reached out into the merchandise markets of the Middle West, as well as into localities everywhere whose industrial undertakings have of late come under the retarding power of adverse railroad transportation. The heaviest selling of the year occurred, which took no account of investment values and represented to a large degree the liquidation of securites by corperations and individuals who need working capital and cash to replace bank loans. The movement was facilitated by rumors that the Federal Reserve Bank was contemplating an increase in the discount rate on paper secured by Government war issues from 5½ to 6 per cent. The latter factor, however, was a secondary consideration. It seemed to be more than a coincidence that a sudden great expansion of the Liberty bond and Victory note sales came immediately after the receipt of news that the cut-price campaign was making extraordinary headway at Omaha and other cities of the interior.

It is clear enough that merchants are desirous of reducing their stocks and back of this lie two explanations: first, banks are insisting upon a reduction of loans on many sorts of goods, and, second, the spread of the public movement toward economy as a protest against prices higher than the householder can stand. It hardly needs to be repeated that when borrowers at the banks find it necessary to reduce their bank accomodation they either have to raise capital by other means or cut down their holdings of products which the loans represent. Goods cannot be disposed of overnight and so capital, reduced through one means, must be replaced in part at least through another. The country is evidently approaching a new basis for doing business on a lower scale of prices and it would seem dependent to a great extent upon the untangling of railroad freight difficulties as to the length of time which will be necessary in reaching this basis. Yesterday's turnover of $28,000,000 of Government war issues was considerably more than 100 per cent. in excess of Monday's turnover. In the grain market sharp declines of corn and oats disclosed additional liquidation here and provisions also moved off.

The fall of the war bonds naturally had a depressing effect upon the entire investment market. The promising outlook of last week for additional sound railroad note issues was changed somewhat and sentiment in investment circles indicated the possibility of higher rates on forthcoming issues than the 7 and 7½ per cent. status recently prevailing. In fact, bankers interested in the proposed flotation of $25,000,000 or more Belgian Government long-term bonds mentioned an 8 per cent. coupon rate as a possible figure for the offering. The tightness of credit did not have reflection in the call money market yesterday, as the rate moved off from 7 to 6 per cent. under a light demand.

French, Belgian and Italian exchange was again strong, reflecting discussion of preferential measures in respect to the borrowings of the other allied countries from Great Britain. Francs at Paris moved against London. Sterling at New York declined 1¼ cents under dull trading.

STATE COMMISSIONS PRAISED BY THAYER

James S. Alexander, Banker, and Arthur Lyman, Boston Lawyer, Elected to Board.

President H. B. Thayer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company issued a statement after a meeting of the Directors yesterday in which he said that State Commissions had been intelligent and fair in granting rate increases and that the company had been able to increase wages and earn normal dividends with a safe margin for plant investment since the properties were returned to private control.

At the meeting James S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce and Arthur Lyman, a Boston lawyer, were elected to the board. The usual 2 per cent. quarterly dividend was declared. Mr. Thayer's statement said:

"When the Government returned the telephone properties last August the stockholders were assured of the soundness of the Bell system. They were told that there was every reason to believe that adequate rates would be granted by the State Commissions to meet the increased cost of operation, pay all fixed charges, provide the usual reserves, and continue the regular 8 per cent. dividends to the shareholders of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

"Now within ten months after the return of the properties those predictions have been fully realized. The actions of the State Commissions have been almost uniformly intelligent and fair. In nearly all cases the anticipated adjustments in rates have been made and in the few cases where action is still pending satisfactory decisions are confidently expected. Owing to our continuous policy of conservatism, the percentage necessary to be earned on the property to maintain established interest and dividend payments on the securities of the Bell system outstanding and in the hands of the public is much less than is generally found necessary in regulated business.

"We have continued to earn our accustomed dividends with a safe margin for surplus, which has been invested in plant. The revenues of the system have enabled us to increase the wages of employes in line with the increased cost of living. The work extension made necessary by the release of all business from war restrictions is well under way, in spite of the present difficulties in obtaining materials and supplies.

"Meanwhile our financing has been successfully accomplished and on such terms as give evidence of the inherent strength and vitality of the business. While the market price of telephone shares has followed, to some extent, a falling market for conservative securities, the Bell system is in a most satisfactory condition with loyal employes, reasonable revenues, a rapidly growing business and a more substantial reserve than ever before."

ATLANTIC COAST EARNINGS.

The annual report of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company for last year shows net income after the deduction of all charges and war taxes of $7,288,699. This, after the deduction of preferred dividends, was equal to $10.77 a share earned on the $67,574,400 common stock, as compared with $10.76 in the preceding year.

The Federal income account shows net income amounting to $7,218,015. Federal compensation for the year was $10,180,913, so that the Government's deficit was $2,976,900. Not considering Federal compensation the company would have earned $6.38 a share on the common as compared with $12.99 a share earned in 1918.

How Consolidated Gas Is Held.

For the first time in its history the Consolidated Gas Company has issued official figures showing how its stock is distributed. These show that the total of stockholders is now 8,275, of which 6,014 are residents of New York State and 2,265 residents of other States. Of the total number of stockholders 1,335 hold from one to nine shares each, 2,704 hold from 10 to 25 shares, 1,371 from 26 to 50 shares, 1,305 from 51 to 100 shares and 1,560 own 100 shares apiece or more. This means that 51 per cent. of the stockholders hold fewer than 100 shares each and 19 per cent. hold 100 shares each or more.

Otis Steel Co. Nets $992,862.

The first annual report of the Otis Steel Company, following its absorption of the Cleveland Furnace Company last October, shows a net available for dividends of $992,862. After preferred dividends there was a balance of $798,118, equivalent to $1.91 a share on the common. Net sales amounted to $16,286,329. Current assets exceeded current liabilities by $5,852,941 at the close of the year.

PRODUCE EXCHANGE FIGHTS BONUS BILL

RESOLUTION TO CONGRESS

Organization Favors Ample and Generous Provision for the Disabled.

The New York Produce Exchange yesterday sent telegrams to all members of Congress urging opposition to the soldiers' bonus bill on the ground that its taxation features "threaten the commercial life and prosperity of the entire country." Resolutions adopted by the members of the Exchange said:

"The New York Produce Exchange is heartily in favor of ample and generous provisions for all wounded and disabled service men. It is strongly opposed to the giving of a bonus to able-bodied service men, a majority of whom, we are convinced, do not request or desire further money payments for the patriotic service they have rendered their country.

"We are thoroughly convinced that the imposition of further burdens on the business of the country by the taxation of transactions on Stock and Produce Exchanges, or additions to the existing onerous and indefensible surtax, would constitute a serious menace to the financial and commercial welfare of the country, already staggering under a heavy burden of war taxes; therefore,

"The New York Produce Exchange records its strong opposition to the proposed general bonus distribution and to the methods of taxation proposed to provide funds therefor."

Transmitting the resolutions to the Ways and Means Committee of the House, Edward Flash, Jr., Chairman of the Exchange, wrote that they expressed the "practically unanimous sentiment of our members, who feel impelled to make their strongest representation against the proposed bill."

OTTAWA, May 18.—Canada's international trade for last month totaled $154,161,134, an increase of $32,683,172 over that for April, 1919, according to customs statistics made public here today. Imports were $98,290,535, an increase of $44,035,406, while exports were $53,356,386, an $11,132,763 decrease over April of last year. Import duties collected last month were $17,316,317, an increase over April, 1919, of $6,182,561. The decrease in exports is mainly in foodstuffs.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Dull Market.

Not in more than a year has there been such a small turnover of stocks as in yesterday's dealings on the Stock Exchange. The volume of business was 342,738 shares. To find a total below this one has to scan the records as far back as Feb. 10, 1915. On that day the turnover was 311,709 shares. The dullness then preceded the bull market of last year, and the degree of pessimism evidenced in the financial district was comparable to that which prevails now. Those who are always looking for the ray of hope point to the 1919 condition as perhaps setting a precedent which will be followed this year. But Wall Street precedent is not a safe thing on which to pin too much faith. Conditions have a way of working out just the contrary of what is many times expected. As one experienced trader put it some time ago, "when it appears that prices are to move in a certain direction it is safest to play the opposite side." This was another way of saying that things go by contraries in Wall Street.

Some Freight Congestion Problems.

It appears from reports which have been made by a majority of the individual railroads that one of the worst features of the present congestion is the fact that box cars needed in the West for the movement of the crops are tied up in the East, and open cars needed in the East for the movement of coal to the West are tied up now in that part of the country. One of the first emergency problems to be met and solved is that of moving the coal supply to the Northwest. Most of this goes by way of the Great Lakes upon which the opening of navigation has been very late this season and those who are familiar with the situation say that the shortened period for the movement of coal for that section of the country does not serve to help the situation.

Credit and the Freight Tieup.

Railroad men who have been studying the general freight congestion say that the unfortunate condition existing with box cars tied up in the East has resulted in the rapid accumulation of a huge amount of frozen credit in the grain producing sections of the country. The farmer is unable to move his grain to market, and his local bank has had to bear the burden of carrying him over the tieup period. In many instances there have been losses in grain due to the fact that producers hauled it to the country warehouses to find that they were already filled to overflowing. In many of these cases the farmer unloaded his grain on the ground and trusted to providence that the weather would be good until his grain actually started to market on the cars. In many localities bad weather has resulted in rapid depreciation of grain and some times there has been a dead loss.

A Fair Deal for the Switchmen.

While scarcely a railroad manager has had any sympathy for the outlaw railroad strikers who succeeded in bringing about the present condition on the railroad lines of the country there are several who say that the most important thing to be done now is to get the railroad switchmen back to work. In the opinion of some of the more conservative managers it is not fair for the switchmen to have to risk their lives every day for less pay than that received by the labor which washes passenger car windows. These managers believe that some of the unfair advances which have been granted to some classes of railroad labor should be scaled down and that in instances where advances have not been in proportion with the general railroad wage scale increase things should be evened up. The heads of several of the big railroads, it is understood, mean to do what they can to give the railroad switchmen a fair deal.

Not Unanimous on Emergency Power.

There is some difference of opinion among railroad executives regarding the invoking of emergency powers by the Interstate Commerce Commission as provided in the transportation act. In more than one office yesterday the opinion was expressed that the use of such unusual power was not good railroading and that while it might aid for a short time it would also result in a great deal of confusion. Those who feel this way about it pin their faith to action by the Railway Labor Wage Board, which they believe should report its findings without delay. Regarding the date for an announcement of these findings some expressed the opinion that they would be made public within a few days. In other quarters it was the feeling that the board would not announce its rulings for three weeks or a month at least.

Pennsylvania at New Low.

Pennsylvania Railroad shares sold off yesterday to 39¾, a new low record. The first quotation at 39¾ occurred in the morning after the stock had opened off fractionally at 39¾ and before any really heavy selling of the issue became apparent. In fact, the pressure on the stock was at no time particularly heavy, the aggregate turnover for the day being only 3,200 shares—less than half of the previous day's business. After the low sale was made in the morning there was somewhat of a rally to 39¾, the previous closing quotation, but the stock eased off again to the low at the close. Even in the panic of 1907 Pennsylvania stock showed a better undertone than at present, as there were no quotations then at less than 51 and a fraction. The previous low this year was 39¾ on May 3. The high for the current year was 45½. Back in 1902 the stock sold in the neighborhood of 85.

Sugar Stocks Advance.

The sugar stocks and the shares of the companies which manufacture substitutes for sugar moved into higher ground yesterday. The advance in American Beet Sugar and American Sugar Refining, however, were made on exchanges of only a few hundred shares of stock. Manati Sugar gained more than 2 points and Corn Products and United States Food Products, the principal sugar substitute shares, showed fractional net advances at the close. The big earnings of the companies and the shortage of sugar are always bull arguments when these shares move up.

Narrow Price Changes.

The course of prices yesterday was such as to try the patience of even those who were shooting for the proverbial eighth. The net result in the majority of issues was a fractional change after a narrow price swing. Here and there some issues made advances or recessions amounting to several points, but they came largely in the issues which are inactive from the speculative viewpoint.

The Equipment Companies.

The equipment companies are reaching a point similar to that occupied by the steel companies, namely, that there is more business on the books than capacity will permit of accepting for delivery during the next six months. There is probably not one of the equipment companies which has not business enough in sight from domestic sources to keep plants busy for a year and a half. The lack of buying by the railroads during the period of Federal control has built up a latent demand for equipment which will find vent when the credit for extensive buying is available. In the meantime the imperative demands are of huge proportions. It has been estimated, for instance in the matter of rails, that the carriers will take the capacity output of the country for the next two years and that even then replacement and new demands will not have been fully supplied. The same condition obtains with relation to locomotives and cars, and hence the big business in sight for the equipment companies. Just what will happen in the case of foreign demands for equipment is a matter of doubt. The domestic roads will undoubtedly have the first call for a long time to come, but enough equipment may be diverted abroad to hold the trade which is being built up there.

New Bonds for Old

Almost every institution and investor has securities which are sound but have depreciated in market value. This situaton creates a problem which can be solved best by arranging exchanges for issues of bonds or secured notes recently placed on the market.

The Amortization of Preferred Stocks

It is not generally recognized that some preferred stocks have been issued under provisions which specify that a certain percentage of the stock outstanding must be purchased annually by the issuing corporations. In other words, such an arrangement is practically the same as sinking funds which retire mortgage obligations.

Write for our recommendations of Preferred Stocks with such provisions, yielding over 8%.

BELGIANS MAY FLOAT LONG TERM BONDS

Plan Issue as Part of Arrangements for $50,000,000 Credit Due June 30.

DISCUSS $25,000,000 OFFER

Amount and Exact Rate of Interest Undetermined—Consider 8 Per Cent Yield.

Arrangements for taking care of the $50,000,000 Belgian acceptance credit which falls due on June 30, it was learned yesterday, are nearing completion, and it is possible that a formal announcement of the plans which the bankers and the financial representatives of Belgium are working out will be made within a few days. There was a formal meeting of the so-called "Belgian group" of bankers on Friday, and since then representatives of the group have been in consultation with the Belgian Finance Mission. One conference of this sort was held yesterday.

The idea which most members of the banking group favor is the flotation of an issue of $25,000,000 Belgian Government long-term bonds, at a high rate of interest. Some difference of opinion obtains as to what the coupon rate should be on such an issue, a few bankers believing that a 6 per cent. coupon rate, offered on a basis to yield upward of 8 per cent., would make sufficient appeal to the investing public. But others, and it is understood they constitute the majority, feel that at the present time the investing public is being attracted more by a high coupon rate, and for this reason are advocating that the coupon be made at the same rate as the offering price. In other words, if it is decided to issue the bonds on a basis to yield the investor 8 per cent., the idea is to give the coupon a face value of 8 per cent. and to offer the bonds at par, rather than to make the face value of the interest only 6 per cent. and offer the bonds at a discount.

This, however, is a matter still to be decided. The exact amount of the interest has not been determined, nor has the amount of the loan finally been fixed. A majority believe that not more than $25,000,000 of foreign bonds could be marketed readily just now, but there are some who have been so favorably impressed by the reports which the Belgian representatives have presented that they believe $50,000,000 could be disposed of. With the fixing of the German indemnity and the speeding up of arrangements for collecting the amount from Germany, Belgian credit has improved. Under the terms of the Peace Treaty, Belgium is to have priority in indemnity receipts, and this, added to the fact that Belgium has already done much to get herself back on a productive pre-war basis, has made her position, financially and economically, much stronger than it was supposed to be a short time ago.

PORT'S NEW DANGER STIRS BUSINESS MEN

HOLDS LABOR RESPONSIBLE

A. W. Williams of Exporters Asserts That Reports of Diversions Are Exaggerated.

The threatened loss by the Port of New York of a large part of its export trade because of the rail tieup has stirred business men and commercial oragnisations here to action looking toward the safeguarding of the city's port supremacy. The situation has been taken up by the Citizens' Transportation Committee, of which Alfred E. Marling is President, and by commercial organisations independently.

"We certainly do not look with any complacency to our shipping companies going to other cities and carrying with them their export trade," Mr. Marling said when he was asked to comment on the statements of shipping men that they had been obliged to use other ports and might continue to do so. "We must work and see that New York maintains its supremacy as a shipping port. It would be a catastrophe if we were to lose our fair share of the trade of the country.

"Given fair conditions, our merchants will make every effort to keep the port's business maintained. It is a fair surmise that most of our troubles are due to labor disturbances. Every merchant should be interested in taking care of the city and this committee will certainly do its part to keep the business here."

About 1,000 consignments a day are being diverted from this city to other ports because of the railroad congestion, E. J. Donohue, chief clerk of the Marine Department of the Custom House, said. This was from 15 to 20 per cent. of the total business, Mr. Donohue estimated. There were ninety-six coastwise ships entering the port of New York last month as compared with 177 in April, 1919. Of these vessels in foreign trade there were about ninety less vessels clearing than the total entering. Normally, Mr. Donohue said, the number of vessels entering and clearing is the same.

The inability of ship companies to fill their ships was said by Mr. Donohue to be a serious condition. Many vessels are leaving with only 50 per cent. of their normal cargo. He said that shipping men figured that the operating expenses were paid by a 65 per cent. cargo and that profits come from the remainder.

The United States Steel Products Company with offices at 30 Church St., which does a large export business, is shipping only 8 per cent. of the normal business which it does through New York, Mr. Donohue asserted. The remaining 92 per cent. is being diverted to other ports.

A representative of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, at 11 Broadway, which does an immense export trade, said that in the last six weeks nine-tenths of the business had been diverted to Philadelphia, from which export shipments weer made. Normally all of the businses is done through New York. "New York must wake up if she wants to keep the business," it was said at the company's offices. "The system of handling freight here is antiquated."

A. W. Williams, Assistant Secretary of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, declared that the assertions of shipping men and big business representatives with relations to the diversion of New York's export business were exaggerated. "Business is falling off here," said Mr. Williams, "but I do not believe matters are as bad as they are painted. I do not believe that there is any serious danger of New York's losing the business permanently, because other cities are not equipped to handle the business."

Officials of the Maritime Exchange also asserted that the permanent loss of a large part of the export trade was impossible, because they had not the facilities, such as heavy cranes, for unloading big cargoes.

CONFLICT IN REPORTS ON NITRATE INQUIRY

FORMER BLAME PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Conflicting majority and minority reports resulting from months of investigation by a special House Committee of wartime expenditures on air nitrate projects by the Government were debated for an hour in the House today and then laid aside temporarily for other business.

The only action taken was on a point of order raised by Representative Garrett, Democrat, of Tennessee, minority member of the investigation Committee, against one phase of the majority report by Representative Graham, Republican, of Illinois. Mr. Garrett contended that in recommending private operation under lease of the Muscle Shoals project as a fertilizer plant the majority report was invading the functions of another committee of the House having before it bills dealing directly with this subject. His objection was overruled by Speaker Gillett.

The majority report of the Republicans on the committee condemned the Government's entire wartime nitrate program and charged reckless waste and extravagance. The other by Democrats defended the program and charged partisan bias by the majority.

Republicans laid blame for the nitrate program, entailing an expenditure of about $116,000,000 at the door of President Wilson, with Bernard M. Baruch as the moving spirit of the war time project, although Representative Garrett, speaking for the minority, declared that the President acted on the suggestion of Secretary Baker and that both could assume responsibility without thought of apology.

Charging the Air Nitrates Corporation, builders of the Muscle Shoals plant, with failure to perform its contract, the majority recommended to Congress that no further sums be paid it on account, and that civil suits be instituted for recovery and that the whole question of pay be thrashed out in the court of claims. It also was recommended that the Government pursue such remedies as might be decided by the Attorney General.

The principal recommendation by the majority related to the big Muscle Shoals plant, costing $70,000,000. Being too valuable to scrap, the majority recommended that it be leased and converted into a fertilizer plant for the sale of products direct to farmers with the right of the Government to take it over in time of threatened war.

The majority charge that the nitrate program cost the Government $116,194,974, that no nitrates were produced prior to the armistice and that it contributed nothing toward winning the war.

The minority replied that if war expenditures were to be judged by the unexpected ends of hostilities three-fourths of the nation's efforts were useless, that 3,000,000 men more than were necessary were called to the colors and that Congress made itself "ridiculous" in passing the last draft act.

The Sheffield plant, with homes and clubs for officers costing $12,000,000, was characterized by the majority as "a colossal blunder and waste of public funds." The minority held the plant was an experiment and necessary, but agreed that too much was spent for homes.

The cost plus system was condemned by the majority. The minority said it was the only practicable way of getting speed and action.

Excessive waste of labor and material "amounting under ordinary circumstances to criminality" was charged by the majority. Admitting waste, the minority declared it was not willful.

Frank S. Washburn, President of the Air Nitrates Corporation, issued a statement today in which he said that the corporation made no profits whatever from the job as 85 per cent. of its fee was taken by taxes and the remaining 15 per cent. went to expenses which the Government could not pay. He attacked the methods of the majority of the Investigating Committee.

"Persons criticised were forbidden to cross-examine," said Mr. Washburn. "Reports by detectives, unsworn, unquestioned and in one instance unnamed, were admitted as evidence. The critical witnesses unearthed by Chairman Graham included disgruntled carpenters, mess hall stewards, men without experience or qualifications, an army officer cashiered for drunkenness, a defaulter and a detective under indictment for crime in Alabama. No court would have listened to such rubbish. Before Mr. Graham ever investigated Muscle Shoals he unsparingly condemned every one connected with the work."

HOWELLS ESTATE $165,000.

Will Gives $1,000 and Watch Bought in 1863 to Grandson.

The will of William Dean Howells, who died on May 11, was filed yesterday. It distributes an estate of $75,000 in real estate and $90,000 in personal property. The residuary estate is divided equally between John Mead Howells, son, of 50 East Fifty-eighth Street, and Mildred Howells, daughter, of 130 West Fifty-seventh Street.

Mr. Howells made his will in 1910, by which he gave $6,000 to his sister, Aurelia H. Howard of Ottawa, Canada, but by a codicil on Feb. 15, 1918, he left her $250 "with my love." Similar bequests went to Anne T. Howells of Ottawa and Samuel D. Howells of Washington, D. C. William White Howells, his grandson, got $1,000 and a gold watch "which my wife and I bought at 1863 with our joint earnings."

CALL A CAUCUS ON BONUS.

Republicans Will Confer on Measure Tonight.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—House Republicans were notified today by Representative Towner, Iowa, Chairman of the Party Conference Committee, that the soldier relief legislation would be considered at a party caucus to be held tomorrow night.

A tax on deals in grain futures, proposed as part of the soldier relief legislation, would disrupt the grain markets, representatives of the Chicago Board of Trade and the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce told the House Ways and Means Committee today. Conditions in the grain trade, they said, would resemble those now existing as to the country's sugar supply.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, May 18.—The offering at the International Fur Auction today of 1,800 Russian sables attracted Siberian fur shippers to watch the progress of the sale. The finest quality, Barguzin sables, sold up to $700; the Yakutsky variety up to $400; the Kamachatka up to $300, and the Manchurian, from $75 to $100. A small lot of Japanese sable, of lower quality than Russian, brought $22. The prices represented a decline of 12½ per cent. from the February sale level.

There were also nine pelts of sea otter, once an important item of the fur trade, but now very rare, and used chiefly to make collars for men's coats. Two of the nine that were sold brought, together, $1,700.

The total of the day's sales was estimated by officials of the Exchange, at $770,000. They also announced a revised total for Monday's sale of $1,500,000. Wednesday's session will be devoted to the sale of 90,000 red fox skins, and the auction will continue till the 28th inst.

RELEASE PRINCE'S JEWELS.

William of Wied and Other Germans Regain £800,000 in Gems.

STOCKHOLM, May 17.—Jewels valued at £800,000, the property of Prince William of Wied and other German noblemen, which were seized by Swedish customs authorities last August, when they were brought into this country by airplane, were released today.

Forfeiture of the gems was claimed, on the ground that they had been smuggled into Sweden, but the court held that the charge of smuggling had not been proved.

Persons to whom the gems were consigned were fined 50 kronen by the court, however, because it had been shown the importation of the jewels was irregular.

The United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, it was learned last night, is negotiating with the Mutual Life Insurance Company for the purchase of an office building at the southwest corner of Liberty and William Streets, to be used, after remodelling, as its New York home. The Executive Committee of the Fidelity concern at a meeting in Baltimore yesterday ratified the proposed purchase. Charles F. Peabody, President of the Mutual, said here that the sale had not been consummated.

It was reported that the fidelity company would spend about $1,000,000 in acquiring the property and converting it for its use. The site adjoins the home office of the Mutual.

VETOES WATER POWER BILL.

Gov. Smith Opposes Niagara and Erie Project for Private Development

ALBANY, May 18.—Governor Smith today vetoed the bill which would have permitted diversion of the waters of Lake Erie, Niagara River and other boundary waters for private development.

"My position in reference to the development of the water power of the State is well known," he said. "I am in favor of the development of this great natural resource by the State for the benefit of the people. I am opposed to its development by individuals or corporations as a private enterprise. I am opposed to the extension to individuals or corporations of any greater rights in the development of the water power of the State than they now possess by law.

"I am credibly informed that there are in existence some corporations practically defunct, but which have never been legally terminated, which were incorporated for the purpose of taking water from these boundary waters for purposes far remote from that of developing hydraulic or hydro-electric power. This act, if it became law, would, in my opinion, so vitalize such practically defunct corporations as to permit them to exercise the right to take water for hydraulic or hydro-electric power purposes where they now have only the right to take it for entirely different purposes.

"There is throughout the State a widespread public demand for the enactment of laws which will give to the people themselves the benefits that come from the great natural resources owned by them. Not only would they be dissatisfied with anything short of the adoption of that policy, but I am reasonably certain that they would severely condemn any attempt to make possible further private development, on the ground that private development benefits only the individuals lucky enough to secure the grants or franchises."

ASK MRS. SHONTS TO REPLY.

Mrs. Thomas's Attorney Seeks Answer to General Release Claim.

Clarence J. Shearn, attorney for Mrs. Amanda C. Thomas, made an application before Supreme Court Justice Tierney yesterday to compel Mrs. Millia D. Shonts, widow of Theodore P. Shonts, to reply to certain allegations in the answer of Mrs. Thomas to the $1,000,000 suit by Mrs. Shonts for the alienation of her husband's affections.

The defence to which Mrs. Thomas wants a reply filed is her contention that Mrs. Shonts signed in 1917 a general release of all claims against Mrs. Thomas as one of the considerations for the execution of the separation agreement between Mr. and Mrs. Shonts. No opposition to the application was made yesterday, and it is expected the reply will be ordered filed.

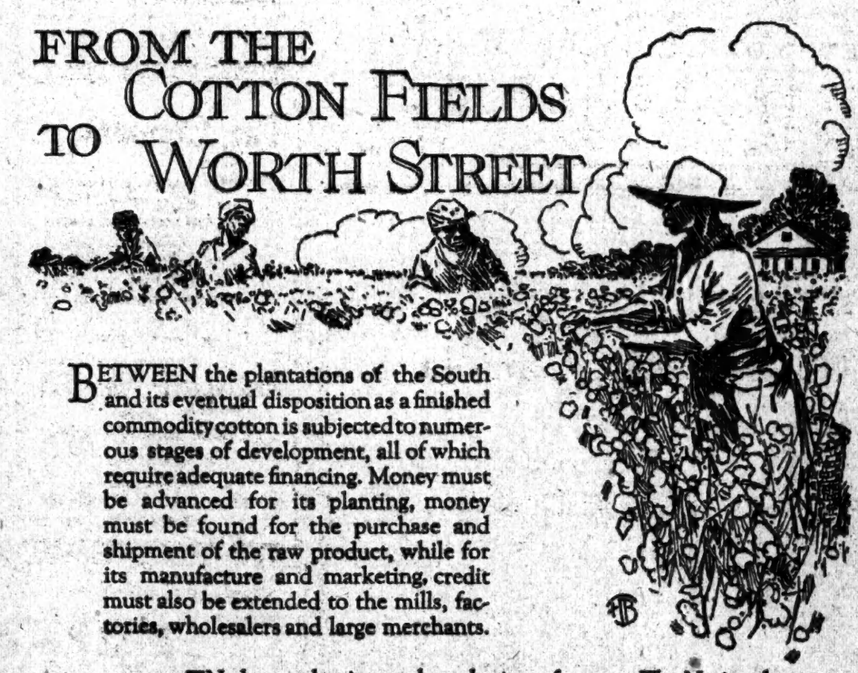
FROM THE COTTON FIELDS TO WORTH STREET



BETWEEN the plantations of the South and its eventual disposition as a finished commodity cotton is subjected to numerous stages of development, all of which require adequate financing. Money must be advanced for its planting, money must be found for the purchase and shipment of the raw product, while for its manufacture and marketing, credit must also be extended to the mills, factories, wholesalers and large merchants.

IN the production and marketing of cotton, The National Park Bank has long been intimately interested. It has enjoyed the unique position of assisting in the financing of every phase through which this great staple passes from the time the seeds are placed in the ground until it eventually finds its way as finished fabric to the Worth and Leonard Street section, New York's great cotton center as well as to other parts of America and Europe. In promoting the interests of the cotton industry in this country this bank has worked for a period of sixty-four years. It is known in the trade because of its strength and service.

MAY AND JULY SOAR IN COTTON MARKET

ADVANCE 75 AND 84 POINTS

Mad Scramble for These Contracts Turns Whole List Up, After Depressing Opening.

A mad scramble for May and July contracts, which developed early in the afternoon after a morning in which there had been more offerings than bids and during which time the market had sold off easily, turned yesterday's cotton market up sharply and before the recovery ended May was at 42.15, for a net advance of 75 points, and July was at 39.34, a net gain of 84 points. This scramble for the near months was brought about by two factors—an oversold technical position, and, the more pertinent, a new fear that there will be a shortage of spot cotton available for the old crop deliveries. In a sense, it is apprehension over a possible repetition of what happened in December, and again in March, when the expiring option became extremely scarce and shorts were forced to cover at whatever prices they could.

There were fewer notices in May started yesterday than had been expected, and what were put out soon were stopped by the spot houses. The contract stock of inspected cotton here in warehouses, however, is far greater than it has been at any previous time this Spring, totalling 7,703 bales. In March, when the spot month shorts were squeezed badly, the contract stocks were down around 1,200 bales, and the situation was quite different, so far as externals were concerned. But at the present time it, as some in the trade fear, the local contract stocks are controled by spot bulls, who will refuse to release them in quantity for delivery against sales, then there is not much change in the position of the shorts, and fear that this might be the case doubtless led many to buy in May and July yesterday.

In the early trading the market was listless. A lower level at Liverpool and reports of somewhat better weather conditions over the belt induced Wall Street and some local trade houses to sell in the forenoon. This sagging put the market down 30 to 35 points on the average before the turn came. Reports concerning the credit situation were not hopeful and the unsettled condition of the stock market, together with the extreme weakness of Liberty bonds, all helped depress cotton values.

But with the sharp recovery and advance in the old crop months in the afternoon the whole list turned up and at the high prices for the late trading the new crop months were up 20 to 30 points, net. A closing reaction, though, lost most of these net gains, so that at the end the market for new months was up only 1 to 13 points.

$1,260,000 LEASE ON FIFTH AVENUE

FOR A 42-YEAR PERIOD

Old Hotel St. Stephens, on East Eleventh Street, Will be Altered for Business Use.

Fifth Avenue property facing Madison Square Park figured in a big leasing transaction yesterday, whereby the Schulte Realty Company added another centrally located improvement to its extensive realty holdings.

These interests have leased from the Eugene A. Hoffman estate, through Spear & Co., the eleven-story store, office and apartment building at 310 Fifth Avenue, running through to 1,132 Broadway, with frontages respectively of 26.11 and 30.2 feet and an irregular depth.

The lease is for a term of twenty-one years, with one renewal for a similar period, at a rental of $30,000 a year, indicating an aggregate return for the forty-two years of $1,260,000.

The store and first floor will be used by the Mutual Profit Sharing Coupon Corporation, which is identified with the Schulte cigar stores organization. Several floors in the buildings now used as apartments will be altered into offices at an estimated cost of $50,000.

The tall building now on the site replaced the old Dean Hoffman homestead some years ago, and was occupied by the Mark Cross Company prior to its removal to Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street.

Business Will Replace Hotel.

Further downtown, the Hotel St. Stephens, at 46 to 52 East Eleventh Street, a landmark of the University Place section, has been leased by the estate of A. S. Rosenberg to the Bonar, Phelps Company, manufacturers of straw hats, which plans to convert the hotel into a high-grade mercantile structure. It is a six-story building, on a plot 81 by 95, adjoining the Hotel Albert, at the southeast corner of University Place and Eleventh Street, leased last year to a company controlled by Sheriff David H. Knott and others. It was used as an annex to the Albert until a few years ago.

The leasing company, which is now located at 42 East Tenth Street, takes the property for twenty years, and will pay an aggregate rental of about $500,000.

Commercial Building Sales.

Joseph P. Day sold for the Eno estate the four-story building at 325 West Broadway, on a lot 23 by 100. Mr. Day also sold for the Hudson & Manhattan Railway Company to the Robert A. Keasby Company, dealers in asbestos, now on West Street, the five-story building at 695 Greenwich Street and 290 West Tenth Street, southeast corner, on a lot fronting 25 feet on Greenwich Street and 82 feet on Tenth Street. The property was to have been sold at auction yesterday by Mr. Day in connection with five adjoining parcels.

The Charles F. Noyes Company sold to Harry Aronson 54 Howard Street, northeast corner of Mercer Street, a modern five-story loft, 30 by 60, carrying possession Feb. 1, 1921.

The Broadway-John Street Corporation, Elias A. Cohen, President, bought from Malvina H. Carroll and Edith C. Smith the northwest corner of Fulton and Pearl Streets, 20 by 70, and held at $75,000. Pease & Elliman were the brokers.

SALES IN THE BRONX.

Joseph Paterno Adds to His Riverdale Plottage.

Joseph Paterno, who purchased recently the handsome estate of Judge Nash Rockwood at the northeast corner of Independence Avenue and 252d Street, Riverdale-on-the-Hudson, enlarged his property through the purchase of a plot of lots adjoining, at the corner of Palisade and River Avenues, from William P. Dixon and Henry P. Murray. The Robert P. Farley Organization was the broker.

The Bonhag estate and Dora Orth sold the two four-story new law apartment houses 2,378 and 2,382 Bathgate Avenue, on plots 38.9 by 90, being part of the old Lorillard estate and held at $72,000. The purchaser, Sarah A. Sutter, will hold for investment. The seller acquired the property seven years ago through Fred Oppenheimer, broker, who negotiated the present sale.

The Delafield estate has sold Plot 9 in Block 16, Waldo Avenue, Fieldston, to Carroll D. Smith of New York City, who plans the erection of a residence. George Howe was the broker.

Joseph G. Abramson bought from the Sovis Holding Corporation 2902 Southern Boulevard, a five-story apartment house, on plot 42 by 107, with stores. The property rents for $13,500 and was held at $85,000. Leitner, Breher & Leitner were the brokers.

Harry H. Cohen sold for a Mr. Howe to Hedwig Fibel 943 and 947 Sheridan Avenue, two four-story houses, on plot 75 by 68, and 2,482 Tiebout Avenue, 37.6 by 67. The same broker resold the Sheridan Avenue houses for Mrs. Fibel to two clients. He also sold 2,065 Southern Boulevard, a five-story apartment house, 37.6 by 100.

Other Manhattan Deals.

William D. Kilpatrick resold the three-story building at 390 Bleecker Street, between Perry and West Eleventh Streets, 19 by 50, to A. Rutkiewicz, who will occupy for his laundry business.

Lloyd H. Smith, Jr., purchased, through Joseph P. Day, the vacant plot, 50 by 100, on the south side of Ninety-ninth Street, 200 feet east of Fifth Avenue. The adjoining 50 feet to the east was purchased at auction yesterday by Mr. Smith for $35,000. It is understood that an improvement is planned for the entire site.

Queens Borough Transactions.

The Rickett-Brown Realty Company sold to George Fink a two-story dwelling on Ditmars Avenue, between Merchant Street and Goodrich Street, Arleigh, for $11,000.

$200,000 IN CLOTH SEIZED WITH SLOOP

$30,000 SILK ALSO FOUND

Two Young Men on Auto Truck in West Forty-seventh Street Held on Larceny Charge.

An auxiliary sloop, believed by the police to have been the headquarters of a band of "river pirates" and containing $200,000 of woolen cloth in bales, was seized at the foot of West Thirty-fifth Street yesterday by the Marine Division of the Police Department, following the recovery of three bales of raw silk, worth $30,000, by three detectives in front of a garage at 237 West Forty-seventh Street.

Walter H. Weil, 25, a chauffeur, of 249 East Fifty-second Street, and Irving Golden, 23, of 255 West 112th Street, were taken to Police Headquarters and held on a tentative charge of grand larceny. The police believe they are on the trail of a band which makes a specialty of stealing merchandise from railroads, either at the terminals or in transit, and whose thefts are believed to aggregate millions of dollars.

Weil was said to have been under surveillance for several days by Detectives Kane, Armstrong and Moriarty, who have been on a special assignment as a result of many robberies in the textile district. The three detectives, who were in an automobile, picked up Weil, who was with Golden on the seat of a small motor truck, at Forty-second Street and Eighth Avenue. Golden is said to have told the detectives that Weil had hired him to carry some merchandise from the pier at West Thirty-fifth Street.

A message was sent to Harbor A at the Battery and a police launch was detailed to block possible escape of the sloop while the detectives approached from the land side. There was no one aboard, but a search revealed many bales of woolen cloth suitable for overcoats and valued at $200,000.

The sloop, which was of the ordinary fishing type, was driven by an auxiliary motor, in which an explosion apparently had taken place recently. The cockpit, where the motor was installed, was charred by fire. It is supposed that, with the motor out of commission, those on the sloop put in at the nearest convenient pier.

The cloth, which was in good condition, except for dampness, bore no marks of ownership. It was taken to police headquarters. The crew of the police launch took possession of the sloop, which they said they recognized as one they had suspected of being used for illicit purposes. A search is now being made for the crew of the sloop.

ROB MANHATTAN THEATRE.

Burglars entered the box office of the Manhattan Opera House, Thirty-fourth Street, west of Eighth Avenue, early Monday morning, opened the safe and stole $3,000. The safe was not damaged, indicating to the police that the thieves knew the combination.

The $3,000 was said to be the receipts of a performance at the theatre Sunday night. It is believed that the burglars were in the audience and remained after the theatre was locked up. Captain McQueeny of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station said yesterday that detectives were working on the theory that some one who knew the combination was implicated in the burglary.

His successor is to be Darwin R. James, Jr., who has been Vice President and Chairman of the board. Mr. White succeeded Seth Low, first President of the organization.

How MUCH are your SLEEPING COUPONS costing you in LOST INTEREST?

A few steps—a few minutes with the doorkeeper—a few minutes going through your securities in the safe deposit box—a few minutes given to cashing the coupons—a few minutes returning to your office—and a few dollars of interest would be saved.

But the larger question confronts you, "Is the time worth the interest?"

There is good reason why uncashed coupons are allowed to sleep in safe deposit. The cashing takes valuable time.

Have you ever seriously considered the time and money-saving features of a safe-keeping trust?

From the moment your securities are placed in safe-keeping with the Mercantile, under a letter of instructions, all routine, so far as you are concerned, automatically ceases.

You need not worry about uncashed coupons. You need not wonder whether your ownership certificates are correctly prepared. You need not concern yourself about your bonds, your mortgage interest, your dividend checks.

These and other details, including tax reports, are handled with businesslike precision, once the securities are deposited with us for safe-keeping, under a letter of instructions.

Thrift Carnival May 15

A NEW World's Record for the hat business was hung up on this spot in Philadelphia last Saturday, May 15th. My Philadelphia store broke the World's Record for the number of hat sales, in any one hat store, in any one day. Of course, I'm proud of this record and this store, because the Largest Hat Store in the World didn't grow by accident, and I've got the same hats, at the same price, right here in New York.

Consider this announcement as my invitation to be present at the Thrift Carnival at my store when the Weather Man gives the Signal for Straws. I want to show you the "Straw" that broke the back of the H. C. L. and broke all records on the opening day of the Straw Hat Season.

P. S.—A new Thrift Station is now opened at 723 Sixth Avenue, between 41st and 42d Streets, New York City. We will celebrate the Birthday Party of another Truly Warner Store. I think it is the prettiest little hat store in New York City. Come in and look us over without any obligation to buy.
